Postal Talks Cut Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — An official with the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Thursday that all on-going consultation with post office management has been cut off.

Frank Walden, western region director of the union, said the action is being taken because the post office continues to violate the collective agreement that is to be renegotiated this summer.

Walden said management is taking a survey on Vancouver Island to determine whether the post office can be shut down Saturdays.

It could become an experiment for the whole country, he added. "But the union wasn't told about it."

Walden disclosed that the post office started holding "think-tank" sessions last November in Montebello near Ottawa.

"We told them to stuff it because it was a bunch of garbage. All they want to do is sit down and have a few drinks."

Walden said the next top-level session on industrial democracy, to be held next month in Red Deer, Alta., will be ignored.

The union issued a statement which said the only meetings it will attend will be grievance hearings and the coming national negotiations at which the main issue is technological change.

MONDAY MEETING DEMANDED

Amin Won't Let Americans Leave

Times News Services

Ida Amin today barred the 200 Americans in Uganda from leaving the country and ordered them to meet him in a group with lists of their possessions on Monday. The Uganda dictator also claimed that 5,000 U.S. Marines were massed off Africa and rebuked President Carter for "false" comments on Uganda.

Carter expressed strong concern over the situation in the African nation and the White House said he was "monitoring it closely."

The U.S. State Department called in the Ugandan charge d'affaires in Washington for "a full explanation" of Amin's order.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said, "it is safe to presume the president will do whatever is necessary and proper to save American lives."

He answered with "no comment" questions whether Carter planned to send in any rescue missions to Uganda.

Asked whether Carter had given any military orders, Powell said, "I can't give you any details on operational orders, nor can I tell you that there have been any other than routine orders."

A spokesman for the West German embassy in Kampala, which has handled U.S. interests in Uganda since the United States closed its embassy in 1973, said Americans who were telephoning were being advised not to worry, to stay indoors and not to provoke Ugandan officials.

Acting Ugandan ambassador S.M. Cherebet said later that he had assured assistant secretary of state William Shaufele that Amin was simply calling the Americans together to reassure them.

$1B TRAVEL DEFICIT

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians travelling abroad last year spent $3.12 billion, almost 23 per cent more than in 1975, Statistics Canada said Thursday.

Visitors from the United States and other countries spent $1.94 billion here.

The result was a record deficit on travel of $1.18 billion.

An increase in the numbers of Canadians visiting the U.S. and a decrease in U.S. visitors to Canada resulted in a deficit with the U.S. of $610 million.

Region Gets The Boot On Islands

Planning and zoning functions for B.C.'s Gulf Islands will be taken away from regional districts and given to the Islands Trust under a bill introduced in the legislature today.

The Islands Trust Amendment Act slashes drastically the responsibilities of the regional directors from the Gulf Islands and increases dramatically the power of the Islands Trust, which many people believed would be cut out altogether by the Social Credit government.

Immediate response from Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region board and its director from the outer Gulf Islands, is that the bill puts island residents in the same spot Indians were in when they were dumped on reserves.

The change strips power from elected regional representatives and puts control of land use into the hands of people appointed by the government, he said.

It means land control can be dealt with "in star chamber fashion," he said.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said today the bill is an indication of his confidence in the Islands Trust and notification that the organization will be around for a long time.

The trust, established by the NDP in 1974, was designed to give Islanders more control over the unique rural nature of the Gulf Islands.

The trust is comprised of three general trustees appointed by the provincial government and two elected trustees from each of the 13 major islands designated in the act.

The 13 major islands and numerous small islands cov-

SPORTS CAR was sliced in two early today when vehicle slammed into power pole in the 3900-block Carey. Its driver, Edward Higgs, 34, of 720 Vernon, is reported in fair condition in Victoria General. LILLICO MUST EXPLAIN

Dick Lillico, the B.C. government's public relations man in London, England, has been ordered to tell all he knows about his Grizzly Valley gas shares to the judicial inquiry under way in Vancouver.

In a telegram to Lillico Thursday, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, told him to "set out in affidavit form" any knowledge he has of trading in Grizzly Valley shares.

At the inquiry hearing earlier this week, fired ministerial adviser Arthur Weeks, the central figure in the Grizzly Valley controversy, said he had told Lillico that he (Weeks) had bought shares in one of the companies involved in the $100 million Grizzly Valley pipeline and that Lillico subsequently bought shares.

McCarthy, who appointed Lillico to his $22,200 a year job in July, 1976, said she talked to him late Wednesday night and he confirmed he had bought shares in one of the Grizzly Valley companies.

So far four government employees have lost their jobs for trading in Grizzly Valley gas shares, but McCarthy said the she would not dismiss Lillico.

But now, she said, any information about such trading is the responsibility of the inquiry.

"I don't see that it serves the interests of the people of B.C. to fire people at this point in time," McCarthy said.

Lillico, McCarthy said, is in a different position from the others who lost their jobs. Two of those including Weeks, were personal aides to Economic Development Minister Don Phillips and two were employees of the B.C. Petroleum Corp.

Any other government employees found to be trading in Grizzly Valley shares will also be considered the responsibility of the inquiry.

We don't want to go on a witchhunt," she said.

McCarthy said Lillico confirmed only that he had bought shares in one of the Grizzly Valley companies.

Lillico works out of B.C. House in London with Bob Strachan, former NDP cabinet minister who is B.C. agent-general.

Ferry Foot Fares Cut; Vehicle Hike Forecast

Fare cuts announced today by B.C. Ferries will give foot passengers off-peak rides for half-fare for seven months of the year. There is no change in vehicle rates.

General Manager Charles Gallagher said he foresees higher rates in future for vehicle traffic, but not before 1978.

Starting March 1, adult foot passengers travelling, Mondays through Thursdays and Saturdays between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen or between Departure Bay Horseshoe Bay will pay $2 instead of $4 each way and children will pay $1 instead of $2. The cut off age for children has been reduced to 11 from 14.

A car and driver will continue to pay $14 each way, the year-round fare on the two main ferry routes. However, passengers in a car will get the reduced fare.

Gallagher said normal fares will apply on Fridays, Sundays and holidays and at all times during the five-month summer travel season from May 1 to Sept. 30.

Fare reductions also apply to other Lower Mainland and Gulf Island ferry routes.

The standard fare for the Sunshine Coast remains the same as on the mainland — Vancouver Island routes with the same Monday-Thursday and Saturday reductions from October through April.

Gallagher explained the Gulf Island service gets only a one-way reduction because fares were already 50 per cent lower for north-bound travel.

The $10 vehicle rate with $4 for the driver remains for southbound traffic between

WEATHER

Tonight, Saturday: Rainy Periods

DOLLAR SLIPS

The Canadian dollar in terms of U.S. funds fell to the lowest point in three months today on the New York market while in Europe gold prices began climbing.

The dollar fell to the 95 (U.S.) cents level, nearly matching the low reached after the election of the Quebec separatist party.

Analysts in New York said the latest flurry of dollar sales was caused by forecast Thursday by Robert MacIntosh, executive vice president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, that the dollar would fall to 90 U.S.cents this year

But the U.S. analysts said the slump also comes against a background of increasing general nervousness this week about the outlook for the currency.

In Europe, meanwhile, speculators and investors appear to be returning to gold markets, dealers say, for the first time in more than two years.

Steady buying orders were received all this week, and few holders of gold were interested in selling, London dealers said.

That drove the price of bullion up $4.50 an ounce to $141.125 (U.S.) Thursday in Zurich, the world's biggest gold-trading centre. The price rose more than $3.50 to $140.125 in London, the second-biggest market.

B.C. Paying Consultant $50 an Hour

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, saying it was "an unusual case," admitted Thursday that a senior civil servant is receiving a $50-an-hour consulting fee in addition to his yearly salary.

Mrs. McCarthy told the legislature during question period that Richard Higgins was appointed last month to review the Public Service Labor Relations Act. Legislation enacted three years ago based on a report prepared by Higgins.

She said Higgins was available to conduct the review, for which he is receiving the $50-an-hour, because he is on pre-retirement leave.

Under such leave, a civil servant receives his full salary. Higgins' wage is $34,500 a year.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace, who raised the issue in the legislature, said in an interview Mrs. McCarthy is "practising double funding in her own backyard."

Dr. Wallace was making reference to a memo revealed last week in which Mrs. McCarthy is quoted as being against double funding.

The memo urges all cabinet ministers to hire persons from the private sector rather than from universities when consulting work is necessary.

YOU'LL PAY MORE WHATEVER YOU DO

British Columbians face price hikes galore March 1, and if you want to drown your sorrows, that's going to cost more, too.

If you are a drinker or a smoker, be prepared to lay out a few extra bucks for life's little pleasures starting Tuesday.

The price of beer goes up, with a dozen bottles costing $4.35 including tax and deposit, from the current $4.07. Beer by the glass is going up from 40 to 45 cents.

Imperial Tobacco is bumping its wholesale price for cigarettes which means a retail price increase of about two cents on a package of 20, which now sells for 75 cents.

Rothman's of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. says it is considering a similar increase.

And if you want to complain in writing, that will cost you more too. The cost of mailing a letter increases to 12 cents from 10 cents on March 1.

Staying home will cost more too, because the cost of lighting and heating that home goes up. Domestic electricity rates jump by up to 14.7 per cent and natural gas rates by up to 22.1 per cent. The increases start March 1 but won't show up on B.C. Hydro bills until May 1.

Prices of gasoline, diesel oil and home heating fuel go up by at least 2.3 cents a gallon because of federal pricing policies for crude oil.

Federal sales tax is also being increased by an undetermined amount and the retail price could be boosted even more by oil companies and service stations.

The price of watching cablevision has already gone up 75 cents in Victoria to $5.25 and viewers in Vancouver face an identical increase on March 1.

And it all comes at a time when large cash payments are due for ICBC insurance.

Those considering flying away from it all are also out of luck.

Newspapers Miss Payroll, Slump in Duncan Blamed

The Cowichan Leader and Pictorial missed its weekly payroll Thursday, blaming the economic slump in Duncan for its shortage of cash.

Andy Bigg, publisher of both papers, said the $6,700 weekly payroll was missed because some Duncan businesses have been unusually slow in paying their bills.

Some of the employees may be paid today, he added.

The two newspapers are owned by Westpres Publications of Winnipeg. The company has indicated it will not forward funds to meet the payroll and local staff must redouble their efforts to bring in accounts receivable, despite the economic problems of the community.

Bigg said advertising had been at normal levels during January and February but it appeared retail sales were down and companies were scrambling for funds in anticipation of possible work stoppages during labor negotiations this summer.

Bigg said he was acting on orders from Winnipeg in not meeting the payroll and said employees would be paid as soon as more funds were generated through accounts receivable. Some employees would be paid today. He declined to comment further.

At least six of the 20 employees indicated they will look for work elsewhere unless they are paid by noon Saturday.

GAIN A LOSS

As far as handicapped persons go, the provincial government's much touted GAIN program should be spelled LOSS.

PM Backs Attack on CBC

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau defended the right of cabinet ministers today to attack the French-language CBC for airing what he described as "lousy . . . biased" stories that promote Quebec separatism.

And he congratulated Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet for offering CBC President A. W. Johnson a list of Radio-Canada employees — the French-language service of the government-owned corporation — whom he considers advocates of Quebec independence.

The prime minister, under pointed questioning by former NDP leader T.C. Douglas and Gordon Fairweather (PC — Fundy Royal), said a number of government MPs have a "very great fear" that Radio-Canada employees are "propagating separatism."

"I'm not at all offended that they think so, and say so," the prime minister said.

Later, outside the House, Maurice Dupras, parliamentary secretary to Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie, called for loyalty tests for anyone working for a Crown corporation such as the CBC.

"There should be a loyalty test to the country," Mr. Dupras said.

Mr. Douglas told reporters the Trudeau government only fuels the Quebec independence movement if it follows through threats to fire alleged separatists in the CBC.

"You will make martyrs out of those people," Mr. Douglas said.

"If there is any way to make French-speaking Canadians turn separatist it is to tell them that any supporter of the Parti Quebecois is going to be fired," he said.

His heated response to opposition MPs was the latest development in a growing controversy over whether the government has a right to interfere in the operation of the CBC if it feels the cor-

B.C. Nurses Threaten Walkout

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Provincial government nurses will serve 72-hour strike notice unless the Government Employee Relations Bureau agrees by 10 a.m. Monday to submit a contract dispute to binding arbitration.

Nurses spokesman Jerry Miller said today a telegram outlining the position of the 2,600 registered and psychiatric nurses was sent to the bureau Thursday night.

Miller said the nurses do not want to resort to strike action which would jeopardize patients, but are being forced into that position by the government.

The nurses voted 89 per cent in favor of strike action and 91 per cent against the government's final offer. Miller said 91 per cent of those in the bargaining unit voted.

Miller said Mike Davison, the government's chief negotiator, said earlier he would not agree to binding arbitration because at that time the nurses had not voted on the government's offer.

The nurses have registered their overwhelming disatisfaction and believe the matter should be settled by arbitration and without any inconvenience to the public, Miller said.

The nurses staff all the public health units in B.C. as well as eight major psychiatric and rehabilitation hospitals, including Glendale Hospital in Saanich.

The bureau has offered the 1,100 registered nurses and 1,500 psychiatric nurses a two-year contract with a 10-per-cent increase in salary.

Miller says the nurses have asked for 14 per cent over the two years, which he says is the minimum allowed under federal guidelines, plus a reduction in the number of working days per year.

He said other government employees work 233 days a year while the nurses have to be on the job 243 days. They want the 10-day difference removed.

The nurses, whose contracts expired October 31, 1975, are represented by the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association of B.C.

Transair, PWA Talk

CALGARY (CP) — Pacific Western Airlines (PWA) and Transair Ltd. have been holding discussions about the possibility of a merger of the two airlines, PWA Chairman Rod McDaniels said today.

But Mr. McDaniels said there was no specific proposal for merger before the PWA board of directors scheduled to meet here later today.

He said Winnipeg-based Transair had initiated a series of the discussions with PWA president Rhys Eyton during the last month "on the financial viability of regional airlines."

PWA, owned by the Alberta government, is Canada's most profitable regional carrier, while Transair, the other major Prairie regional airlines, has had recent financial difficulties.

Transair serves regional routes from Northern Ontario to Alberta and north into the eastern Arctic, while PWA serves Alberta, British Columbia and the western Arctic.

COULDN'T LOVE THEM, GEORGE LEFT THEM . . .

GLOUCESTER, England (AP) — George Winter was given a tough choice: Take four teenage wives or get out of the country. He got out of the country.

Winter, 38, a British transport manager working in Saudi Arabia, said he received the offer as a reward for rescuing two Arab businessmen from their crashed plane in the Saudi Arabian desert.

In gratitude, the two men presented him with their four daughters, aged 14 to 16.

"I was told that if I refused to take them, it would be a gross insult, punishable by prison or worse," said Winter after he arrived safe and sound at home here.

"My employers told me to get out of the country to avoid trouble and they flew me back to Britain."

Winter admitted he had been tempted by the offer, but how could he explain them to his wife and their five children, he asked?

Accused Soviet Spy Sent Packing Home

MONTREAL (CP) — A Soviet exchange scientist accused of trying to buy classified documents from a fellow scientist at the National Research Council (NRC) in Ottawa was expelled from Canada Thursday.

RCMP agents escorted Lev Griforeyvich Khvostantsev aboard an Aeroflot flight which left Mirabel Airport for Moscow at 9:45 p.m. EST.

Security men managed to keep the 39-year-old physicist out of sight of reporters and photographers as he was hustled onto the plane. Khvostantsev is the second Russian to be expelled from Canada in three months.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said the scientist, who came to Canada Nov. 17, was arrested Wednesday night after he tried unsuccessfully to buy classified documents from an identified NRC scientist.

The foreign-born scientist reported Khvostantsev's actions to his superiors, who contacted the RCMP.

Jamieson told reporters that a strong protest had been lodged with the Soviet embassy and warned that this kind of action might endanger relations between the two countries.

The deportation order said Khvostantsev had "become a person who . . . there are reasonable grounds to believe . . is likely to engage in espionage, sabotage or any subversive activity directed against Canada and detrimental to the security of Canada." 4

Soviet ambassador Nicolai Makarov said from his Ottawa office Thursday that the external affairs department had allowed him to confer with the scientist Wednesday night and that Khvostantsev had "categorically denied the charges."

Asked if the Soviet Union intended to issue a diplomatic note regarding the affair, he said he had spoken to Moscow and "it was decided to first investigate the incident."

RCMP Supt. John Bentham refused to say what kind of classified information Khvostantsev had tried to buy and what amount of money he had offered the NRC scientist.

Supt. Bentham said in Ottawa the physicist made two payments to the NRC scientist in exchange for unclassified documents pertaining to thermoelectricity. He would not say how much money was involved, but stressed that Khvostantsev had not obtained any classified information.

The expulsion comes about a month after five Cubans, including three diplomats, were ordered out of Canada for allegedly operating a spy school at the Cuban consulate here.

PNE-City Settle

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city and the Pacific National Exhibition have reached a compromise agreement on a long-standing rental dispute.

Under terms of the agreement, formally announced Thursday by Mayor Jack Volrich and the PNE president, Erwin Swangard, the PNE will pay the city $500,000 as a settlement for rent the city claims is owning for the years 1975 and 1976.

Tendermen Set Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herring tendermen in the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union have voted by over 90 per cent in favor of strike action.

A strike deadline has been set for 2 p.m. Sunday unless agreement is reached with the Fisheries Association of British Columbia.

There is no current contract between the union and the association.

Area Awarded $306,000 For 145 New Student Jobs

The Victoria area has been awarded $306,000 to create 145 new jobs for local students this summer, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy announced today.

The federal cash will be administered through Canada Manpower under a new program called Young Canada Works.

Purdy said the students will be hired through Student Manpower, when the office opens in April. An announcement of the place and date of opening will be made later.

The program, which is replacing the Local Initiatives Program, involves community jobs such as environment improvement and fire protection. Projects are organized through service clubs, student councils and other organizations.

The Victoria-Oak Bay area will get $177,000 for 84 jobs while Esquimalt-Saanich will get $129,000 for 61 jobs.

The grants are in addition to the $456,000 coming to the Victoria-Saanich area to create 76 adult jobs through Canada Works program. These jobs, which also are replacing the LIP program, were announced Feb. 11 and applications for work are being handled through the regular Canada Manpower office. However, persons on welfare or unemployment insurance are given priority for the jobs under Canada Works.

All young people are eligible, although university and college students will have the best chance as many of the projects get under way May 2.

Those in senior high school years will be given priority for any remaining jobs after the university hiring is complete.

Purdy said that while in many cases LIP jobs were related to "doing your own thing," the jobs offered through Young Canada Works will all be in activities that clearly are of benefit to the community.

A total of 21,000 students across Canada will be employed under the program which has a total funding of $30 million.

A total of 77 jobs will be created in the Nanaimo-Cowichan area with a $161,000 grant and additional 100 jobs will be created in Comox-Alberni with a grant of $211,000.

Funds are allocated on the basis of population and unemployment levels.

TRUST PLANS

ered by the trust fall within the jurisdiction of seven regional districts, including the Capital Region District.

Curtis said one of the major complaints since the trust was established is that the islands have become "over-governed."

For example, he said, to get a piece of property rezoned a Gulf Islands resident must first go through the approval process of the regional district and then go through the same process with the Island Trust.

Curtis said the amendment simply cuts the regional districts out of that process.

The amendment will make little difference in the cost of government to taxpayers on the islands, he said. Money previously levied for planning and zoning functions for the islands will now be transferred to the Islands Trust, amendment will be accepted rather than the regional districts.

Curtis said he hopes the by the regional district, although he hinted that he knew he was in for a fight from the Capital Region Board.

The current chairman of the trust is Marc Holmes from Salt Spring Island and the other two general trustees are Nelder Boulton, of Gabriola Island, and John Gaines, of Saturna.

Campbell said the government's three appointed trustees are sole custodians for the numerous smaller islands which do not fall within one of the 13 trust jurisdictions.

"It's a proper star chamber as far as the affairs of the unspecified islands are concerned," he said, adding that he, as elected representative for the outer Gulf Islands, has never been consulted or informed by the Trust of any changes made concerning such islands in his electoral area.

the weather

B.C. weather is continuing its swing towards normal. A very seasonal westerly flow across the Pacific will direct a series of disturbances onto the coast giving rain and showers into the weekend. With seasonable temperatures throughout the Interior the precipitation will be in the form of snow. The ridge which gave B.C. the warm dry weather through most of February is not too far away, and is even now trying to reestablish itself over the province. It seems that the strong westerly flow will prevail for now, but that with its three months' training in domination of B.C. weather the ridge should know exactly what to do come July.

City Buys Land, CP Deal Denied

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria city council Thursday approveved the purchase of a $550,000 property adjacent to the Crystal Garden site amid emphatic denials that the deal will aid the CPR's convention centre proposal.

Mayor Mike Young said there is no such intention behind the acquisition of the property, which had been offered for sale by Canadian Pacific Hotels in a telephone call from Toronto earlier this week.

He denied there had been any private negotiations involving certain members of city council and company officials prior to Tuesday's phone call, which he received just a few minutes before conucil's weekly caucus meeting.

Young said the sale offer was made because CP Hotels knew the city was interested in the site of the old steam laundry at the corner of Douglas and Humboldt.

He had been told the company could not "forestall" the site's disposal any longer, had taken the matter to caucus and obtained preliminary approval for the purchase.

He challenged aldermen to argue that there was any other sequence of events: "If anyone doesn't think that is what occurred I would like you to say so."

The mayor's comments followed a remark by Ald. Murray Glazier that "the town is rife with rumors of all sorts of deals."

Glazier, who had voted against the the purchase at Tuesday's in-camera meeting, said he was still unable to support the formal motion Thursday because there had been little explanation as to why the property was needed.

Ald. Ron McKenzie sided with Glazier, although he admitted that on Tuesday he supported the motion.

"But certain things have happened in the interim," he added. "I have not been made fully aware of the background arrangements . . . across the street specifically."

(The latter comment was an obvious reference to CPR's tentative plans to build a convention centre by extending the Empress Hotel's Crystal Ballroom. Some aldermen speculated earlier this year that the city might complement such a development by building a parking structure on the other side of Douglas).

Young stressed, however, that CP Hotels are "looking at their own development on their own site," and said the company has no interest in the former steam laundry property.

But it had received offers for the land and was not prepared to wait indefinitely before selling it.

Other aldermen indicated that more than one offer to purchase the property had come from the private sector. Ald. John Hayes said at one time there was a deal for CP Hotels to sell it to "a developer in town who has an atrocious reputation for building horrible buildings."

Ald. Bill Tindall said it was "very vital" that the city acquire the site and consolidate virtually the entire Douglas - Blanshard - Humboldt - Belleville block in public ownership, regardless of what future development occurs there.

He also rejected suggestions that there had been "backroom deals going on."

In all aspects of council business there are preliminary dicusssions before specific items and recommendations are brought forward to committee stage, he said, and there is no reason to "bring forward details that are purely speculative."

Ald. Bob Wright agreed that briefing every council member on business which was being explored in a tentative way would be an unwieldy, time-consuming procedure.

But such explanations failed to satisfy McKenzie, who maintained that in the CPR land sale affair "only certain select people were picked out" for direct involvement while others were left in the dark.

He asked that council members be informed of sensitive negotiations as they develop, "rather than have them dropped on us at the 11th hour."

Young replied that he could give no such assurance.

Only Glazier and McKenzie opposed the motion to acquire the property, with funds which had been committed toward the restoration of the Crystal Garden building.

After the meeting Hayes told reporters the move does not mean the city is abandoning any hope of proceeding with the restoration project.

"Quite the contrary," he added, pointing out that the consolidation of the adjoining land would make the scheme more feasible.

He said he is not concerned about the city's sidetracking the necessary funds into a land purchase, noting the provincial government has yet to commit itself to helping with the Crystal project.

80 Busted After Bugs

Police in B.C. tapped 91 telephones and bugged 17 rooms last year, according to figures released Thursday by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

The figures were contained in the annual report of the Protection of Privacy Act, tabled in the legislature by Gardom.

The attorney-general also tabled the annual report for 1975 and a report for six months of 1974, when the legislation came into effect.

The 1976 report says 80 persons were arrested whose identity became known to police as a result of the buggings.

The average period for which bugging authorizations were given was 35.5 days, with an average renewal of 36 hours. Only five authorizations were for more than 60 days.

Criminal proceedings incorporating evidence obtained by electronic surveillance numbered six, of which five resulted in convictions.

Fifty-two cases relied on information received from the taps, but the evidence was not introduced in court.

Use of electronic surveillance under the act was down from 1975, according to the reports, and "cannot be attributed to any specific factor."

"The main point is that it is still being used as an effective tool in the fight to control major crime in the province," the 1976 report says.

The 1975 report shows a total of 207 instances of taps and buggings. with 49 instances in the last half of 1974.

The 1976 report concludes: "some difficulties still arise with the use of the privacy act. These include supply of manpower and funds, specifically in cases of lengthy investigations and with delays in proceedings."

All Sides Rap Widow Cut-Off

Times News Services

OTTAWA — MP's from the three major political parties urged Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde on Thursday to end the government practice of cutting off spouse's allownaces when a person's husband of wife dies.

Liberal, New Democratic and Progressive Conservative MPs called the practice discriminatory, inhumane, grossly unfair and an unwarranted hardship.

The demands came in the Commons health, welfare and social affairs committee.

In turn, Lalonde rejected the protest as a method of "trying to bring the pension age down to 60 by the back door." Under current law the spouse of an old-age pensioner may claim a spouse's allowance if he or she is not eligible for an old-age pension or a guaranteed income supplement.

Old-age pensions are available to any person aged 65 or over, regardles on income, who meets certain residency requirements.

The pensioners spouse, aged 60 to 64, while not eligible for a pension, may collect a spouse's allowance depending on the couple's joint income.

However, when the pensioner dies, the spouse can no longer collect the allowance, and most must turn to welfare programs operated by the provinces.

Meanwhile, Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde told the committee the federal government is seeking an agreement that would free thousands of people in Canada from making mandatory payments to the United States social security fund.

The legislation, which would tie old age security pension benefits to the number of years a person has lived in Canada, must still get final Commons and Senate approval and royal assent.

Because it provides partial pension payments, unlike current legislation, it opens the way for reciprocal agreements with foreign countries.

Lalonde said he hopes the U.S. Congress will pass legislation soon to allow the American government to make a social securtiy agreement with Canada.

A pension official told the committee that even without the U.S. legislation, it is likely that an interim agreement will be made.

Herb Gray (L — Windsor West) said thousands of people in Canada have to make both Canadian and U.S. social security payments because they work for U.S.-controlled or -owned companies, are the children of U.S. citizens or have dual citizenship.

Lalonde told Gray that until the special agreement is made with the U.S. "there will unfortunately be cases of double coverage with double contributions."

Under the proposed agreement, the person would contribute to and receive full social security benefits from both Canada and the U.S. depending on how long he or she has lived in either country.

PAYING $122,000 MORE 'GOOD DEAL'

A 4.5-acre property which the city of Victoria sold to the provincial government nearly three years ago for $190,000 is coming back into city ownership — for $312,000.

After city council approved the purchase of the property at Mount Stephen and Ryan on Thursday, housing committee chairman Ald. John Hayes told reporters the transaction is a "good deal" for the city because the actual value of the land is now much higher.

"We are buying it back for the amount we paid for it plus carrying cost," he said.

Hayes said it makes more sense for the city to control the site's development rather than the province.

Some proposals for comprehensive development of the property have already been received from developers but council has not decided specifically what to do with the land.

Hayes pointed out that the lots are already serviced, adding: "Some may well be sold separately as single-family lots."

Oily Inconsistency

There's no law saying politics must be consistent, but we find it hard to comprehend the stand taken by the New Democratic Party on the question of oil pollution and the related matters of pipelines and supertankers.

This week, the party vigorously opposed an amendment to the Pollution Control Act, introduced by Environment Minister Jim Nielsen, which would allow his department to conscript people to help with oil pollution clean-up tasks. It's similar to statutes which give foresters authority to order ablebodied individuals to help put out forest fires in an emergency.

For example, Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) called it "a piece of typical Social Credit cosmetic legislation" and does nothing to deal with pollution prevention.

Rosemary Brown (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) said: "It's a fantasy bill . . . it's not real . . . it's a figment of his imagination because he's saying you can control pollution. You have to prevent pollution."

The party's environment critic, Bob Skelly (NDP—Alberni) said the government should take a firm position on oil pollution and eliminate all tanker traffic on the coast. Nielsen, he added, should be sacked from his job.

The member for Cowichan-Malahat, Barbara Wallace, said the amendment was only "token" and "inadequate . . . a sham."

Nielsen gets no praise from this corner for his handling of the environment portfolio; he betrays not the slightest awareness of what he should be doing in the job, i.e. fighting for environmental preservation. Instead, he seems mostly interested in greasing the ways for those who would pave over everything in sight.

But how concerned is the official opposition on the issue of oil pollution? The NDP's stand is blurry and ambiguous, and it's hard to balance the harsh words of this week's debate on Nielsen's amendment with earlier public positions taken by the NDP.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett always says he is opposed to the Kitimat oil pipeline, but says if it is built and his party is returned to government the pipeline will be heavily taxed and the government will require 15 per cent of the oil passing through for its own refinery.

The refinery is an idea that goes back several years. It's an integral part of NDP economic policy, and the party's defeat only suspended the proposal. Barrett says if re-elected the NDP would build it in the Interior at Merritt or Ashcroft.

The oil companies with refineries now operating in B.C. say there is already excess refinery capacity, and will be for years to come, and that another major refinery is unnecessary. Naturally, the private oil companies will say something along those lines. They do not welcome the idea of a government-owned refinery competing with them, perhaps given special advantages.

But that's not the point. The main question is: where will the oil come from to run the government refinery? As premier, Barrett talked about getting it from Alberta, a rather remote possibility. What other sources are there? Alaska and offshore supplies. And either means supertankers coming down the coast, supertankers which NDP environment critic Skelly wants completely eliminated from B.C.

The party is opposed to the Kitimat pipeline, but now ties it to a proposed government oil refinery.

The NDP can't have it both ways. It can't throw up its hand in shock and disgust at the prospect of supertankers piling up on the rocks of B.C. but hang onto a policy proposal which requires tanker traffic and makes oil spills inevitable.

A government oil refinery may or may not be a good thing. Federally, Canada has PetroCan (limited to exploration and development, but it's a short step to refining and retailing), Mexico has a nationalized oil industry, Pemex, and the British government controls BP, one of the world's larger petroleum concerns.

But when the NDP takes an extreme position on the prevention of oil pollution which calls for the banning of tankers on the coast, while at the same time clings to a proposal for a large scale government refinery which inevitably will have to be supplied by tankers, a certain inconsistency is evident. It fosters some considerable amount of skepticism. Its outrage at tankers and oil pollution is sincere enough, but we wonder if its commitment is any deeper than a layer of Alaskan crude on Kitimat Arm?

Free Speech

Demonstrations on university campuses are not unusual though they are rather uncommon these days. In the tradition of the activist 1960s about 50 people demonstrated at the University of British Columbia last Friday, to uphold the right to free speech of Allen Soroka, a UBC law librarian.

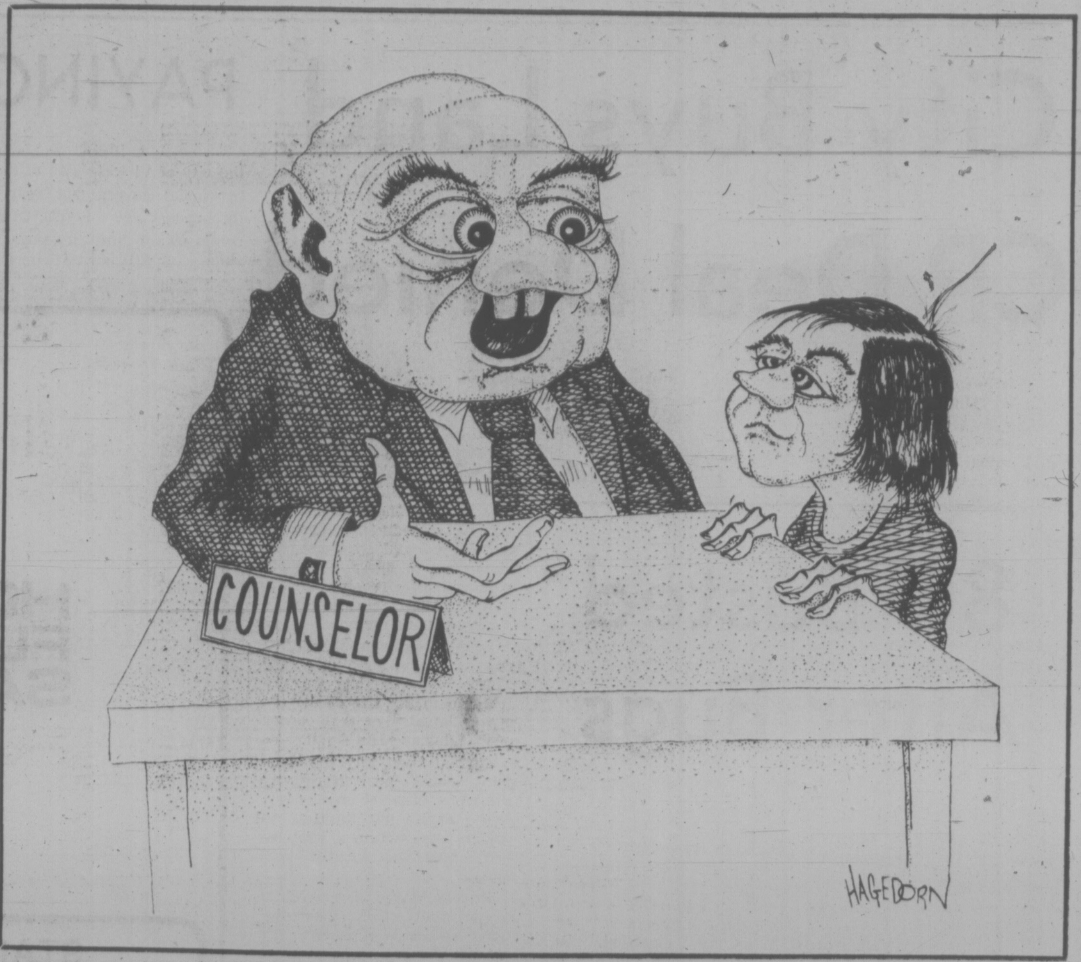
They chanted "Hands off Al Soroka" ouside the office of UBC president Doug Kenny, who has threatened to dismiss Soroka. The reason? Because he helped disrupt speeches last fall at UBC by a South African politician.

Soroka claims he is being persecuted because of his politics. He is a member of the far-left Communist Party of Canada (Marxist-Leninist) not to be confused with the traditional Moscow-line Communist Party of Canada.

What a topsy-turvy world UBC has become when four dozen students will rally to defend the right of a radical extremist to shout down an equally radical reactionary from South Africa and call it a rally in the cause of free speech!

There is only the tiniest difference between Soroka's attempts to shut up someone he disagreed with, and what goes on in South Africa much more often. And that is in South Africa, suppression of free speech has the sanction of the state.

Thank the bill of rights and English common law, that has not come to pass in Canada. Yet. If the crazy illogic of the Sorokas ever gains sway, you can be sure it will.



". . . the principal says he's willing to drop the bullying bust if you cop a plea for ordinary misbehavior which is good for one to five detentions and time off if you keep your nose clean . . ."

Defending Human Rights

WASHINGTON — It is more important than ever for President Jimmy Carter to continue to express his support for human rights, now that the Soviet Union has implicitly rebuked him and suggested that "the little heap" of Soviet dissidents "exist(s) only because they are supported, paid and praised by the west."

In fact, of course, "the little heap" existed right through the years when American presidents and secretaries of state maintained stony silence on human rights, not only in the Soviet Union but virtually everywhere else. And given the apparent character and courage of the Soviet dissidents, no doubt they would continue their struggle even if Carter, too, fell silent.

Can't Use Army

That he should not do so is particularly important, after the Soviet response, in order to underline his and the country's commitment to human rights. Carter is under no illusion, however, and no American should be, that he actually can do much to help the dissidents or to alter political and social conditions within the Soviet Union.

"I can't go in with armed forces and try to change the internal mechanism of the Soviet government," the president said the other day. He knows that isn't the point anyway. The point is that the United States is at last holding up for all the world to see its highest value and its greatest promise — the standard of human freedom.

Holding that standard high doesn't require the United States to invade nations, overthrow governments, assassinate leading adversaries or police the world. It requires, first and indispensibly, a commitment to maintain the letter and the spirit of freedom in this country; and second, unwavering moral support for the principles of freedom everywhere. The words and deeds of Americans would then reinforce instead of mock each other, as has too often been the case in the past.

If that is the course he intends to pursue, Carter must avoid at least three pitfalls. He must not let his stand for freedom be subject to what Henry Kissinger called "linkage" — the resolution of one issue depending on progress toward the resolution of another. Carter need not keep silence on human rights in order to get an arms limitation treaty, for example, since the latter is a question of both Soviet and American vital interests, hardly subject to whether or not the two countries admire each other's political systems.

Carter must also calculate his course so as neither to encourage in this country, nor to create among Soviet leaders, a fear of the sort of "roll back communism" spirit that used to flourish in the 1950s. He is not waging a liberation campaign, he is not trying to subvert or overthrow the Soviet government, he is not, it is to be devoutly hoped, letting the Central Intelligence Agency meddle in any way with internal Soviet affairs.

Carter must also avoid the appearance of absolving in this country's allies — Chile, for example, or the Philippines — the kind of human rights abuses he might deplore in the Soviet Union or Eastern Europe.

Little Heap

Obviously, Carter has not set an easy course for himself. Conventional diplomatic processes may be somewhat upset for a while, and no concrete results or gains may ever be certainly scored. But holding up the standard of freedom is never easy, in this country or the world and the gains are never those of the battlefield or conference table.

They are in the hearts of men and women everywhere — not just in the Soviet Union, and not just that "little heap" that holds its own banner so steadfastly.

Tacky Show

On Jan. 26, I received an invitation from the national museums of Canada, via P.O. special delivery (70 cents postage, 10 cents postage R.S.V.P. — $1 total cost is my guess). Not only did this seem an exorbitant expenditure, but the format was so lacking in visual merit as to put one to sleep far past the time of the opening!

I did not attend the opening for this reason — but I did attempt to view the museumobile at a later time.

I must say the exhibit surpassed my wildest expectations. Where the invitation had commanded my attention enough to read it, the exhibit itself immediately dazzled my sensibilities, causing the dry heaves and a fortunately temporary comatose state. I quickly gathered my senses, not wanting to steal the show — so to speak.

My ensuing examination of the exhibits was made quite slowly and methodically because of my debilitated state, so I can't be accused of being the critic that left the show early.

To be brief, it is my feeling that "Atlantic Canada" is a visual horror show, a taxpayer's nightmare, totally lacking in redeeming features. Except perhaps a powerful ability to evoke the deepest sympathy from this observer for the unfortunate human beings who were faced with the misguided project of attempting to cram a shipload of - - - - into three trucks (not even bad enough to be called kitsch!).

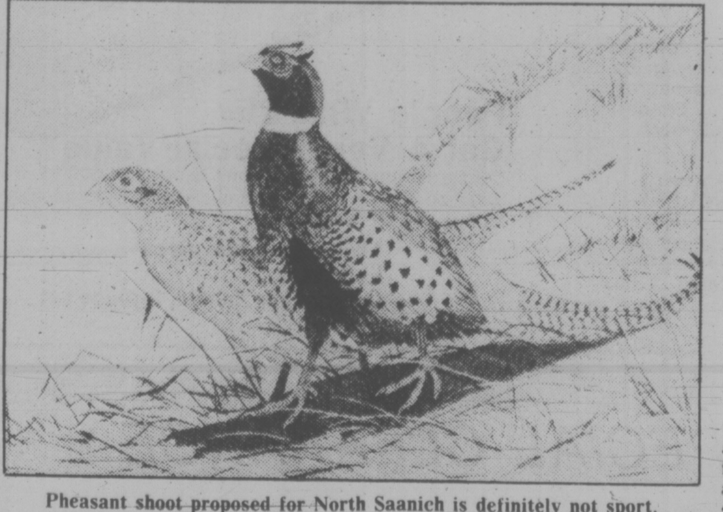
Truly a tacky insult to a beautiful part of our country!—L. C., Victoria.

Karsh Pictures

Sixteen or so years ago Malak Karsh took a series of pictures in Beacon Hill Park and some included my four-year-old daughter feeding the ducks. There was snow I think that winter, but in any case I would greatly appreciate any information from your readers who may have publications with these photos in the park.

Mr. Karsh gave me his card and since it had the name Malak on it I was greatly surprised when a young man addressed him as Mr. Karsh. He explained Yosuf is his brother.

I have been looking for the Victoria series ever since with no luck. Mr. Karsh said at the time they would appear in some form and perhaps someone has seen the pictures. What jogged my memory was the Canadian Geographical Journal (December, 1974) I happened across in which his work appears. — H. F. Leggett, 948 Lyall Street.



Pheasant shoot proposed for North Saanich is definitely not sport.

Extreme Cruelty

May I through your columns make strong protest against the proposal to set up "recreational pheasant shooting" at Mr. Aylard's 300-acre property known at Brackenhurst Farm on Wain Road?

The pheasants he intends to buy from a Nanaimo breeder are hand-reared and have been fed throughout their lives by human hands. This means they are not only overweight but lack musclepower. To release such birds for sport shooting is a monstrous act of cruelty.

The birds cannot fly more than a few hundred feet before dropping exhausted to the ground. Furthermore, being captive-reared from birth they are totally incapable of foraging for their own food. They will die of starvation.

It has been suggested that any who escape will improve populations of wild pheasants. This is nonsense. Birds wounded by shot will die a slow death. Any who escape will die of predation or starvation long before they could breed.

Ald. Owen Philp of North Saanich supported the application, saying publicly (and repeated to me personally) that he considers it preferable to do so as a form of recreation than to support a symphony. This statement reveals Mr. Philp not only as a philistine but as a man devoid of humanity.

I have had many years' experience rehabilitating injured or orphaned wild animals and speak with authority on the subject. I have also witnessed the sickening and inhumane procedures at field dog trials where captive-reared birds such as are now proposed for use by Mr. Aylard have tried to evade their tormentors only to fall exhausted after attempting to fly — sometimes no more than across a small field.

I am delighted to learn that Recreation Minister Sam Bawlf has ordered an investigation. Mr. Aylard must be prevented from perpetrating this act of extreme cruelty.—J. Ward Harris, 4491 Prospect Lake Road.

Pheasant Shoot

North Saanich Ald. Owen Philp succinctly summed up the insensitivity of persons favoring the abhorrent idea of a pheasant shoot when he said: "I would find more recreational value in this than in supporting a symphony." Anyone who could get their recreational kicks out of taking a life (not requiring it as food) is certainly deaf as well as blind to beauty.

Brickbats to the North Saanich aldermen in favor of the proposal and a posy to Sam Bawlf for stalling it. Let's hope he makes the stall stick.—Audrey Johnson, 2229 Arbutus Road.

Houseboats

As a houseboat dweller, I was most interested to read your recent article on float homes (Houseboaters Happy Despite Gov't Indifference, Feb. 19). However, there are two severe inaccuracies in your report.

1. You state that all houseboats have marine toilets which discharge directly into the sea. This is not true. Most of the houseboats here have either holding tanks or flow through treatment devices which process the effluent, discharging pure water only into the sea.

Those who do not have holding tanks or treatment devices have the use of shore-based washrooms which discharge into the main sewer.

2. You also state that we do not pay taxes. The marina is taxed and those taxes are reflected in our moorage rates. In effect, we pay taxes in the same way as anyone else who rents space.—M. Barnett, 453 Head Street.

(Editor's Note: We stand corrected on the first point, upon which we were misinformed. The second point was adequately covered by the story.)

Education

In reply to Mr. O'Toole's letter:

The school system began to deteriorate a good many years before the New Democrats took office in this province and if you've had your head buried in the sand for that many years it doesn't surprise me that your teenagers say that you're out of it. If your young people stay out late and come home to sit drinking beer and smoking and treating you without due respect don't blame the teachers or the school system. Their job is to educate students, it is your job as a parent to discipline them, see to their morals and their manners, to regulate their hours of coming and going and to teach them to treat you with respect.

If you have failed in this regard the blame lies with yourself. We have never had a socialist government in B.C. but if you are a typical Social Crediter, God help us. And your opinion of the Social Credit government couldn't be more correct as you say they are neither experts nor educators.—Mrs. Ruth Ball, 338 Dallas Road.

Preserve the Union

What worries me about the Quebec situation is the lack of response to it. Of one thing we may be sure, Rene Levesque means exactly what he says and is determined to take Quebec out of Confederation by any means necessary. Should we not be just as firm in our resolve to preserve the union by every possible legal means and have the courage to say so in advance?

Sad to relate, all four party leaders in parliament have nothing better to suggest than that Quebec and the other provinces should be bought off by the offer of still greater provincial powers, which as past experience shows, only whets their appetites for more. Surely that would just compound a difficult problem, for already in Ottawa it is doubtful if we still have a viable national government.

Make no mistake about it, if a referendum in Quebec is held, the time will be of Mr. Levesque's choosing and the question will be worded in such a way as to make a "yes" vote almost a foregone conclusion. Hence my suggestion is that when the Quebec national assembly passes an act providing for a referendum it should be disallowed by the national government under Section 90 of the BNA Act. This would make such action illegal, leaving the next move up to the Quebec premier.

Alas, our side does not seem to have anyone of Rene Levesque's calibre to appose him!—F. L. P. Anderson, 217-1900 Mayfair Drive.

Unbiased Minds

I would urge those in B.C. who have voiced criticism against our government to look around with an unbiased mind (if at all possible) and check and compare.

With the only exception of Alberta (where, incidentally, socialism is almost a dirty word) all our Canadian provinces, as far as Newfoundland and closer as Manitoba, are suffering more or less, from high prices, high unemployment rates, housing and education difficulties.

Some of our problems are, of course, related to world-wide conditions which we have little or no power to control, but some are of our own making, and they can be summed up in just one sentence—reluctance, on our part, to accept some of the sacrifices required, at this special moment of our history. We have to pass through a semi-darkened tunnel before we can see the splendid light ahead!

Those who do not believe in self-reliance and self-restraint, should really have a good look at the world around us, a world of harsh realities brought to our very eyes by the magic of the press, radio and television. After considering with awe and compassion the throngs of the hungry, the plight of the oppressed, the tragedies of victims of world conflicts and political strife, these perennial and really tiresome "discontents" should count their blessings with the same loving hearts as the people now counting the flowers blooming in Victoria.—E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Abortion

Statistics published in the local press (Victoria Times, Feb. 9, 1977) show that there were 1,032 abortions carried out in Victoria for 2,373 live births in 1976. It is unlikely that all these abortions were necessary on medical grounds. In fact, it is unusual for an abortion request to be turned down by the abortion committee of the hospital (UBC Law Review Report, Daily Colonist, Feb. 16). This has led to the impression that all doctors are in favor of abortion on demand.

In fact, there are a number of doctors who are deeply concerned about the large number of abortions now taking place, and the probable consequence for our society. Since abortion involves the destruction of human life, it is most likely to entail a loss of respect for human life at other stages as well.

The undersigned are all practising physicians in Victoria. We wish to make it known that we believe that the unborn child has the same right to life as any other person, and that this right must be respected if the value of human life is to be preserved.—Dr. G. A. Ashmead, Dr. J. M. Bell, Dr. P. K. Buxton, Dr. E. H. Curran, Dr. J. Donald, Dr. J. H. Duxbury, Dr. B. A. Fernando, Dr. J. F. Higgins, Dr. J. J. Krayenhoof, Dr. W. Martin, Dr. G. Montessori, Dr. S. Rhone, Dr. J. Quirk, Victoria.

Harp Seals

The time is nearly upon us when the butchery of baby Harp seals will begin off the east coast of Newfoundland within Canadian waters. It is a blight on Canadian consciousness which I feel should be removed.

The skillful elimination of three-quarters of the pups born, killed in their fourth to sixth week of life, to reap their furs to sell on the market place, indicates to me the evils of profit motive. — Bob Eichel, 6-1265 Grant Street.

'I Say to You . . . Canada's Unity Will Not Be Fractured'

By PIERRE TRUDEAU

(Text of the prime minister's speech to the U.S. Congress Tuesday)

Trudeau presents President Carter with a copy of "Between Friends" at White House

For much more than a century, individual Canadians in countless ways and on countless occasions have expressed to Americans their friendship. Today, as prime minister, I am given the opportunity to express those feelings collectively before the elected representatives of the American people.

I do so with pride, and with conviction.

I speak to you as a fellow parliamentarian, honored, as are all Canadians, by your invitation to appear in this historic chamber. Here, on the spot where so many of your distinguished leaders have stood, I express to you the most cordial of greetings. The warmth of your welcome reinforces what I have always known: That a Canadian in the United States is always among friends.

The friendship between our two countries is so basic, so non-negotiable, that it has long since been regarded by others as the standard for enlightened international relations. No Canadian leader would be permitted by his electorate consciously to weaken it. Indeed, no Canadian leader would wish to and certainly not this one.

Simply stated, our histories record that for more than a century, millions upon millions of Canadians and Americans have known one another, liked one another, and trusted one another.

Canadians are not capable of living in isolation from you anymore than we are desirious of doing so. We have benefitted from your stimulus; we have profited from your vitality.

Throughout your history, you have been inspired by a remarkably large number of gifted leaders who have displayed stunning foresight, ofttimes in the face of then popular sentiments.

High Standards

In this city which bears his name, on the anniversary of his birthday, George Washington's words bear remembering. In a message familiar to all of you in this chamber, he said: "It is of infinite moment that you should properly estimate the immense value of your national union to your collective and individual happiness."

At a moment in the history of mankind when men and women cannot escape from the knowledge that the only hope for humanity is the willingness of peoples of differing complexions and cultures and beliefs to live peaceably together, you have not forgotten Washington's high standards.

You have chosen to declare your belief in the protection of minorities, in the richness of diversity, in the necessity of accommodation. You have contributed new fibre to that seamless fabric we call the history of mankind — that stumbling, incoherent quest by individuals and by nations for freedom and dignity.

Liberty and the pursuit of happiness have not been theoretical concepts for Americans, nor have they been regarded as elusive goals. You have sought each with vigor and shared with all mankind the joy and the creativity which are the products of freedom. You have illustrated throughout your history the resilience, the dedication and the inherent decency of American society.

The United States achievement in recent years of conducting a great social revolution — overcoming difficulties of immense complication and obdurateness, and doing so through the democratic process — is surely a model for all nations devoted to the dignity of the human condition. Freedom-loving men and women everywhere are the beneficiaries of your example.

Not the least among them are Canadians, for whom the United States has long since been the single most important external influence — the weather only excepted.

We in Canada, facing internal tensions with roots extending back to the 17th century, have much to gain from the wisdom and discipline and patience which you, in this country, in this generation, have brought to bear to reduce racial tensions, to broaden legal rights and to provide opportunity to all.

Canadians long ago determined to govern themselves by a parliamentary system which favors the flowering of basic aspirations — for freedom, for justice, for individual dignity.

The rule of law, sovereignty of Parliament, a broad sharing of power with the provinces, and official support of the pluralistic nature of Canadian society have combined to create in Canada a community where freedom thrives to an extent not exceeded anywhere else, a community where equality of opportunity between people and between regions is a constant goal.

The success of our efforts in the first century following Confederation was great, but by no means complete. We created a society of individual liberty of respect for human rights. We produced an economic standard of living which approaches your own.

We have not yet, however, created the conditions in which French-speaking Canadians have felt they were fully equal or could fully develop the richness of the culture they had inherited.

And therein is the source of our central problem today.

That is why a small minority of the people of Quebec feel they should leave Canada and strike out in a country of their own.

The newly-elected government of that province asserts a policy that reflects that minority view despite the fact that during the election campaign it sought a mandate for good government and not a mandate for the separation from Canada.

The accommodation of two vigorous language groups has been, in varying fashion, the policy of every Canadian government since Confederation. The reason is clear.

Within Quebec, over 80 per cent of the population speak French as their first or only language. In Canada as a whole, nearly one-fifth of the people speak no language but French. Thus, from generation to generation there has been handed down the belief that a country could be built in freedom and equality with two languages and with a multitude of culture.

I am confident it can be done.

Some Changes

I say to you with all the certainty I can command that Canada's unity will not be fractured. Revision will take place; accommodations will be made. We shall succeed.

There will have to be changes in some of our attitudes, there will have to be a greater comprehension of one another across the barrier of language difference. Both English-speaking and French-speaking Canadians will have to become more aware of the richness that diversity brings and less irritated by the problems it presents.

We may have to revise some aspects of our constitution so that the Canadian federation can be seen by 6½ million French-speaking Canadians to be the strongest bulwark against submersion by some 220 million English-speaking North Americans.

These very figures illustrate dramatically the sense of insecurity of French Canada. But separation would not alter the arithmetic; it would merely increase the exposure.

Nor would the separation of Quebec contribute in any fashion to the confidence of the many cultural minorities of various origin who dwell throughout Canada. These communities have been encouraged for decades to retain their own identities and to preserve their own cultures.

They have done so and flourished, nowhere more spectacularly than in the Prairie provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The sudden departure of Quebec would signify the tragic failure of our pluralist dream, the fracturing of our cultural mosaic, and would likely remove much of the determination of Canadians to protect their cultural minorities.

Free of Fear

Problems of this magnitude cannot be wished away.

They can be solved, however, by the institutions we have created for our own governance. Those institutions belong to all Canadians, to me as a Quebecer as much as to my fellow citizens from the other provinces.

And because these institutions are democratically structured, because their members are freely elected, they are capable of reflecting changes and of responding to the popular will.

I am confident that we in Canada are well along in the course of devising a society as free of prejudice and fear, as full of understanding and generosity, as respectful of individuality and beauty, as receptive to change and innovation, as exists anywhere.

Our nation is the encounter of two of the most important cultures of Western civilization, to which countless other strains are being added.

Most Canadians understand that the rupture of their country would be an aberrant departure from the norms they themselves have set, a crime against the history of mankind; for I am immodest enough to suggest that a failure of this always-varied, often-illustrious Canadian experiment would create shock waves of disbelief among those all over the world who are committed to the proposition that among man's noblest endeavors are those communities in which persons of diverse origins live, love, work and find mutual benefit.

Canadians are conscious of the effort required of them to maintain in healthy working order not only their own nation but as well the North American neighborhood in which they flourish.

A wholesome relationship with our mutual friend Mexico and a robust partnership with the United States are both, in our eyes, highly desirable.

To those ends we have contributed much energy.

And you in this country have reciprocated to the point where our relationship forms a model admired by much of the world — one moulded from the elements of mutual respect and supported by the vigor of disciplined cooperation.

We have built together one of the world's largest and most efficient transportation and power generating systems in the form of the St. Lawrence Seaway. We have conceived and established the world's oldest, continuously functioning binational arbitral tribunal, the International Joint Commission.

We have joined together in many parts of the world in defence of freedom and in the relief of want.

We have created oft-times original techniques of environmental management, of emergency and disaster assistance, of air and sea traffic control, of movements of people, goods and services, the latter so successfully that the value of our trade and the volume of visitors back and forth exceeds several times over that of any other two countries in the world.

It is no wonder that we are each so interested in the continued social stability and economic prosperity of the other.

Nor should be we surprised that the desire of the American and Canadian peoples to understand and help one another sometimes adopts unusual forms. In what other two countries in the world could there be reproduced the scene of tens of thousands of people in a Montreal baseball park identifying totally with one team against the other, forgetting all the while that every single player on each is American, and a similar scene in the Washington hockey arena where thousands of spectators identify totally with one team against another, forgetting that virtually every player on the ice is Canadian.

Thus do the images blur, and sometimes do they lead to chafing. Yet how civilized are the responses! How temperate are the replies! We threaten to black out your television commercials! You fire volleys of anti-trust proceedings!

Such admirable substitutes for hostility!

More important than the occasional incident of disagreement is the continuing process of management which we have successfully incorporated into our relationship. It is a process which succeeds through careful attention, through consultation, and through awareness on both sides of the border that problems can arise which are attributable neither to intent nor neglect, but to the disproportionate size of our two populations and the resulting imbalance of our economic strength.

Big and Cold

Those differences will likely always lead us in Canada to attempt to ensure that there be maintained a climate for the expression of Canadian culture. We will surely also be sensitive to the need for the domestic control of our economic environment.

As well, in a country visited annually by extreme cold over its entire land mass, a country so far-flung that transportation has always posed almost insuperable problems, the wise conservation of our energy resources assumes a compelling dimension.

And for a people devoted throughout their history to accommodating themselves with the harshness, as well as the beauty, of their natural surroundings, we will respond with vigor to any threat of pollution or despoliation be it from an indigenous or from an external source.

Our continent, however, is not the world. Increasingly it is evident that the same sense of neighborhood which has served so well our North American interests must be extended to all parts of the globe and to all members of the human race. Increasingly, the welfare and dignity of others will be the measurement of our own conditions. I share with President Carter his belief that in this activity we also will achieve success.

However, even as we have moved away from the cold war era of political and military confrontation, there exists another danger: One of rigidity in our response to the current challenges of poverty, hunger, environmental degradation, and nuclear proliferation. Our ability to respond adequately to these issues will in some measure be determined by our willingness to recognize them as the new obstacles to peace. Sadly, however, our pursuit of peace in these respects has all too often been little more imaginative than was our sometimes blind grappling with absolutes in the international political sphere. Moreover, we have failed to mobilize adequately the full support of our electorates for the construction of a new world order.

The reasons are not hard to find. In these struggles there is no single tyrant, no simple ideological contest. We are engaged in a complex of issues of overwhelming proportions yet with few identifiable labels. Who, after all, feels stirred to oratorical heights at the mention of commodity price stabilization or full fuel cycle nuclear safeguards or special drawing rights? Yet these are the kind of issues that will determine the stability of tomorrow's world. They will require imaginative solutions and cooperative endeavor, for these struggles are not against human beings: They are struggles with and for human beings, in a common cause of global dimensions.

It is to the United States that the world looks for leadership in these vital activities. It has been in large measure your fervor and your direction that has inspired a quarter-century of far-flung accomplishment in political organization, industrial development and international trade.

Without your dedicated participation, the many constructive activities now in one stage or another, in the several fields of energy, economics, trade, disarmament and development, will not flourish as they must.

My message today is not a solicitous plea for continued United States involvement. It is an enthusiastic pledge of spirited Canadian support in the pursuit of those causes in which we both believe. It is as well an encouragement to our mutual re-dedication at this important moment in our histories to a global ethic of confidence in our fellow men.

'Insidious Wiles'

In that same address to which I referred some minutes ago, George Washington warned against "the insidious wiles of foreign influence" and the desirability of steering "clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world."

Yet here I stand, a foreigner, endeavoring — whether insidiously or not you will have to judge — to urge America ever more permanently into new alliances.

That I dare do so is a measure not only of the bond which links Canadians to you, but as well of the spirit of America.

Tom Paine's words of two centuries ago are as valid today as when he uttered them:

"My country is the world, and my religion is to do good."

In your continued quest of those ideals, ladies and gentlemen, I wish you Godspeed.

'Cultivate Gardens in Space'

By RAY BRADBURY

(Adapted for the New York Times from a foreward by science fiction writer Bradbury to the book Colonies in Space, by T. A. Heppenheimer)

Colonies in space? The question really shouldn't be raised. For me, anyway, it is self-answering. Yes, of course. Why not? Let's move. Let's go there. Let's do the job.

But scores of millions of doubting Thomases repeat the question. The old argument runs: as long as there is disease, war and poverty on earth, we should not be taxing ourselves for the moon, Mars or any further colonial expansions in space. Why can't we leave the asteroids alone, or Far Centauri?

As I write this, the U.S. government, run by supposedly-liberal Democrats and supposedly-conservative Republicans, is dishing out at a lunatic pace $300 million per day to finance new tanks, nuclear ships and other exotic weaponries planned for the Day of Super Demise, when we will not only kill but simultaneously bury ourselves, with not even birds left to sing us to our rest.

If such as I speak against this, a nuclear rain dance ensues, promising dooms from Russia and from Peking. We continue to scare ourselves with Destruction as if it were the True Way. The Russians and Chinese stare at their atomic navels and repeat the same graveyard cliches, speak in Power tongues.

Meanwhile, the Life Force speaks to all of us. We should, we can, we must listen.

Why? Because, wouldn't it be terrible to wake one morning and discover, without remedy, that we were a failed experiment in our meadow-section of the universe? Wouldn't it be awful to know that we had been given a chance, a testing, by the cosmos, and had not delivered — had, by a loss of will and a flimsy excuse at desire, not won the day, and would soon fade into the dust — wouldn't that be a killing truth to lie in bed with nights?

Mankind, en masse, could not live with such failure. We would feel God staring at us at high noon and turn away in shame.

We would not have been driven from the Garden, then, would we? We would discover that we drove ourselves from the Garden. It was always in our power to return. Our failed imagination tossed our seed onto the infertile sands of a barren river bottom on a lost world named Earth.

So much more reason, then, to cultivate our gardens in space, invite ourselves back in through the gates of time and travel, and establish ourselves not just beyond the moon but beyond Mars and beyond Pluto and, finally, beyond Death.

Wherever we go, with our colonies, we will bring summer in the midst of a long winter of time. Each of us a hearth, each of us a small solar furnace digesting frosts and speaking suns.

Man the inconstant asks after the universe, the constant. Man blinks. The universe sits and stares. Man imprisons himself in his own bastille, not noticing he has the keys in his hands. Any time he wishes he can unlock, step forth, fly, be free.

We are Aristotle's children. He warned us to be citizens of the universe. The universe says no to us. We in answer fire a broadside of flesh at it and cry "yes!" Other worlds do not live. We will stir them with our limbs. Other parts of the universe cannot see. We will bring a gift of eyes. Where all is silence, this thing that we call human will speak.

Toronto Market Slide Reversed

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market reversed an earlier decline to rise fractionally in light mid-afternoon trading Friday.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 1.24 million shares compared with 1.42 million at the same time Thursday.

Declines led advances 168 to 149 with 226 issues unchanged.

Power Corp. of Canada Ltd. Class A shares rose ⅛ to $8⅛ following news that a subsidiary has entered into an option agreement to sell 51 per cent of Imperial Life Assurance Co. of Canada shares to Laurentian Fund Inc. at $100 a share.

The subsidiary, Trans-Canada Corporation Fund, holds 102,490 shares.

A trading halt was issued at the opening in shares of Imperial Life Assurance, which last traded at $72 a share.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue chip stocks staged a modest rally Friday, but the rest of the market remained weak in slow trading.

NYSE volume came to 11.98 million shares two-thirds of the way through the session.

Analysts said traders were tentatively seeking out bargains and covering previous short sales among depressed issues in the Dow 30.

Other than that, they said, the market continued to suffer from concern over rising U.S. interest rates and fears of a resurgence of inflation.

Few stocks showed more than fractional changes on a quiet day for business and financial news.

Sony Corp., the most active NYSE issue, rose ⅛ to $9½.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange Friday.

Interprovincial Pipe Line A was off ⅛ at $12⅝, Kaiser Resources ⅛ at $15, Noranda A ¼ at $31¼ and Trans-Canada Pipelines ¼ at $13½. Abitibi Paper was up ¼ at $10¼, Bank of Montreal ⅜ at $14½, Bell Canada ⅛ at $49 and Canadian International Power A ⅜ at $21.

CHICAGO

CHICAGO (AP) — Farm commodity futures prices were unevenly weak in rather light dealings on the Board of Trade Friday.

There appeared to be a lack of incentive in unusually active opening and trade then simmered down to dealings mostly among local professionals. Public involved at this point was very light.

The pattern for price movements was set on the opening when large commercial interests sold wheat, corn and soybeans futures. Soybeans fell about five cents, wheat and corn one to two cents. The losses were trimmed under some quick profit-taking by the locals again but trade then slowed down noticably.

The U.S. government reported after Thursday's close that soybeans crushed last week for oil, meal and cake totalled just over 17 million bushels. The figure was thought to be constructive and a shade under the previous week's.

There was very little export business overnight but export cimmitments, announced by the government also were considered about average. The two government reports failed to arouse any particular trading fever.

After the initial price moves, followed by profit-taking, there was another retreat in the main pits. Prices moved in a narrow range throughout the first hour. The grain moves generally influenced a steady to 4 cent lower price trend in iced broilers.

Livestock

CALGARY (CP) — Heavy receipts to 11 a.m. today at the Calgary Public Stockyards totalled 1,425 head, mainly feeder cattle and stock calves.

There were no slaughter steers or heifers on offer. Good cows were in short supply. All grades of cows sold steady and the few good bulls on offer also sold steady.

D1-2 cows 24-25.50, D3-4 19-24. Good bulls 28-30.50.

Feeder cattle were mostly steers in the 600-700 pound weight range and heifers in the 500-600 pound range. Stock calves were mostly steers weighing 500-600 pounds and heifers between 400 and 500 pounds. Feeder steers sold $2 lower. Heifers sold steady to last week's close. Steer calves were $2 lower while heifer calves sold steady.

Good feeder steers over 800 pounds 33-35.75, 700-800 pounds 33-35.75, 600-700 pounds 34-37. Good feeder heifers over 700 pounds 29-31.50, 500-600 pounds 30-34.

Feeder cows 20-25.

Good stock steer calves 500-600 pounds 36-40, 400-500 pounds 36-38. Good stock heifer calves 500-500 pounds 30-34.30, 300-400 pounds 28-31.

Stelco Seeks $200M For New Ont. Plant

TORONTO (CP) — The Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. Stelco has announced plans to seek $200 million in additional funds primarily to finance construction of its massive Lake Erie plant.

The company proposes the private sale in Canada of eight million preferred shares for $200 million, subject to approval of shareholders at the company's annual meeting April 25.

Under the offering, the shares will have a cumulative floating rate dividend, calculated quarterly. The dividend will be equal to the sum of 1¼ and ½ of the average Canadian central bank prime rate.

Shares will be retractable at the option of the holder in 10 years and redeemable at the company's option after three years.

Stelco's board of directors authorized the creation of a new class of 16 million preferred shares, but are issuing only half at this time.

In recent years, Stelco has relied heavily on the debt market to finance capital expenditures, including its new steel mill under construction at Nanticoke on Lake Erie.

TAX TIPS '77

The following income tax tips are provided by Revenue Canada. Readers wishing additional information may contact the Victoria office of Revenue Canada by going to 1415 Vancouver Street or by phoning 386-2176.

Q. I am a farmer and I used 1969 as the year of averaging for income tax purposes and am eligible to average again in 1976. Am I required to average again using 1976 as the year of averaging, or can I wait until a year in which averaging would be more beneficial to me?

A. You may choose any year you wish as the year of averaging, provided that returns have been filed as required and that the averaging period chosen does not overlap another period for which you have averaged.

Q. I retired from farming and now live in the city. My farm lands are rented to a tenant. I make six or more trips each year to the farm to supervise seeding, summer fallowing and harvesting. Can I claim the expense incurred in travelling to and from the farm?

A. Travelling expenses incurred while travelling to and from your farm cannot be claimed as a deduction from your rental income.

Q. What is the income tax situation if I sell land with standing crop?

A. If the agreement specifies an amount for the standing crop, that amount is income to the vendor and an expense to the purchaser. If the agreement does not specify an amount for standing crop, then no portion of the selling price is attributable to the standing crop as far as the purchaser and vendor are concerned. To complete the answer, your transaction insofar as the land value is concerned is subject to the capital gains provision which was introduced in 1972.

Q. In valuing my farm properties for capital gains purposes, should I make separate valuations for my residence and out buildings?

A. Yes. It is advisable to establish the value of your farm residence because if it is your principal residence, there is an option available on the sale of your farm which would exclude it from capital gains tax.

Q. Can I deduct from my farm income the wages I paid to my children?

A. Wages to children will be allowed as a deduction from income only to the extent that:

(a) The wages were actually paid during the year.

(b) The services were for the production of income.

(c) The services would otherwise have required the employment of hired help.

(d) The amount is reasonable, having regard to the age of the child, and the amount is one which would normally be paid to a stranger for the same work.

Q. What should I do with my records after they have been audited by the Tax Department?

A. Neither books nor supporting records should be destroyed, unless permission to do so has been obtained from your District Taxation Office.

Q. How do I treat the installation costs of public utilities on my farm?

A. If the installation remains the property of the public utility, you may claim it as an expense.

Q. Can I claim as an operating expense, the original cost of implements and buildings I used to earn income in my business?

A. No. However, over a number of years these assets wear out or become obsolete and therefore you may claim a portion of their cost for each one that you own. For more details on how to calculate and claim capital cost allowance on these assets, consult your Farmers and Fisherman's Income Tax Guide.

Q. Do Fishermen have to pay Canada Pension Plan contributions?

A. If you were between the ages of 18 and 70 and earned sufficient income from fishing, the answer is yes.

Q. Is the interest on a loan used to purchase equipment for fishing deductible?

A. Yes, provided the equipment is to be used to earn self-employed income.

Q. Last year I bought some in-shore fish from school children and sold them to a fish plant. Would this qualify me for unemployment insurance benefits?

A. Since you did not participate in the catch you should not be classified as a fisherman and would therefore not be entitled to the benefit.

Q. After I filed my return, I received a T4F slip showing income I had forgotten about. What should I do?

A. Send a copy of the T4F slip to your District Taxation Office together with your name, address, social insurance number and a detailed statement of any expenses paid to earn this income. In the future, you should ensure that before sending your income tax return, you have reported your income from all sources.

Employees Take Over Parcel Firm

VANCOUVER (CP) — A veteran B.C. parcel dispatch firm is in the process of becoming an employee-owned co-operative under a new name while also expanding into a broader field of trucking service.

Western Parcel Service Ltd., founded in May, 1941, by the late George Holgate, has become Western Dispatch Carriers Ltd. Twenty-one of its 37 employees have become shareholders and the remainder are expected to participate through an employee share-purchase plan.

Under Holgate, Western Parcel extended its operations to Victoria and into Alberta through an affiliated company. In 1975, the company was sold to Hank McFadden of Vancouver who made it available for employee purchase, effective April 1 last year.

Peter Runkle, secretary and comptroller, said the company is trying to move away from its old mainstay of parcel delivery.

Prince George Suffers B.C.'s Worst Pollution

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — This city has air pollution each month that is one-third higher than the acceptable standard for cities in the province.

Statistics compiled by the provincial Pollution Control Branch during a six-month period last year at two downtown air monitoring stations revealed an average level of 20.2 tons of dustfall per square mile each month.

They show that dustfall air pollution ranged as high as 32 tons per square mile in May — more than twice the acceptable level of 15 tons per square mile per month.

A level of 15 tons per square mile each month is considered by the provincial ministry of environment to be the acceptable level for combustible fallout in a city.

"There are problems here," says Dick Nickel, regional manager of the Pollution Control Branch.

"But I don't know that the state of technology (for pollution control) has been developed to bring the mills up to standard."

Nickel said the higher levels of pollution occur when there is excessive fly ash from sawmills in the city.

When the pulp mills are unable to take surplus chips from the sawmills, the chips have to be burned and excessive air pollution results.

2 Licences for Trollers Protested by Fishermen

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union Thursday wired federal Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc to protest the decision of fisheries service personnel in Vancouver to impose a two-licence system on salmon trollers in the Gulf of Georgia.

The union said such arbitrary measures are not consistent with Leblanc's pledge of meaningful consultation with fishermen on industry problems.

The union's annual convention last week bitterly opposed the two-licence system which will compel licensed trollers to opt for fishing inside or outside the Gulf of Georgia.

The union has said the proposal is a political concession to the gulf sports fishing industry and marina and tourist operators, and is not predicated on any economic benefit to commercial salmon fishermen.

The union is requesting a one-year deferment on the policy for consultation with the union and its membership, and to assess the economic effects on salmon fishermen.

Land Desecrated

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Mayor Harold Moffat said Thursday good timber land is being desecrated by farm use.

He told a meeting of 200 professional foresters that he has noticed a growing amount of good timber land being turned into small plots of farm land that have a marginal chance of growing anything.

"Somewhere, along the line the forestry people should get as active as the agriculture people in influencing the government.

"They should show that the land is best used for raising trees instead of stumps and race horses," he said.

Moffat also said he is concerned about large corporations buying small sawmills.

He said regional sawmills have been the innovators of new industrial techniques in the past.

"The bigger the giant the sounder it sleeps," he said.

The two-day professional foresters conference has representation from all facets of the forestry industry including government and business.

Students Nicked

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government is trying so hard to slash fat off university budgets it is nicking the lean hides of students in the process, student spokesman Moe Sihota said Thursday.

Sihota, a student member of the University of B.C. board of governors, said that while the government complains about a lack of money, it has announced a $25.8 million surplus for the Insurance Corp. of B.C.

"And then there's the decision to drop $30.2 million in revenue by killing succession taxes," said Sihota. "The shortfall at UBC is only $4.5 million."

He said fat that could be trimmed from the UBC budget "doesn't amount to more than $1 million or so."

During a news conference called by students to protest the possibility of tuition fee increases, Dave Theesen, Alma Mater Society president, said the funding shortfall could result in staff layoffs, faculty cuts, larger classes and program cuts.

Soviets Cruising

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 20,000-ton Mikhail Lermontov, the first Soviet cruise ship ever to visit Vancouver, is scheduled to dock here today.

Oil Tanker Inquiry Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Kitimat Oil Coalition has formally asked the B.C. Energy Commission to hold a public inquiry into the west coast oil port and tanker route issue.

Lawyer Garth Evans presented a formal notice of application Thursday to the commission.

The application asks that the commission set a prehearing to listen to the coalition's argument for a formal inquiry. Application was sworn by Gary Gallon, co-ordinator of the coalition and executive director of the Canadian Scientific Pollution and Environmental Control Society.

The coalition is concerned about proposed oil terminals such as Kitimat and Roberts Bank and wants a public inquiry to consider environmental, social, economic and energy impacts of such development on the province.

Meanwhile, the Plumbers' Union has criticized Premier Bill Bennett for saying he sees little benefit in building a Kitimat-to-Edmonton oil pipeline.

"Why doesn't the premier check our out-of-work board before he makes such statements?" asked John Wynne, Local 170 business agent.

Wynne said in an interview Tuesday that the jobless board has 1,000 names on it, of which 400 are pipeline welders. He said the union has an additional 100 men working on pipelines outside the province and who would like to return to British Columbia.

UNION PROTESTS LOST JOBS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Council of Shopcraft Unions at B.C. Railway has launched a petition to protest a federal decision granting a contract for manufacture of 2,000 grain cars to three eastern Canada firms.

Stan Horodyski, a council spokesman, said Thursday half of the businesses at Squamish have been surveyed and the petition has been receiving 100 per cent support.

Squamish, 40 miles north of Vancouver, is the site of Railwest Manufacturing Co., a division of B.C. Rail which failed to get the federal contract.

The petition points out that the federal government had previously granted contracts to eastern firms for the manufacture of 6,000 similar cars.

It demands an explanation form the government why it could not allot the additional work to B.C. since it is basically a make-work project and this province has one of the highest unemployment records in Canada.

Lloyd Bingham, general manager of Railwest, said he believes his company's bid was competitive regarding quality and speed of delivery, but ran into problems regarding price. He explained that the eastern competitors are not faced with Railwest's additional costs in obtaining steel from eastern mills.

Electricity and gas are going to cost more

Here's why:

ENERGY AT COST

B.C. Hydro sells energy essentially at cost with any margin of net income going back into the business to reduce the amount of capital that must be borrowed for new projects. As the cost of providing service to customers goes up, rates for electricity and gas must follow. Despite a year of cost-trimming and holding the line on staff requirements, expenditures for materials, labour, services and borrowing have all risen sharply. The rapid cost increases have hit Hydro and other utilities hard, particularly over the past few years.

Hydro is also incurring new costs in meeting its responsibilities to minimize the environmental and social impacts of new projects. To meet these expenses, and ensure supplies of electricity and gas, the new rates announced recently for all classes of electric and gas customers are necessary to avoid a deficit on the electric service and reduce the deficit on the Victoria gas service in 1977/78.

THE DAYS OF CHEAP ENERGY ARE PAST

As long as inflation continues, rates will continue to rise—along with the costs of other products and services. Utilities throughout North America have been forced to raise rates for electricity and gas with increasing frequency. However, B.C. Hydro's electric rates over the past 15 years have lagged well behind increases in the personal cost of living.

TO OBTAIN THE LOWEST POSSIBLE INTEREST RATES

To meet the steadily increasing demand for electricity by B.C. Hydro's customers, new generating and delivery facilities must be built. Most of the money required to build these facilities must be borrowed. And to obtain it at the lowest possible interest rate, which ultimately benefits you, the consumer, we must maintain a sound financial position. Additional revenue from the new rates will assist Hydro in achieving that position.

Here's how much:

ALL CUSTOMERS AFFECTED

All classes of customers—residential, general, commercial and industrial—will be affected by increases in B.C. Hydro electric and gas rates this spring. For most residential customers, the increases will range from 5 to 12 cents a day for electricity.

SERVICE CHARGES

The cost of electric or gas service includes fixed costs, which do not vary with consumption, plus the cost of energy actually used. B.C. Hydro, like many other utilities, is now introducing service charges to segregate part of these fixed costs which include meter reading and billing, but which predominantly relate to the cost of distribution lines and other facilities required to deliver energy to your premises.

In the case of the electric rate, these fixed costs have in the past been spread over the first step of the residential rate. Without the service charge of $3 per two-month billing period, this first step, which remains at 4.6¢ per kilowatt hour for the first 550 kwh, would have been increased to 5.2¢ per kwh.

A fuller explanation of the service charge will be included with your first service bill based on the new rates.

ELECTRIC RATE INCREASES

The following table indicates the increases in the residential electric rate. Actual increases on each bill will vary with the season and the amount of electricity used. For about 80% of residential customers, the average monthly increase in the cost of electricity will range from $1.50 to $3.70.

STANDARD RESIDENTIAL ELECTRIC RATE PER 2-MONTH PERIOD*

	Old Rate	New Rate
Service charge		$3.00
First 550 kilowatt hours	4.6¢ per kwh	4.6¢ per kwh (unchanged)
All additional kwh	1.7¢ per kwh	2.0¢ per kwh
Minimum charge	$6.14	$6.14 (unchanged)

*In diesel areas, the new rate structure is slightly different, but the percentage of the increases will be similar.

CHANGES TO VICTORIA GAS RATES

In Greater Victoria, all classes of customers purchasing liquid petroleum gas-air from Hydro will face a rate increase of about 30 per cent, but the Island gas system will continue to operate at a loss of about $3 million a year.

EFFECTIVE DATE

While the new rates will take effect with the first full billing period starting on or after March 1, increases will not show up on bi-monthly bills for most gas and electric customers until May or June.

Details on the new gas and electric rates will be enclosed with your first bill reflecting the new rates.

Using energy wisely is more important than ever.

As costs of energy continue to rise, it's more important than ever that all our customers, from large industries to residential consumers, use energy in the wisest, most efficient way possible. We'll soon be announcing details of a finance plan to help home owners up-grade insulation for energy savings and year-round comfort.

Limited Car Insurance Out, B.C. Tells Firm

VANCOUVER (CP) — Private insurance companies competing with the Insurance Corporation of B.C. must make their automobile insurance available to everyone who qualifies, the B.C. superintendent of insurance has ruled.

Tom Cantell, the superintendent, has told the Royal Insurance Co. of Canada it cannot limit its automobile insurance to people who already have Royal home insurance policies.

The Royal, headquartered in Toronto, in January was the first private automobile insurance company to take a limited step back into B.C. since ICBC began operating in 1974.

The company is competing in the area of collision and comprehensive insurance, which covers damage done to the policy holder's own car. Such coverage is not compulsory in B.C.

The compulsory part of B.C.'s automobile insurance, liability and accident benefits insurance which covers damage a driver might do to other people or their property, remains with ICBC.

A person wanting the Royal's insurance must first buy the ICBC autoplan insurance, get his plates or decals, then find a Royal agent to buy the additional coverage.

Royal wanted to add the automobile insurance on to its existing homeshield and tenantshield property insurance policies.

On Feb. 11, Cantell, in a letter sent to all companies and agents, stated that this "tied" form of insurance was not approved by him.

Don Anderson, deputy superintendent, said in Victoria Thursday such an arrangement probably violates the federal combines legislation.

After discussions with Cantell, the Royal agreed to sell its automobile insurance to anyone who qualifies, and last week sent out a bulletin to its agents to that effect.

A Royal official could not estimate how much insurance has been sold to date. Earlier this month the company president, Alan Horsford, said Royal was prepared to write up to $5 million worth.

ICBC, which sold all the comprehensive and collision insurance in B.C. last year, had a business of about $150 million.

UBC Head Reprimands Librarian

VANCOUVER (CP) — Allen Soroka, an assistant law librarian at the University of British Columbia, was officially reprimanded Thursday by UBC president Douglas Kenny for his part in demonstrations against a visiting South African lecturer last fall.

Soroka was among 200 demonstrators who shouted down Harry Schwarz, a South African member of Parliament, and obstructed his attempts to make a presentation to an on-campus meeting.

In a letter to Soroka, Kenny said normally such actions would "merit a severe sanction."

Teachers Vote To Walk Out At Malaspina

NANAIMO (CP) — Vocational instructors at Malaspina College have voted 96 per cent in favor of strike action to back demands for retention of grievance procedures set out in the contract which expired Oct. 1, 1975. The college wants to change the present grievance procedure in the next contract.

Islands Pair Rap Campbell

NANAIMO (CP) — Two Gabriola Island members of Gulf Island Trust called Thursday for the end of excessive land speculation "before the unique aspect of the 12 Islands within the trust are destroyed."

Jim Tynhurst and Kerry Hanna in a joint statement criticized Jim Campbell, regional district chairman, for his public criticism earlier this week of Gulf Islands Trust.

The two said Campbell "has been doing his level best to discontinue and underline the Islands Trust since its formation in 1974."

The trust was formed by the former provincial government to preserve environvent of the gulf islands and to deter over-development.

Campbell said recetly on a television program that Islands Trust was a waste of taxpayers' money.

Tyhurst called for "controls which would regulate land speculation of an area in danger of sudden land speculation.

He said Gabriola had but 3,000 parcels of land, of which about 90 per cent is used for speculation purposes.

Gabriola, about three miles east of Nanaimo harbor, now has a population of 1,500. If oll lots of Gabriola were built on, the island's population would increase to an estimated 100,000 to 150,000 persons, said Tyhurst.

Hanna expressed similar concern, adding that more legislation is needed in the area of land speculation.

A spokesman for the trust said much has already been done to prevent excessive speculation.

'Laundering' Laid to Bank

NEW YORK (WP) — Chemical Bank, the sixth largest in the country, was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday on charges of failing to report more than 500 cash transactions totaling $8.5 million as required under the government's bank secrecy act.

Some of the transactions allegedly involved money laundering operations connected with narcotics traffic.

Two former Chemical Bank branch officers — Thomas Spinelli and Michael Strolla — were also indicted by a grand jury on charges they failed to report as income several thousand dollars each received from alleged narcotics dealers for exchanging more than a million dollars in small bills to large ones.

And a former bank vice president, Paschal Demauro, was charged with purjury to the grand jury.

A fourth individual, Anthony D'ambrosio, who is currently sought on a narcotics charge, was indicted for failing to report as income $600,000 he alleged received from heroin sales in 1970 to 1972.

The bank secrecy act was passed in 1974 to combat the use of banks for purposes of tax evasion, narcotics dealing or organized crime, and requires that banks report all cash transactions exceeding $10,000 as well as names of customers involved to the internal revenue service.

Chemical Bank, in a statement, said it will plead not guilty to the charges, and emphasized that the indictments involve individuals "who were terminated from Chemical's employment in 1975."

The bank, with assets at the end of 1976 of $26.6 billion, said it expects "the facts will show that there was no intention on the part of responsible personnel" to evade compliance with the act.

"No senior officer of Chemical was aware of this noncompliance," the statement said, adding that "as soon as this was brought to the attention of management, immediate steps were taken to ensure compliance."

Plot Bared To Murder Trudeau

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — A Williamstown, N.J., man tried to organize a team to assassinate Prime Minister Trudeau and four U.S. leaders last year, a U.S. Secret Service agent testified in federal court here.

Michael Maddaloni testified Wednesday that Robert Dufala, who described himself as a John Birch Society murder squad leader, believed Trudeau and the U.S. leaders were planning to give in to Communists through the multi-national Council on Foreign Relations.

Dufala, 39, is charged with one count of threatening to kill then vice-president Nelson Rockefeller with a cyanide bullet.

The threat is alleged to have been made three days after Dufala was defeated in the June 8 primary election for the Republican congressional nomination in the 2nd District. Dufala owns a day care school in Williamstown, N.J.

Plutonium Substitute Considered

DENVER (UPI) — The U.S. government, worried about nuclear proliferation, is considering a switch to some atomic power plant fuel other than plutonium, which is the main ingredient in the manufacture of nuclear bombs.

Thomas Davies, assistant director of the U.S. arms control and disarmament agency, Thursday said the change in nuclear fuels is just one of several alternatives under study as a way to avoid placing heavy reliance on plutonium as a power plant fuel.

Davies said a plutonium economy, until recently promoted by the government, would greatly magnify the threat of plutonium diversion to atomic weapons around the world.

In a report to the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Davies said one new fuel possibility would be thorium mixed with uranium. Some plutonium would be produced in reactors using thorium and uranium, but it would be substantially less than the amount left as the byproduct of power plant reactors using enriched uranium.

He said nuclear engineers have been moving toward the use of plutonium in power plants because uranium supplies are limited and the nation will not have enough to meet projected needs of power generators if nuclear power continues to expand.

Thorium, a naturally occurring metallic element, would greatly extend the fuel supply and eliminate the need for plutonium if research confirms its feasibility.

Davies said, however, his agency only recently has started investigating the possibility of using thorium, and added considerable research will be needed before it can be used.

Dr. Theodore Taylor, a Princeton University nuclear physicist, agreed that thorium would be one way to reduce the threat of nuclear proliferation. But he estimated it would take eight to 10 years and "a few billion dollars" to switch atomic power plants to that fuel.

Another possible alternative to the plutonium economy, Taylor said in a paper, would be to phase out nuclear power altogether. But he said coal is not an acceptable alternative because of the danger that its carbon dioxide byproduct could build up in the atmosphere and change the climate.

"I am developing a strong conviction that the path we should follow is toward the sun," he said.

Carter Wants Authority To Set Oil, Gas Prices

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Carter will ask Congress next week to give his new department of energy power to set prices for oil and natural gas.

The legislation, which calls for creation of a cabinet department to co-ordinate U.S. energy policies, goes to Capital Hill Tuesday. It would abolish several agencies — the federal power commission, the federal energy administration, and the energy research and development administration — and transfer their functions plus energy responsibilities from other agencies to the new department.

Details of the reorganization, the first fundamental change in the federal government since the department of transportation was created in 1966, were made available Thursday to The Washington Post.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (Dem.-Conn.), who will introduce the administration bill, promised that his government operations committee will hold hearings within the next two weeks.

"My feeling is that the president is going to have to fight and fight hard," Ribicoff said.

Congressional sources and leaders of a number of interest groups have expressed concern over what impact the new cabinet office would have on energy policy and on the power of key congressional committees, especially in the house.

Besides getting all FPC, FEA and ERDA functions, the new department would receive from the interior department regional marketing functions over electric power, now handled by the bureau of reclamation and the interior's four regional power administrations; energy data collection done by the bureau of mines; and control over the rate of public land leasing and energy production responsibilities currently under the geological survey and the bureau of land management. The BLM will retain responsibility for actual leasing of public lands.

'RISKY' RESEARCH CLEARED

WASHINGTON (WP) — A U.S. Commerce Department patent regulation allowing safety rule exemptions from firms seeking to create new forms of life was suspended Thursday by Commerce Secretary Juanita M. Kreps.

The regualation, issued Jan. 10, was described in The Washington Post Feb. 5. The following week Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano asked Kreps to cancel it and wait for an interagency committee's recommedation on how to regulate firms entering this new research area.

Scientists can now combine bits of the genetic material, DNA (Deoxyribonucleic acid) to create hybrid molecules that can be inserted into living organisms like bacteria.

The research could lead to creation of new medicines and other products but might also produce harmful organisms spreading disease and death.

The National Institutess of Health issued strict guidelines last June to govern scientists receiving federal funds for such research. President Ford created an interagency committee last September to study ways to cover industry.

The January Commerce Department order said firms planning such research could get accelerated patents if they obeyed all the NIH guidelines but one requiring advance notice of research plans. That guideline, which means the safety of the research could be judged by independent monitors, is considered crucial by most scientists.

The Commerce Department said Thursday accelerated patents will be permitted solely on new laboratory equipment that contributes to safety in this new, risky field.

NEW TET THREAT

SOUTH CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI) — Less than one week after communities along the Ohio River received a scare from a major carbon tetrachloride spill, a new 6,000-pound spill of the same chemical leaked into one of the Ohio's tributaries Thursday.

West Virginia health director Dr. Newman H. Dyer advised residents of Huntington, W. Va., the only state community getting its water below the point of the spill, to boil their drinking water.

"We don't expect any serious problem, but I think a precaution is indicated," he said. "We don't want to take any chances regarding the health of the people."

The size of the spill was relatively small compared with the estiamted 70 tons that drifted down the Kanawha and Ohio rivers last week. Most of the 6,000 pounds of carbon tet, could be expected to dissipate in river waters, Dyer said.

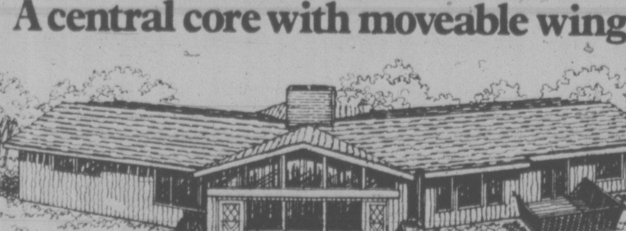
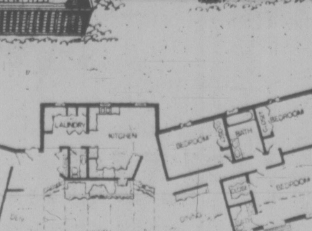
LINDAL CEDAR HOMES
A central core with moveable wings.





This single-story cedar-home design is as roomy as it is versatile — a welcome respite from today's mass of confining split-levels.

Ideal for the family that enjoys entertaining, its core or "center stage" features a spacious sunken living room with exposed beams and a huge fireplace wall (including a kitchen pass-through for hearthside snacks).

"Off-stage," one wing is occupied by an inviting entryway, a den and garage, while the other is devoted primarily to bedrooms. And both wings (the entire plan, in fact) can be tailored to suit individual needs. They might, for example, be joined at a sharper angle to accommodate a narrower lot.

All as a result of factory engineering and an unusually flexible building system. For more than 50 other applications, send $2 for our Planbook.

CUT OPERATING COSTS WITH YOUTHPOWER!

If you own a business, run a farm or operate a non-profit organization, here's your chance to put British Columbia's students, unemployed youth and disadvantaged youngsters to work for you this summer.

It's called the Provincial Youth Employment Program. They work for you, we'll help pay their wages.

Here's what it can do for you:

It can help to tide you over the staff vacation period. Or you can start a new, short-term work project at about half the cost for staff. You can add the hard-working people you need for that peak period on the farm. You can get the staff and funds you wanted for that worthwhile community project.

And most important, you'll be providing much needed skills and experience for the young people of this Province.

Have you ever said "why don't the youngsters do something for me for a change?" Now's your chance!

Just check the list below and call the Ministry of Labour Field Co-ordinator nearest you. Ask for an application form and program regulations. It's that simple. Applications are also available from any other Ministry of Labour office or Provincial Government Agent.

School Violence Up: Survival Comes First

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Violence and vandalism in schools is now so serious that for a growing number of students and teachers the primary object is "not longer education but preservation," a Senate subcommittee reports said today.

The chairman of the Senate juvenile delinquency subcommittee, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., cited the "shocking" statistics of "70,000 serious physical assaults on teachers and literally hundreds of thousands of assaults on students" each year.

"While certainly not every school in the country is faced with serious crime problems, it is clear for a growing number of students and teachers the primary task is no longer education but preservation," it said.

Bayh said in an accompanying statement it has been estimated that on a national scale, "we are currently spending almost $600 million each year as a result of vandalism in our schools."

"This staggering waste of scarce educational resources is more money than we spent for textbooks in 1972 and is enough to hire 50,000 additional teachers without increasing taxes by one cent," Bayh said.

He said a study by the National Education Association submitted to the subcommittee showed that between 1970 and 1974, assaults in schools increased 58 per cent; sex offences by 62 per cent; drug-related crimes by 81 per cent; and robberies by 117 per cent.

CIA PAYOLA DETAILED

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Convicted Watergate conspirator Howard Hunt said today that when he was a Central Intelligence Agency station chief, he gave money to the governments of Uruguay, Mexico and Japan.

He said the payments were similar to those reported to have been made to King Hussein of Jordan.

Hunt also blamed then-president Richard Nixon for what he termed "the horrendous tragedy" of Watergate.

Carter Denies Brandt-CIA Link

BONN, West Germany (WP) — President Carter, in a letter made public here Thursday, described as "reckless allegations" reports in the U.S. press that former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt had a secret financial relationship with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Responding to a letter from Brandt, Carter wrote that he too was "deeply disturbed and deplore the reckless allegations concerning you that are appearing in our press."

Charges that Brandt or the Social Democratic Party, which he still heads, had at some point received money from the CIA have surfaced here and in the United States before and have always been denied by Brandt.

"I wish it were in my power to prevent these groundless accusations about you. It is the price we pay for the system of government we both cherish," Carter said.

Blood in Accused's Vehicle Matched Slain Woman's—RCMP

An expert from the RCMP crime detection laboratory said Thursday blood found in the motorhome of a man accused of murder matched blood found on a dead woman's dress and a sample taken at an autopsy.

The blood ws also different from a sample said by an earlier witness to have been taken from the man, Nancy Ziegler of Vancouver told B.C. Supreme Court.

She was testifying in the fourth day of the trial of John Edward Aitken, a 30-year-old beer parlor waiter accused of first-degree murder by causing the death of Maire Alice Monique Nordelli (Gypsy) Dhillon, 30, a mother of three, while committing rape.

Her body was found Sept. 9 in a grassy area near a path leading from Anson Crescent to the beach at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt.

Mrs. Ziegler, the 25th crown witness, who works in the serology section of the crime lab, was qualified as an expert witness in body fluids, including blood, and their origin.

She testified she examined Aitken's motorhome Sept. 10 and found 11 bloodspots — seven of them of insufficient quantity to ascertain the group type and four which she identified as Type A.

The identifiable bloodspots were found at the doorwell on the passenger side, bottom of the engine cowling inside the cab and close by, and between the front seats.

A piece of carpet near the cowling removed by her and introduced as an exhibit contained AB2 blood, a three-part test, she said.

Mrs. Dhillon's blue dress which she was wearing when her body was found also contained AB2 blood, she said.

A sample of Mrs. Dhillon's blood taken at the autopsy was AB2, she said.

But a sample of blood, said in court earlier to have been taken from Aitken and turned over to police, was AB-A1, said Mrs. Ziegler.

She also said she examined a bandage and plaster half-cast which Aitken had worn for a work injury to his right hand suffered Sept. 3 and did not find human blood present.

She was to continue her testimony today before an assize jury and Mr. Justice Harry McKay.

Cpl. Brentford Wladichuk of the RCMP crime laboratory's hair and fibre section testified he examined Aitken's motorhome Sept. 10 and gathered 73 human hairs from various areas including the driver and passenger positions.

He said 19 of the 73 hairs were "similar" to exhibits to Mrs. Dhillon's hair.

He said all that could be said of the 19 hairs was that they were "similar" to Mrs. Dhillon's and they could have originated from that source or any other source with the same physical characteristics.

None of the similar-type hairs contained a blood-like substance but some of the dissimilar ones had blood-like substance on them, he said.

Wladichuk removed a partial fingernail with orange-colored nail polish from the driver's footwell area. He said the nail was torn with a jagged tear on the edge.

But a physical matchup was not possible between the torn nail and Mrs. Dhillon's fingernails, removed at the autopsy.

Cpl. Richard Shaddick of the RCMP crime laboratory's chemistry section said he tested the nail polish on the torn nail and Mrs. Dhillon's nails and concluded the polish on all of them was the same physically and chemically.

He agreed that the nail polish was of a relatively common type and that he never received any nail polish belonging to Mrs. Aitken.

Dianna Wladichuk of the RCMP crime laboratory's alcohol section said she tested a sample of Mrs. Dhillon's blood, taken at the autopsy the day after she was found dead, and the blood alcohol content was 0.26.

Carter $4B Spur Wins Approval

WASHINGTON (WP) — The House approved, 295 to 85, Thursday the first part of President Carter's economic stimulus package, a bill authorizing $4 billion for quick-starting public works projects to put people to work. Supporters say the $4 billion would produce about 600,000 jobs.

Mall Slated for Drive-In Theatre Site

Saanich will soon receive plans from Toronto for a multimillion shooping centre to be built on the Tillicum drive-in theatre property.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said today he received a phone call Thursday notifying him the plans were being prepared.

Saanich declared the propperty a development area on March 1, 1976 after Abbey Glenn Property Corporation declared its intention of building a $25 million commercial and housing complex on the site.

Abbey Glen, with Columbia, commomwealth Corporation, has now become part of the powerful Genstar group.

The original plan for the Tillicum site has been drastically changed.

Originally, it was proposed to build a 384,000 square foot $16 million shopping centre, plus 100,000 square feet of shopping space, valued at about $4 million, and between 150 and 200 townhouse units, to cost about $3 million.

The office and townhouse concepts have now been discarded.

"The new plan protects all the meadowland and the Colquitz (creek)," Laurenson said. "As for as I'm concerned it's one hundred per cent better."

Laurenson said the shopping ventre will be just under 400,000 square feet and will include "two major department stores, variety stores, a bank and probably a food store."

Residents in the area formed the Gorge-Burnside Community Planning Council last April as a tool to fight the proposed centre.

They feared, it might seriously affect the two other shopping centres already in existence — the Mayfair and Town and Country complexes.

They were told the Toronto company hopes to draw most of its business from the Colwood-Langford area.

While recognizing the need to broaden the Saanich tax base, residents were not happy that their neighborhood had been chosen to provide shopping centre facilities for the Colwood-Langford area.

MARCH 5 BOOK SALE

Thousands of books on subjects ranging from fiction to fine arts will go on sale at the Maritime Museum Saturday, March 5, at 9:30 a.m.

The book sale, sponsored by the women's auxiliary, will be held in the building's old Assize Court.

Youth Fingerprinting Appeal

Crown counsel in juvenile court case in Vancouver has been instructed to appeal a ruling that a juvenile's fingerprints are admissible as evidence only when taken with the juvenile's consent.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday an appeal will be launched as soon as possible on the ruling earlier this week by provincial court Judge Winnifred Murphy.

Judge Murphy, sitting in a family division of the court, found that a juvenile had been fingerprinted without consent and refused to allow the evidence.

Gardom thought the judge's ruling dealt mainly with the admissibility of the juvenile's fingerprints as evidence rather than the legality of fingerprinting juveniles without consent.

OIL REPORTS SKIMPY

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen says he is disappointed about environmental impact reports prepared by companies involved with the proposed Kitimat pipeline.

Nielsen told the legislature Thursday during debate on his ministry's budgetary estimates that the lack of information on the subject is "alarming . . . it is simply not available."

He said the oil spill threat weighs heavily on the government.

"What I have seen so far by way of application for the Kitimat pipeline proposal certainly hasn't impressed me," said Nielsen.

"I believe that the company (Kitimat Pipeline Ltd., a consortium of six companies) has failed to supply an adequate source of information relative to the environment.

"It is distressingly disappointing."

Beaten Indian's Trial Probed by A-G Gardom

Allegations by native Indian officials of discrimination and judicial irregularities have prompted Attorney-General Garde Gardom to ask for a report on a trial last month at Cassiar.

Ron George, vice-president of the United Native Nations, said in a Feb. 1 letter to Gardom that police and court authorities collaborated against the cause of justice in the case of Newton Carlick.

Carlick was beaten last October in the Good Hope Lake area and Arnold Campbell was later charged with assault. Last month, Campbell was convicted and given a conditional discharge.

Gardom told the legislature Thursday aftter being questioned by Bob Skelly (NDP—Alberni) that he had received the letter and had requested a report on the trial.

George said in the letter that, "in my opinion, there is a collaboration between all the authorities mentioned (in the letter) to discredit any possibility of an Indian being capable of telling the truth."

George named the prosecutor, the defence attorney, and an RCMP officer in the letter.

He said "it was quite obvious that the Carlick case was 'acted' out and prearranged to ensure that this 'friend' of the authorities, would not be convicted,"

George demanded a full investigation into the case and called for a retrial.

He described a power struggle between whites and Indians in the Good Hope Lake area for control of ministry of human resources funds as being at the root of the racial problem.

The United Native Nations is a newly-formed group which include status and non-status Indians. The non-status Indians previously were represented by the B.C Association of Non-Status Indians.

Treaty Marked

CALGARY (CP) — The reenactment of the signing of Treaty No. 7, to take place in July at Blackfoot Crossing, is expected to attract about 50,000 persons, organizers say. The commemoration activities will mark the 100th anniversary of the signing and will be highlighted by the presence of Prince Charles.

MORTGAGE LOSS SEEN

OTTAWA (CP) — The Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (HUDAC) said Thursday proposed consumer credit legislation could lead to a reduction in money available for mortgages and thus push up housing costs.

The association told the Commons social affairs committee it objects to a section of Borrowers and Depositors Protection Bill which would allow a homeowner to repay a mortgage in full after three years and limit the penalty to three months' interest. This is already permitted for National Housing Act (NHA) mortgages and most mortgages supplied by credit unions.

HUDAC says when mortgage rates are falling, as they have in the last few months, there might be a rush to refinance by those who obtained a mortgage at a higher rate. They would simply arrange a lower-priced mortgage and use it to pay off the existing one.

$8,000 Pension to BCR Brass

Former B.C. Railway vice-president Joe Broadbent was given a retirement allowance of more than $8,000 to make up for the time he served with a Crown corporation, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Thursday.

McCarthy said Broadbent had served 29 years as a public service employee and as operating head of the railway, but his job for the railway did not provide public service retirement benefits.

McCorthy said the $8,000 granted Broadbent by an order-in-council in December, 1976, increased Broadbent's pension to the amount it would have been had he served the full 29 years as a public servant.

Broadbent actually retired in January, 1976, and McCarthy said the only reason she could find why the additional pension was not granted until 11 months later was that there was no real urgency.

She said she could find no connection between Broadbent's pension and the controversial M. E. L. Paving Ltd. case.

M. E. L., an Alberta construction firm, charged the government-owned railway with civil fraud over underestimation of construction costs on the Dease Lake extension. The company settled out of court in December, 1976, for $2.5 million.

Broadbent was general manager of the railway at the time the charges arose.

Nielsen Asks PSC's Opinion On Blacklist Writer's Future

The B.C. Public Service Commission has been asked what should be done with a civil servant who admitted writing a so-called political blacklist last year.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen told the legislature during debate on his ministerial estimates that the commission has been asked for an opinion on the propriety of actions by Klaus Ohlemann, a planner in the lands office of Nielsen's ministry.

Ohlemann said Feb. 7 he was the author of a letter to Dan Campbell, director of Intergovernmental Affairs, which listed a number of senior public servants in the lands branch and their supposed political affiliations — New Democratic or Social Credit.

The letter was written soon after the Social Credit party came to power in December, 1975.

The letter was tabled in the legislature by Bill King (NDP — Revelstoke-Slocan) and Premier Bill Bennett later announced that the attorney-general would conduct an investigation to determine how confidential documents had fallen into the hands of the opposition.

Nielsen said the commission had been asked for an opinion on Ohlemann's actions because "it relates to the feasibility of this gentleman working in his present position."

"We intend to follow through completely on this."

Asked outside the legislature if he intends to fire Ohlemann, the minister replied: "I don't intend to fire him unless that is the clear recommendation of the public Service Commission."

He said he made a standard request of the commission to offer an opinion of the propriety of a public servant attaching political labels to his fellow workers.

HYDRO'S $3 CHARGE REVIEWED

The new $3 service charge which will appear on B.C. Hydro's bi-monthly bills from now on will be reviewed along with the rest of the electric company's rate structure, Energy Minister Jack Davis said Thursday.

The B.C. Energy Commission hearings on the energy outlook for B.C. from now until the year 2000 to be held later this year will look at the Hydro rate structure, Davis said in the legislature answering a question by Tory leader Scott Wallace.

The service charge is designed to cover the cost of electricity hook-up "whether or not the customer uses any power or not," the minister said.

Virtually every other electric company in the country imposes a service charge, Davis said.

But the charge will be reviewed along with the rest of the rates to make sure the current structure does not "encourage excessive use of power."

Wallace said the service charge is of widespread consumer concern and said he gets lots of mail on the subject.

McGeer Sees No Conflict In M-B Subsidising Exec

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Thursday he sees no conflict of interest in MacMillan Bloedel subsidizing the salary of a top executive of the Insurance Corp. of B.C.

McGeer, minister in charge of ICBC, said the charge of conflict of interest is "ridiculous."

The minister revealed in the legislature this week that ICBC vice-chairman Ralph Gillen receives a "stipend" from the Crown corporation of $3,750 a month, which amounts to about $44,000 a year.

Gillen is "on loan" to the Crown corporation from MacMillan Bloedel where he is vice-president in charge of strategic planning and development.

MacMillan Bloedel president Calvert Knudsen said Wednesday the company pays Gillen the difference between his "stipend" and his salary of between $60,000 and $70,000 a year he would receive if still working full time at MacMillan Bloedel.

Gillen is expected to be on loan to ICBC for about six months.

McGeer agreed there was "no benefit at all" to the company in loaning Gillen to ICBC, but said MacMillan Bloedel took the action because it is a "good corporate citizen and I guess business feels it has an obligation to make the system work."

Opposition MLAs have charged there is a conflict of interest because MacMillan Bloedel, as a major forest company, deals so closely with the government.

Juries Revised

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government has introduced legislation that will prevent people from being selected for jury duty if they cannot understand the evidence being presented.

Slurs Enliven Legislature

It wasn't what they said in the legislature Thursday night, it was how they said it.

New Democratic Party and Social Credit MLAs resorted to old campaign slogans, pledges and insults during a deabte which saw little new sod turned, but filled the house with fiery rhetoric.

It was a notable change from most sittings this session and was one of the best attended night sittings since opening weeks in mid-January.

The framework for the debate was budget estimates for Premier Bill Bennett's office.

But that didn't stop MLAs from speaking on subjects ranging from the development of roads in northern B.C. to the oratorical skills of former Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

The fireworks began when the current Premier Bennett responded to a speech by NDP house leader Bill King.

Calling the opposition speaker sanctimonious and shrill, Bennett launched a lengthy attack on NDP policies, and, to the delight of his desk-thumping backbenchers, boasted of his governments's accomplishments.

King blasted the premier for his "sickening performance" and "hysterical diatribe."

"I hate to see the hate and the venom spilling across the floor," said King.

Gary Lauk (NDP — Vancouver Centre) rapped Bennett's speech as murky, abusive, superficial, and nonsense.

Mines Minister Jim Chabot said the opposition will "never darken the political horizon again."

Bob Skelly (NDP — Alberni) concluded the debate by taking on both the premier and Chabot.

"I've never seen a hysterical speech from a premier like I've seen tonight," he said of Bennett, and then called Chabot "the minister of smear from Columbia River."

Housing to Rise

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Williamson, installed as president of the Real Estate Board of Greater Vancouver says he expects housing prices in the area would rise about five per cent this year but the market will be stable.

Specifics Demanded Over Unity Pledges

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition MPs pressed Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday to be specific about loosely-defined pledges to keep Canada united through accommodations to the country's French-speaking minority.

During a Commons hour-long question period devoted almost exclusively to Trudeau's visit to Washington this week, the prime minister again promised a "whole series of accommodations" designed to bind Canadians to one another.

But the prime minister has "to do more than utter brave words," opposition leader Joe Clark told reporters later. He was commenting on Trudeau's statement to the U.S. Congress Tuesday that revisions and accommodations would be made to keep Canada together.

"We need specifics," Clark said.

Without going into details, the prime minister said unity might be encouraged through long-discussed constitutional revisions, and economic reforms and administrative alterations to immigration and communications policy.

In other moves:

—New Democrat John Rodriguez from the northern Ontario riding of Nickle Belt, accused the prime minister of making statements that invite the CIA, other police intelligence agents and American businessmen to "engage in economic or other intervention in Canada against Quebec."

He cited Trudeau's statement that separatism would be bad for the U.S.

—Conservative MP Lincoln Alexander (Hamilton West) asked whether expressions of close new Canada-U.S. ties means Trudeau no longer fears American cultural, economic and military domination as he had said during a visit to Soviet Russia in 1971. The prime minister replied that "the reality of American domination on every area is a very real one."

Trudeau attempted to assure Tory MP Walter Baker from the suburban Ottawa riding of Grenville-Carleton that Canada intends to continue expanding its ties with other countries even though it considers Canada-U.S. relations the "foundation stone" of its foreign policy.

Outside the House, Clark said he felt the prime minister had taken a narrow view of the type of accommodations needed to keep Canada together.

Changes in the country's constitutional law should be reinforced by economic initiatives to ease unemployment and moves to ease western concerns with freight rates.

CBC NEWS SAID TO BE BALANCED

MONTREAL (CP) — While the news department at Radio-Canada is saying nothing publicly about criticism from Ottawa of its news coverage, those who keep an eye on the electronic press here feel the neawork's coverage is balanced.

Columnists at Montreal newspapers said in recent interviews that the network's news service is quite balanced and professional.

Gilles Constantineau, a columnist for the daily Le Devoir, said the network's news coverage is impartial, despite the presence of a large proportion of journalists sympathetic to independence.

Louise Cousineau, a columnist for La Presse, said: "Radio-Canada reflects very well what is happening. It's not the network's fault if there are so many people who want independence."

Gazette columnist Joan Irwin said Radio-Canada's "reporting is pretty accurate about the feeling in Quebec.

Olympic Village Housing?

MONTREAL (CP) — A Quebec government advisory committee has recommended the $85-million Olympic Village be modified to house average and lower-income families, according to La Presse.

The newspaper says the committee, headed by Montreal architect Jean-Claude Marsan, is to deliver its report this week to Claude Charron, minister responsible for sports and Olympic installations.

Quoting sources, La Presse says the Marsan committee recommnds that the government sell the twin-towered structure for about $30 million — its estimated market value — to a non-profit housing corporation.

Speculation Mounting For Spring Election

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Speculation is mounting that Prime Minister election this spring.

The election talk follows Trudeau might call a general what Liberal supporters regard as a triumphant trip to Washington this week when he made an impressive, and widely telecast, address to the U.S. Congress.

"It made great impact," one ministerial aid concluded as he summed up what appeared to be everyone's opinion.

"There is no doubt that the prime minister opened the election campaign with his speech in Washington," Edmonton Tony Doug Roche said, referring to Trudeau's speech to the U.S. Congress.

Roche said the purpose of the election is to make Canadians "forget that the deep problems of regional alienation are caused by this government's rigid centralism."

The last Gallup poll indicated the Liberals were cutting into the Tory lead, and also showed 35 per cent of Canadian voters undecided.

"That 35 per cent will decide an election," one observer noted — and he thought the Liberals were winning them.

Among the reasons given for a spring election are:

—Six byelections have to be called anyway, five of them in Quebec. They will be a severe test of Trudeau's leadership in that if the Liberals lose ground there would undoubtedly be increased pressure on Trudeau to step down.

It is suggested Trudeau would not be anxious to face the Liberals' general meeting this fall after byelection losses.

—There is severe business uncertainty, resulting in declining investment and even higher unemployment. While an election might not resolve the issue of Quebec separation, it might well remove some of the uncertainty;

—Anti-inflation controls are scheduled to be lifted, starting later this year or early in 1978.

Candidate Wants Seat 'To Axe Confederation'

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Chaput, one of the pioneers of the Quebec independence movment, says he wants to be elected to Parliament in order "to put the axe to Confederation."

Chaput, a former national defence scientist, said Thursday he will be "an independent candidate for independence" in the riding of Terrebonne, one of five Quebec ridings where federal byelections are expected this spring.

"I don't want to go to Ottawa to give Confederation another chance, I want to go to fight Trudeau and the other federalists," he said in a telephone interview.

"Confederation is a form of imperialism over Quebecers, and over all French-Canadians," said Chaput, who has been fighting for the cause of independence since 1959.

Mr. Trudeau is a disguised imperialist, even if maybe he doesn't know it."

Although it might be possible for Quebec to have greater powers within Confederation, "this is not what we want," he said. "What we want is the Republic of Quebec."

Chaput, once a vocal critic of the Parti Quebecois and Rene Levesque, says he now is very satisfied with the performance of the PQ.

Meanwhile in Winnipeg, Bernard Landry, Quebec economic development minister, says Quebec nationalists don't want to burden the rest of Canada with bilingualism.

Landry, the first Parti Quebecois cabinet minister to visit Western Canada, told a Winnipeg business group Thursday he doesn't want them to have to work in two languages.

"I don't want to feel at home in Winnipeg," he told about 140 members of the Winnipeg Society of Financial Analysts. "I am not at home and I am delighted not to be."

Landry, whose remarks on bilingualism drew good-natured laughter from the audience, said the notion of a bilingual Canada is a myth.

"It's not important for me that the word 'baggage' is written on the door in the Winnipeg airport. Write 'luggage' and we will write 'bagage' in Dorval and that's all.

"We don't claim ehe right for a Quebecker to come here in the post office and ask to be served in French. You won't have that right in Quebec City.

Chaput

Benefits Appealed

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Unemployment Insurance Commission said Thursday it will appeal a Vancouver judge's ruling that could allow about 30,000 expectant mothers to collect 1977 benefits for the eight weeks before and six weeks after the births of their babies.

Judge John Collier ruled Feb. 18 that section 46 of the UIC Act was "inoperative" because it discriminated against women and infringed on the legal rights to equality for certain pregnant women.

Under the terms of the act, benefits are paid only to women who can prove they had a steady job at the time of conception and had worked for 20 of the previous 52 weeks. Women who cannot meet the requirements lose 14 weeks of UIC benefits.

The commission said it would ask for a reversal of the decision in the Federal Court of Appeals within the next 10 days.

Grits Reject Vote On Uganda Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Government concern over losing Commons time through unscheduled debate again prevented MPs Thursday from expressing concern over what is happening in Canada.

For the fourth time in a week the government majority refused the necessary unanimous consent to permit a motion that would have expressed that concern.

It was obvious the motion would be passed if put to a vote.

The motion, this time put forward by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), simply called on the government to bring in a motion asking Uganda President Idi Amin to allow an impartial inquiry into the deaths of the Anglican Archbishop of Uganda and two others.

It's Warm And Dry In Sask.

REGINA (CP) — February in Saskatchewan is normally marked by the heaviest winter overcoats and news stories about possible flooding later in the spring.

This year, Saskatchewan residents have been basking in unusually warm temperatures and reporters have been poking about for comments on a possible drought.

The mean temperature for February so far has been minus 5.5 degrees, while normally, the mean is at minus 14.9, a spokesman for the Regina weather office said.

Despite the warm weather, records haven't been broken, but there's no question the winter has been warmer than average, the spokesman said.

Precipitation is only eight per cent of normal at .9 CM. The normal precipitation is 12 CM. January temperatures were closer to the usual frigid Saskatchewan winter, but again, precipitation was low, only 44 per cent of normal.

What's more, the water content of the snow that did fall in January was lower than past years, the weather office said.

Lougheed's Tariff Plan Under Fire

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government's proposed initiatives in trade and tariffs drew most of the opposition criticism Thursday after the opening of the third session of the 18th legislature.

The speech outlined the intentions of Premier Peter Loughheed's government to concentrate its efforts on five issues — a reassessment of the basic education system; housing; health services, land use and international trade.

The speech was read by Lt.-Gov. Ralph Steinhauer, a Cree Indian who dressed in full native regalia to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the signing of Treaties Six and Seven.

The government hinted at new initiatives in international trade and tariff matters that would lower or abolish barriers restricting the movement of Alberta products into foreign markets.

25-Year Sentences For Supper Killers

REGINA (CP) — Robert George Gulash, 34, and David Glenn Hares, 22, both of Regina, were sentenced to life imprisonment with no parole for 25 years after each being convicted Thursday of two counts of first degree murder.

Mr. Justice K. R. Macleod imposed the sentences when a court of Queen's bench jury of six men and six women returned a guilty verdict about midnight, about 12 hours of deliberation.

Gulash and Hares, who showed no emotion when the verdict was brought in, were charged in the shooting death of two men from Sedley, a small community about 30 miles southeast of Regina last Oct. 17.

Testimony during the nine-day trial showed the two defendants had robbed a church supper in Sedley of more than $1,000 and were pursued by the two victims, Joseph Wendel Helfrick, 54, and Edward Leier, 50.

Testimony indicated that after the cars stopped on a grid road, Robert Gulash shot both victims, one on the back and one in the head, with a .22-calibre revolver. He claimed he had not meant to shoot either.

Earlier Thursday, the jury returned to the courtroom to ask the trial judge to let them hear again the testimony of Michelle Rose, 13.

The jury, which retired to start its deliberations just after lunch Thursday, initially asked for a transcript of the young girl's testimony, but the judge said the testimony would have to be typed and then read to them, taking considerable time.

Guerrillas Killed

PRETORIA (UPI) — South African troops, with air support, have killed 12 members of a guerrilla band that attacked a patrol base in the Caprivi strip near the border with Angola and Zambia, a security force spokesman said today.

Snowstorm Derailment Injures Two

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE (CP) — Two people were injured Thursday when six cars of the Canadian National Railways' transcontinental passenger train left the track about 17 miles east of here.

The two injured were taken to hospital in Portage La Prairie but neither was seriously hurt. The cars that left the track about 4 p.m. remained upright and CNR officials in Winnipeg said the four cars remaining on the track proceeded into Winnipeg.

Work crews are expected to be despatched to the scene to get the derailed cars back on the track as soon as possible.

The derailment occured in the midst of a snowstorm that hit southern Manitoba Thursday.

Blakeney's Old Law Firm Gets Most Gov't Business

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney's former law firm has been paid more fees for work done for the government than any other private law firm in the province, according to information filed with the legislative clerk's office.

The firm of Griffin, Beke and Associates was paid more than $250,000 out of the slightly more than $1 million total payment to law firms over a 30-month period beginning 1973.

The information was filed recently in response to a question posed in the legislature by Stuart Cameron (L—Regina South) during the last sitting. (The sitting resumes March 7).

The firm was the only one retained by the government to represent the department of mineral resources, the government finance office and the Saskatchewan Mining Development Corp.

During this period the Saskatchewan Economic Development Corp. (SEDCO) was the government agency which paid out the most to the law firm—$47,764 in 1973, $13,671 in 1974 and $19,831 from Jan. 1, 1975, to June 31, 1975.

At his weekly news conference Wednesday, Premier Blakeney said the provincial government had retained the services of every major law firm in Regina and most in Saskatoon.

Brushing aside suggestions of patronage, he pointed out that Liberal MLA Tony Merchant had been retained to represent the Saskatchewan Forest Products Corp.

Roy Nelson (L—Assiniboia-Gravelbourg) described the amount of money paid to Griffin, Beke and Associates as "almost unbelievable."

Province Paid For 'Love Home'

VANCOUVER — A woman charged in connection with an organized prostitution ring has been running a group home in Burnaby since last fall with the blessing of the human resources department.

For about $700 a month from the department, the woman looked after three boys and one girl ages 16 and 17. Two of her own children also lived at the home.

Neighbors said the woman told them she was running a "love home."

Sources say a boarder at the home is also charged in the prositution ring. He has a criminal record dating from 1961 for "violence, theft, drugs and other federal statutes."

The house, which is now listed for sale at $125,000, was approved as a group home last fall after an investigation by the Burnaby branch of the human resources department. The woman has lived in the house since last summer.

Alan Stubbs, executive assistant to Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm, said the investigation included checking the woman's references — one from a church minister — and checking her background with the RCMP, who did not oppose the home.

But the checking apparently did not extend to the woman's neighbors, some of whom say they have complained to the RCMP and the human resources department.

One neighbor who asked not be be named said men and women were coming and going at all times of the evening and night. Noisy parties went on frequently until 4 or 5 a.m.

"When we complained they would just curse and swear at me and say we were discriminating against them because they were black."

She said she complained to the human resources department that "there is no way I would want any children I had custody of anywhere near the place after seeing what's going on there."

A source said the woman was on welfare before the group home was approved, and was paying rent or a mortgage of about $1,000 a month.

He said that when the group home started the woman received $700 a month to run it, instead of receiving welfare. She kept up payments for the house though she had no other job.

Hess Suicide Fails

BERLIN (UPI) — Rudolf Hess, Hitler's former deputy, tried to commit suicide with a knife Thursday but was overpowered by guards before he could hurt himself, informed Western sources said today.

The sources said the 82-year-old Nazi tried to kill himself in Spandau Prison here where he is serving a life term.

The four occupation powers who run the prison in the British sector of Berlin refused to comment on the report. They said only that Hess is in "good physical condition."

"We cannot confirm or deny the report," a French spokesman said.

"Under prison regulations we say nothing about such reports."

The French hold the rotating chairmanship this month of the prison.

The suicide attempt first was declosed in a French television report that said only Hess tried to kill himself Thursday night.

It gave no other details.

Tsawwassen and the Gulf Islands at normal times. Foot passengers pay $4 and children 1. On Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays adults will pay $2 and children $1 except during the summer.

The general manager said one group rate also is adjusted. Children in groups of 15 or more will be able to travel at 75 cents each way on off days.

He said it would be up to bus companies to offer reduced fares in non-peak times coinciding with the ferry rate reductions and he hoped they would do this.

A more dynamic tariff is foreseen by Gallagher who expect future adjustments to even out the peaks and valleys of ferry revenue.

"The vehicles will bear more — a bigger proportion — of the costs. If costs go up they will likely be directed to vehicles," Gallagher said.

Gallagher was asked about the future of the Mill Bay ferry, which B.C. Ferries directors have been assessing. No decision has been made on what to do about renewing terminal facilities at Brentwood and Mill Bay at a cost of $600,000.

Gallagher said this must be determined before 1978, according to engineering advice.

PM BACKS ATTACK

poration is working against the interests of Canadian unity.

Thursday, Trudeau was reported to have ticked off Oullet and other cabinet ministers for threatening action against Radio-Canada journalists.

The prime minister makes a distinction between criticizing separatist tendencies in the CBC and threatening political intervention, which would undermine the independent management of the corporation.

Both Fairweather and Douglas suggested that threats against journalists, blacklists and other attacks by cabinet ministers undermined the right to free expression.

The prime minister replied that many MPs feel impatient with reporters, but that "this doesn't seem to be an offence against freedom of speech."

His government is "very concerned" about treating the controversy in the proper way, but he still considers it the responsibility of the CBC by law to promote unity rather than Quebec independence.

"Some members feel there is separist propaganda on the CBC and are perfectly entitled to say so.'

American Citizens Detained

"There is no cause for alarm," he said.

"President Amin wishes to inform them that they would not be bothered or harrassed.

Acting Uganda Ambassador He wants them to know that he has appreciated the work that they have done and he wants them to continue.

"But if they want to leave, they can go and they won't be kicked out, either."

Kampala radio quoted Amin as telling regional administrative officers to question the Americans before the meeting and ask them whether they have been harassed in Uganda and whether they wish to remain in the country.

"President Carter has expressed alarm and fear about the American community here and the president Amin has asked them to meet him on Monday to tell them what is happening, but otherwise there is no problem regarding the Americans here," a Kampala spokesman said.

However, in his unpredictable style, the burly Ugandan dictator today sent Carter a telegram conveying his greetings "to all Americans both white and black," and telling Carter he hoped to visit him soon "in the White House."

In his telegram to Carter, Amin charged the United States had sent 5,000 Marines to the coast of Africa to rescue Americans in the Landlocked nation but that "our forces are ready to crush the Marines."

The Pentagon said that five nuclear powered ships are currently in the Indian Ocean, led by the carrier U.S.S. Enterprise and including the cruiser U.S. Truxton and the submarine Tautog, but that none carries enough Marines to attempt a forced evacuation of Americans.

Medical allowance ended for Jean Wright

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Sixty-one-year-old Jean Wright has a multitude of health problems that culminated four years ago with her left leg being amputated below the knee.

For a year and a half she got a special handicapped allowance of $169 a month from the provincial government. It barely covered her medical expenses, she says.

Last March, without warning, the allowance was cut off.

When she asked why she was told that because her husband gets $560 a month in pensions she is not eligible for government assistance.

"Before we were just able to get by, even clear up a few debts," she says. "But not now."

Joanne Newbauer, 25, has a unique problem and it isn't just her disability — a severe, crippling rheumatoid-arthritis conditon,

Two years ago a man left her $10,000 in his will. She was in her final year at UVic at the time receiving a handicapped pension and special stipend to pay for a live-in helper to assist her dressing, washing and cooking, none of which she can do on her own.

★

When she got the inheritance all assistance was cut off.

Her father, a bus driver in Dawson Creek, and the Cadboro Bay United Church, saw her through the year.

She graduated and she's still hoping to find a job. She says if she cashed in her inheritance it would be gone in seven months.

She'd rather use the money to buy a house and achieve greater independence.

She tried to see Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm about her problem. The day before the interview the minister's secretary called her and said he was too busy to see her.

She hasn't tried again.

Louis Todd, 72, is a pioneer fourth generation Victorian, a retired dockyard worker.

He and his wife are dependent upon federal old age pension, provincial supplementary allowance and $60 he gets each month from Canda Pension Plan.

Between them, they receive $492. In January, 1976, his supplementary allowance cheque was $37.32. In April it was decreased to $36.52.

He doesn't know why. Since then he's had two increases, one 13 cents, the other 18 cents.

★

His wife needs dental work and he needs new glasses. They can afford neither.

"There's nothing we can do," he despairs. "There's no one to fight for us."

He blames his problems on Vander Zalm. "I think he's a dictator myself," he says. "We've never had a government like this in the province before . . . never."

Talk to anyone on income assistance these days and the message will be repeated over and over again: GAIN, the Socred's Guaranteed Available Income for Need program — should be spelt LOSS.

Hugh McLeod, of the Victoria Physically Handicapped Action Committee — HAC for short — sums up the feelings of recipients in one word: antagonistic.

There are rumblings of a showdown, of confrontations, of mass rallies to coincide with the human resources ministry budget debate expected to begin in the legislature the middle of March.

Whether plans for demonstrations or protests will come to fruition is another matter. McLeod says the disadvantaged are tradtionally reticent, even apathetic.

Most, he says, are too frightened to complain.

Like the 67-year-old woman living in an apartment on the Victoria-Oak Bay border who pays three quarters of her $279 a month pension on shelter.

Pension shrunk for the Louis Todds

"I'm scared to open my mouth for fear they'll take everything away from me," she says.

When the GAIN program come into effect last Oct. 1 — a consolidation of the Social Assistance Act, the Minicome Act and the Handicapped Persons Income Allowance Act — Vander Zalm pledged it would "aid the worthy persons."

But according to Marilyn Callahan, president of the B.C. Associaton of Social Workers, only two small groups have actually benefitted.

Individuals aged 55 to 59 got a $70 a month hike, raising their basic rate from $160 to $230. And welfare recipients with dependents got an additonal $50 a month — but only if they had been on continuous assistance for at least four months.

For old age pensioners, GAIN hasn't made any difference. One elderly Victoria woman said her montly supplemental allowance is the same as it was in October 1975 — $38.88.

For the handicapped, however, GAIN has meant a decided loss.

A handicapped person with dependants applying after Oct. 1 gets anywhere from $70 to $130 less a month than a person in identical situation who applied before.

Vander Zalm in an interview with the Times said he recognized there are discrepancies.

"But," he said, "we have a grandfather clause that says no one already receiving a pension will receive a cutback if the rates are decreased."

The minister regards GAIN as a good deal for the province. Before Oct. 1 the federal government subsidized about 40 per cent of the handicapped and mincome pensions. Since Oct. 1 the federal cost-sharing is 50 per cent.

That means the province is receiving $35 a month more for each pensioner between the ages of 60 and 64.

In the case of the handicapped, the province is saving $22.50 a month, or nearly $3 million a year. Under the old arrangement Ottawa gave the province $110 on each $265 spent on handicapped pensions. The province paid $155 but now Ottawa and the province share equally — $132.50 each.

★

The handicapped feel the savings should be passed on to them and several groups, including HAC, have fired off letters to the minister asking for an explanation.

This week Vander Zalm sent out a reply in the form of a two-page letter in which he states his 1976-77 budget took into account the changes in the federal cost-sharing arrangement.

The $22.50 cannot be passed on, he said, because there is no provision in his budget to do so.

Vander Zalm points out that on Oct. 1 he raised the basic income assistance rate from $160 to $230 and refers to the budget for the handicapped as being set at $128 million.

In both respects, says Mrs. Callahan, the minister is misleading people.

First, she says, the $230 rate applies to only one group — those age 55 to 59.

All other groups are excluded. The normal assistance rate is still $160 a month for single persons, the same it's been for more than two years.

Second, she says, the $128 million budget includes all income assistance to senior citizens, not just the handicapped.

While the issue of the $22.50 savings to the province remains unresolved — at least in the minds of the handicapped — another issue is coming to the fore.

Ironically it has to do with the handicapped's own savings.

★

Although GAIN regulations allow pensioners to have assets up to $1,500 in value, the handicapped say they are being penalized no matter how much money they manage to set aside.

Take the case of Frank Robinson, a 54-year-old pensioner living in the Battin-Fielding home for the handicapped in Saanich.

Recently he had his $265 pension cut to $260.33. He isn't sure whether it was because he had received a $47.60 renter's grant or because he had over the years saved $800 out of his pension money to buy a wheelchair.

Rose Lemire and Ellie Bowerman, two other residents at Battin-Fielding, say they know of a pensioner who had her pension chopped a dollar or two presumably because she had saved $100 — money she was putting aside to pay for her funeral.

"It seems we aren't allowed to have any savings," says Miss Lemire, 33, "Not a cent, nothing, or we'll get our pension cut."

"I think a lot of disabled were hoping Mr. Vander Zalm would come up with some sort of program that would really help them," says Miss Bowerman, a 38-year-old spastic paralysis victim.

"But this isn't helping. All he's doing is making more waves, creating more stress and anxiety.

"We're always in the position where we have to ask for so damn many things. But why should we be always on the asking side? We want also to be on the giving side too."

TOWN TALK

It's a Vancouver radio station which is promoting a public competition to name the Burrard Inlet ferry system but it's a Victoria man who's come up with what we think is a winner.

You've read of the Yarrows Ltd.-built bright orange boat buses, Beaver and Otter, which will hustle commuter traffic across the inlet come spring? Question is: what to call the system?

The London underground is known to all as "the tube." In Paris it's the Metro. San Francisco has BART, the Bay Area Rapid Transit.

Peter Davies of Victoria says we should call our system — BIFY (Burrard Inlet Fy.), or better yet BIFFY to recognize the ferries.

Then, he says, people can declaim: "I've been on the BIFFY today."

Everyone complains about juvenile delinquency, but unlike Mark Twain's weather, people can do something about it.

In this case, the Mainstay Research Project funded by an LIP grant has issued a questionnaire to 5,000 area residents asking them to express their views on the delinquency problem.

Project spokesman Gary Hubbs says there is a need for more community involvement in the rehabilitation of juvenile offenders.

Manyof the kids need homes in the city — but there just aren't enough homes. The questionnaire hopes to find neighborhoods and groups of people willing to help.

"Then Mainstay will investigate way of reaching those adequate," he says.

Split Delays Hovercraft

Disagreement among Ministry of Transport officials has delayed delivery of the extra hovercraft which was to be based in Vancouver for marine search and rescue work.

H. O. Buchanan, of Vancuver, MoT's regional director of marine services, said today the Treasury Board was to have dealt with the purchase order on Thursday.

"It was knocked off the agenda . . . they wanted one more kick at the cat," he said.

Acting on recommendations by the special committee on search and rescue needs, it was decided to buy an SRN-6 hovercraft from British Hovercraft Co., costing roughly $1 million.

The smaller SRN-5 hovercraft now based in Vancouver is from the same company.

MoT and department of supply and service officials went to Britain, produced details and costing and prepared a purchase order. It has yet to be placed.

This is because other MoT officials want to ditch the SRN-6 in favor of the Voyageur, which costs about $2½ million, and is built in Canada by Bell Aero Space Co., an American firm which is a division of Textron.

There are two Voyageurs based in Montreal, used for icebreaking and buoy work, Bucanan said. Costing more, they are also more expensive to operate, using 180 gallons an hour compared to the SRN-6's 70 gallons an hour.

"On the plus side the Voyageur can work in higher waves but on the minus side it's a bigger machine," Buchanan said.

"The Voyageur has not yet been given a year-long diet of search and rescue," he conceded.

The allotment of funds for a new West Coast hovercraft will run out March 31.

"That's the end of the fiscal year and if you haven't spent the money you lose it," Buchanas explained.

The waffling will probably result in the West Coast again being short-changed on marine search and rescue facilities . . . for at least another boating season.

News Report 'Misleading'

A Supreme Court jury was told today the headline and parts of the first two paragraphs of a Colonist story today were "absolutely wrong and misleading".

Mr. Justic Harry McKay read to the jury the headline and first two paragraphs of an account of the fourth day of the trial of John Edward Aitken, 30, accused of first-degree murder by causing the death of Marie Alice Monique Nordelli (Gypsy) Dhillon, 30, mother of three, while committing rape.

He said there had been "no evidence before you that this is a rare blood type and in your absence yesterday there was no evidence before me that this is a rare blood type."

McKay said it is "absolutely essential" that the jury decides the case on what they hear in the courtroom "and nothing else."

Island-Long Corridor Proposed for Hikers

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Development of a 300-mile Victoria to Cape Scott trail is among 15 backpaking trails which have been recommend-recommended to Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf by the B.C. Outdoor Recreation Council.

The council says the trail would form a central recreation corridor and be feasible without a large amount of new construction because it would make extensive use of existing trails.

"As in all long distance trails, the key to success lies in the potential for using small sections of it," the council says. "Access would be available from Victoria, Port Renfrew, Bamfield, Port Alberni, Courtenay via Forbidden Plateau, Campbell River and Kelsey Bay via roads, and also Port Hardy."

Other recommendations in a brief prepared by representatives of 130 conservation and recreation groups:

—Preservation of six miles of Lochside Drive, the old CNR right-of-way, from Blenkinsop Lake to Island View Road for riders and walkers.

—Preservation of the West Coast strip between Jordan River and Port Renfrew and the designation of the Cowichan River and trail as a recreational area.

—Setting aside as a "wild river" the Megin River, 15 miles west of Tofino.

The brief was prepared by the council at the request of Grace McCarthy when she was minister of recreation and conservation.

The purpose of the study was to determine to the extent of public interest in the preservation of trails, rivers, shorelines and other recreational areas.

"The council was overwhelmed with suggestions from Vancouver Island and the Gulf Island," said Alan Carter of Vancouver, ORCBC co-ordinator. "We received more than 45 proposals from the island alone."

"The study revealed to us that the people of this province are much more aware than poiticians of the necessity to preserve samples of natural landscapes, shorelines, historic trails and rivers," he said.

Carter said Vancouver Island needs immediate attention because of the extensive logging.

"There are few wild rivers left," he said.

The section of the council's brief dealing with Vancouver Island shows that residents are concerned for the future of all rivers because there is no protective legislation. (See story on page 51.)

The council wants immediate action to preserve the shorelines of Nitinat Lakes, Rocky Point and William and Albert Heads, Prevost Island, Brooks Peninsula, Lasqueti Island, Flat Top Island, Sooke Beach and Village Bay Lakes on Quadra Island.

They also urge designation of 25 trails — for walkers and riders, and some for more cyclists and all-terrain vehicles.

The submissions were made by representatives of conservation and recreational clubs with more than 10,000 members.

FOUR DAYS LATER PROTEST 'INVALID'

It took the British Columbia Amateur Basketball Association four days to determine that a Victoria Scorpion protest was "invalid."

As a result, Scorpions protest of Burnaby Bullets' 89-87 victory in the first game of the best-of-three provincial senior "A" men's championship has been thrown out. It means Victoria must beat Burnaby twice this weekend if Scorpions hope to retain the provincial title.

Three BCABA directors, including president Doug Ruttan, ruled out the protest on the grounds that Victoria captain Bob Burrows had failed to sign the scoresheet indicating the team was protesting.

The protest was based on a scorekeeper's mistake. While crediting Victoria with 89 points, the scorekeeper erred in the running total.

The series concludes Saturday and, if necessary, Sunday at Britannit High School in Vancouver.

Brawl Mars Canuck Tie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Butch Goring scored with just 33 seconds remaining to lift Los Angeles Kings into a 2-2 tie with Vancouver on Thursday night in a National Hockey League contest that ended with a bench-clearing melee.

Referee Bob Kilger handed out 114 minutes in penalties on the brawl, which included triple major penalties and game misconducts to Vancouver's Harold Snepsts and the Kings' Dave Schultz. Those two tangled on three different occasions after the fighting broke out and both benches cleared with 25 seconds left to play.

Game misconducts were also issued to Glen Goldup and Bob Murdoch of the Kings.

Goring's 25th goal came after Kings' goalie Rogie Vachon had been lifted for an extra forward and just 36 seconds after Rick Blight had given the Canucks a 2-1 edge with his 21st goal.

The Kings were held scoreless the first two periods, but Bob Berry scored on a deflection with 15 minutes remaining to lift the Kings into a 1-1 tie.

Hilliard Graves opened the scoring for the Canucks on a power play at 11:15 of the opening period when a shot bounced off his skate and into the net.

Shero Pleased Even in Defeat

By The Canadian Press

Coach Fred Shero called it the best National Hockey League game he has seen this season—even though his Philadelphia Flyers lost 2-0 to Buffalo Sabres.

"This was just a super hockey game, the best I've seen all year," he said. "I wish my club would play this way every game."

The Sabres got superb goaltending from rookie Don Edwards, who has won six of the seven games he has appeared in since being called up from Hershey Bears of the American League. It was also his second shutout as he turned aside 25 drives.

In another game, Detroit Red Wings snapped an eight-game winless string with a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Sabres, six points up on second-place Boston Bruins in the Adams Division, opened the scoring at 17:39 of the first period on a freak play. Gil Perreault fed Jim Lorentz a goalmouth pass, but the puck slid between his skates and he lost sight of it.

Philadelphia goalie Bernie Parent charged out at referee Bob Myers, claiming Lorentz kicked it in. But Myers ruled the puck had simply gone in off the skate and had not been directed into the net.

The Sabres clinched the home-ice win with 54 seconds remaining as Rene Robert hit an open net with his 27th goal of the year and his 12th in the last 11 games.

The first-place Flyers remain three points up on New York Islanders in the Patrick Division.

At Detroit, Red Wing rookies Fred Williams, Bob Ritchie and Dave Kelly each scored their second goal of the season to overcome a 2-0 deficit.

Pittsburgh's Pierre Larouche missed tying the game by a fraction of a second as his last-minute shot slid into the net behind Red Wing goalie Terry Richardson just after the final buzzer.

"We just didn't work out there the whole night," said Penguins coach Ken Schinkel. "We didn't get a break on their winning goal. The puck hit in front of (goalie Dunc) Wilson and skipped up over his shoulder. It must have hit a skate cut in the ice."

Pittsburgh broke in front 1-0 after one period of a power-play goal by defenceman Dave Burrows and Ron Stackhouse made it 2-0 at 13:38 of the second.

Coach Accepts Blame For Default Verdict

Courtenay Towettes gained a free ride into the semi-finals of the Vancouver Island high school girsl' basketball championsip tournment as play opened Thursday night at Reynolds.

Parkland coach Corky Jossul thought their game against Courtenay started at 7:30 p.m. When the Panthers failed to show for the game, which was actually scheduled for 4 p.m., Towettes were awarded a win by default.

"It was my mistake but nothing can be done now. We will just have to come back through the losers' bracket to gain a berth in the B.C. playoffs," Jossul said later.

"It's unfortunate for my team and it's too bad Courtenay hurried down here for the game and didn't get to play."

In opening games, Reynolds Roadrunners were impressive in beating Mt. Douglas Ramblers 56-37, Victoria Tigers defeated Campbell River 50-33 and Nanaimo nudged Esquimalt, 40-36.

Roadrunners, who went to a press from the start of the game and forced Ramblers to make numerous turnovers, led 30-18 at half time.

Rhonda Kellar led Reynolds with 14 points while Marg Wilson fired 14 to top Mt. Doug.

Tigers, Island champions for the past two years, led 27-10 at the break and were never in trouble. Sandy Lewis led Victoria scorers with 17 points and Leslie Linton fired 11 points for Campbell River.

Janie Boe sparked the Nanaimo attack with 14 points while Corrine Campbell dunked 11 points for Esquimalt.

Action continues tonight with Courtenay facing Lower-Island champion Reynolds at 7 and Tigers meeting North Island champion Nanaimo at 8:30 in semi-finals. Parkland plays Mt. Douglas at 5:30 and Campbell River faces Esquimalt at 4 in losers' bracket tussles.

Mt. Douglas Rams and Victoria Totems meanwhile, drew first blood at the Lower Island high school boys' basketball championship playoffs got underway.

Rams topped visiting Belmont Braves 77-62 while Totem came up with a 92-52 romp over visiting Parkland Panthers.

Richard Avery fired 32 points to lead the Rams and All Duddridge added 15 points. Mt. Doug led 36-34 at the half and 54-48 going into the final quarter.

Don Davenport scored 20 points for Belmont.

Kris Adams led a well-balanced scoring effort by Totems with 13 points while Jahn de Goede, Jim Wong and Ian Bridge added 12 points each.

Quinn Groenhyde led Parkland with 14 points.

Play continues tonight with Victoria playing Dockers at Esquimalt and Mt. Douglas tackles Spartans at Claremont. Both games are at 8.

Tuesday Racing

Cloverdale Raceway in Surrey can now have harness racing on Tuesdays in addition to previously-authorized Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, a provincial order-in-council says.

The initial order covers March but officials expect cabinet approval will be automatic for the fiscal year which starts April 1.

Seniors Playoff Likely

WINNIPEG (CP) — Organizers of the Canadian senior men's curling championship couldn't have designed a closer finish.

With the last round of the 12-team round-robin moved ahead because of a playoff possibility, three teams have a shot at the title.

They are Don Killips of Edmonton, Jake Block of Abbotsford, B.C., and Morrie Thompson of Saskatoon, each with an 8-2, won-lost record after 10 rounds.

The playoff possibility rests with Thompson who plays Lawrence Carter of Amherst, N.S. in his last game.

If Thompson wins he would play the winner of the Block-Killips game who were drawn by chance in the 11th round.

Following the leaders in the standings were Jack Edwards of Kingston, Ont., with a 7-3 mark, Tom Hunter of Hudson, Que., Don Brownridge of Portage la Prairie, Man., and Roly Mockler of Fredericton, each with 5-5.

In the ninth round Thursday it was Ontario over Alberta 8-4, P.E.I. over the Territories 10-7, New Brunswick over B.C. 8-7, Saskatchewan over Newfoundland 7-5, Manitoba over Quebec 10-7 and Northern Ontario over Nova Scotia 6-5.

The 10th round saw Saskatchewan defeat Northern Ontario 8-2, New Brunswick beat Quebec 7-5, Alberta edge Manitoba 6-4, P.E.I. outscore Nova Scotia 8-5, the Territories defeat Newfoundland 8-7 and B.C. defeat Ontario 9-5.

Block could have been alone in first place had he made his last shot against Mockler in the ninth round. But on the play he rubbed a guard on a takeout attempt to allow New Brunswick to steal and win the game.

A Master in the Wind, Player Leads by Stroke

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "I have as much desire as those young fellows," said Gary Player, 40, after overcoming gusty winds to score a four-under-par 68 for the first-round lead in the $250,000 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Golfers Association tour.

Player was talking about the young players who captured the first seven events on this year's Professional Golfrs Association tour—Jerry Pate, 23, Bruce Lietzke and Tom Purtzer, both 25, and Tom Watson, 27.

A few hours after his statement, he found himself being shadowed, at 69, by an even younger newcomer—22-year-old Curtis Strange, the 1974 NCAA champion. Strange, who failed by a stroke to earn his playing card last fall, got into this 159-man field on a sponsor's exemption.

Five players stood another shot behind after Thursday's first round, headed by Jack Nicklaus. The Golden Bear was five under par after 12 holes, but he faltered in the wind which gusted between 25 and 35 m.p.h.

Tied with Nicklaus at 70 were Jim Simons, Bobby Walzel, Calvin Peete and Fuzzy Zoeller.

Purtzer, who won last week's Los Angeles Open, was out of contention at 79.

Player, two over par after six holes, rallied to birdie No. 8 and No. 9 and had five more birdies and a bogey on the back nine.

Strange, saying he didn't like the wind, had six birdies in his round but had disasterous consecutive bogeys in the wind tunnel on holes six, seven and eight.

"I actually love playing in wind," said Player. "A lot of my championships have come in the wind."

DECISION NEXT WEEK ON SALE OF COUGARS

Pat Ginnell may be ready to talk by this time next week.

The owner-coach of Victoria Cougars still refuses to comment openly on reports that he is selling his Western Canada Hockey League franchise to a Vancouver group headed by hotelmen Lorne Williams and Ray Harambourne.

"Until something concrete happens," said Ginnell, "I'm not going to comment on something that is speculation."

Williams has said he is negotiating for the franchise.

The "concrete" may be laid next Thursday. That's when Ginell is tentatively scheduled to meet Williams.

If the sale does come off, Ginnell is almost certain to leave Victoria. It has been learned htat he has at least two offers to remain in hockey, including one that needs "a pretty quick decision."

If he leaves, the club will be coached by Cliff Lennartz, now Ginnell's assistant.

Meanwhile, the most positive news in the Cougar corner Thursday concerned the condition of rookie centre Geordie Robertson. He suffered a shoulder injury during Wednesday's 10-2 loss to the Bruins in New Westminster.

The club doctor said Robertson suffered a bad bruise but could be ready to play Saturday when the Cougars meet Flin Flon Bombers at Memorial Arena.

For the second night in a row Calgary Centennials were involved in an on-ice brawl Thursday in a Western Canada Hockey League game which resulted in several minutes of penalties to them and their opponents, Kamloops Chiefs.

In contrast, the game between Saskatoon Blades and Portland Winter Hawks, won by Saskatoon 3-2, was relatively peaceful with only 11 minors being handed out during the game.

After Kamloops was assessed 55 minutes in assorted penalties and Calgary 54 during the encounter, the game ended with the visiting Chiefs on top 5-3.

Chiefs' Ryan Walter contributed two goals to the effort and was supported by singles from Reg Kerr, Mike Boychuk and Earl Rausse.

Roy Sommer, Dave Morrow and Mike Toal replied for the shorthanded Centennials who were missing regulars Kevin McCloskey, Gary Rissling, Grant Morin and Doug Lecuyer, who was suspended following a fracas Wednesday night in Lethbridge.

The troubled Centennials, last in the Central Division, also played without Kevin Willison, Mike Urquhart and backup goalkeeper Gerry Perreault. Willison has a leg injury, while both Urquhart and Perreault quit the club Wednesday.

Lethbridge players involved in Wednesday's fracas, as well as coach Mike Sauter, who was ejected from the game, were expected to learn their fate today. The Broncos don't play until Saturday.

The trouble came at 11:44 of the final period and resulted in Kamloops being assessed three minors, two majors, one match and one game misconduct while Calgary was tabbed with four minors, three game misconducts and one fighting major, as well as losing coach Fred Hilts.

In the only other Thursday night WCHL action, Blades' goalie Dave Parro made 39 saves on Portland ice to back the scoring of Ron Birns, Ken Federko and Darryl Erickson.

The game opened with a Portland goal from Brent Peterson but Saskatoon tied it shortly after. However, a goal from Blades' Paul Mulvey restored their lead at the end of the first frame.

Thursday night's win moved Kamloops into second place in the Western Division with 59 points, one ahead of Portland and Victoria but far behind division-leading New Westminster which has 82 points.

Ferguson Withdraws

EL CENTRO, Calif.—Illness has forced Cec Ferguson, a 26-year-old rookie professional from Victoria, to withdraw from the 54-hole American Golf Tour tournament being played at Imperial Valley Country Club.

Ferguson, who scored a one-over-par 72 in the opening round Wednesday, played a few holes Thursday but then had to withdraw. A winner of one AGT tournament earlier this month, Ferguson plans to rest for a few days before moving to Tucson and picking up the AGT tour next week.

This week's AGT test winds up today.

Boycott Favored

LOME, Togo (Reuter) Most delegates at the 28th ministerial council of the Organization of African Unity (OUA) favor boycotting the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton next year unless New Zealand severs all sporting ties with South Africa, sources close to the session said Thursday.

The council discussed Thursday a report from the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa (SCSA), whose executive debated the problem last month at Yaounde.

Council secretary general Jean-Claude Ganga told reporters he expects a definite stand from the CAU, making it easier for national sporting authorities to implement any decisions.

Finn a Winner

LILLEHAMMER, Norway (AP) — Finland's Heikki Ikkola won the 20-kilometre event in the world biathlon championships Thursday with a time of one hour, 10 minutes, 51.8 seconds.

Whitecaps Sign Bolitho

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Whitecaps announced Thursday the signing of three Canadian players to 1977 North American Soccer League contracts.

Midfielder Buzz Parsons, defender Bruce Wilson and midfielder Bob Bolitho also played for Soccer Canada last year when the team advanced to the second round of the World Cup playoffs.

Bolitho, 24, is from Victoria and scored a goal in Soccer Canada's 3-0 win over the United States in a playoff game in Haiti last year.

Athletics Lead Big Six Final

Victoria Athletics are one up in the South Island Big Six Hockey League's championship series.

Sharp on attack as well as defensively, the defending champions defeated Western Home Buckaroos 7-3 Thursday at Pearkes Arena in the first game of the best-of-seven final.

Date for the second game has not been finalized but is expected to be played Monday at Memorial Arena.

Brian Hamilton led Athletics with three goals. Veteran Ross Swanton added two while Don Thompson, and Errol Golden each scored once for Athletics.

Bill Pettinger, Bob Nicholson and Ron Williams hit for Western Homes. Williams scored his goal on a penalty shot with only 12 seconds remaining in the game.

Outlook Brightening Up For All Types of Fishing

Generally speaking, both freshwater and salt-chuck fishermen can expect a little better success this weekend in most Vancouer Island areas — despite the windy conditions we've been experiencing the past few days.

Morning is the best time to be on the water near Sooke, where Mike Moss weighed in a 34-pound chinook Sunday. Moss, the son of lure-maker Tommy Moss, landed the chinook near the "Trap Shack" on a "special" plug. Other good catches of chinooks to 14 pounds were reported taken off Otter Point and The Bluffs using strip or green-yellow-white hootchies trolled close to the bottom.

Fishermen trolling a 5-inch minnow or blue Squirt at the 100-foot depth off Bedford Island are picking up chinooks as heavy as 20 pounds. Action on chinooks to 14 pounds started to perk Thursday morning off Beechey Head.

Squirts, strip and anchovies are pulling in chinooks to 18 pounds and bluebacks to two when trolled close to the bottom off the Pedder Bay kelp bed and Christopher Point.

The Flats off Oak Bay are yielding chinooks to 19 pounds on hootchies or strip trolled with two pounds of weight and 50 to 100 feet of line.

In Saanich Inlet, chinooks to eight pounds have been providing fair returns off Coles Bay, Henderson Point, Tod Inlet and Bamberton. Most success was noted in the early morning and late afternoon with strip and anchovies working equally well.

You have to hunt for the blues in Finlayson Arm but when you find them, some great action can be expected on pink bucktails.

★ ★ ★

Further up-Island, some "red" chinooks continue to come in from Bold Bluff and Sansum Narrows.

Stripcasters and fishermen casting Buzz Bombs or Stingsildas are picking up chinooks to eight pounds at Northwest Bay and others using the latter lures off the Bamfield docks are landing chinooks to nine pounds.

Success has droppped off at Campbell River but a few chinooks to 20 pounds continue to trickle in.

Steelheading has picked up slightly but the water levels, which rose rapidly during the recent rains, are now dropping again.

A few black fish are starting to show up among the steelies that have been landed in the Cowichan River and the Nanaimo River.

Some nice catches of steelhead to 14 pounds have been taken near the rifle range on the Stamp River and a few catches continue to come in from the Big Qualicum, Oyster and Campbell rivers.

Trout fishing is also starting to pick up in a few areas.

Fly fishermen using a sinking line and other anglers using bait are netting excellent returns of trout in Shawnigan Lake as well as Divers and Westwood lakes near Nanaimo.

Another spot rated "hot" was the upper end of Lower Campbell Lake.

NIBBLES: Fishermen are reminded that the closure on ling cod is over at the end of February in all waters between Vancouver Island and the Mainland.

Even the experts sometimes get skunked . . . Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association, the pick of the group, weighed in only two fish over the three-pound limit during their monthly Frostbite Derby on Sunday . . . Gary Vaughan took first prize with a 7:04-pounder and Bob Redgrave came second witth a 6:02 catch.

Eagleson Predicts More Clubs to Fail

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson expressed doubt Thursday that a National Hockey League franchise will survive in Cleveland beyond the end of this season and suggested three of four other teams should seriously consider their futures.

Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, called a news conference to discuss the $600,000 the association agreed to put up to help keep Cleveland Barons alive.

"I'm not convinced that the Barons are ever going to make it in Cleveland. But I do know that from the point of view of the integrity of the league, that team had to survive through the end of this season. Now they have the opportunity to sell the franchise to someone else or to disperse the players on a sensible basis."

He said owners had told him they will lose between $12 and $18 million this year, but he insisted that high salaries weren't the reason.

He said he will recommend no player attend training camp next season unless it is obvious his team will survive the season.

"And at the moment I think there are three or four clubs that should be examining their financial positions to determine whether or not it makes any economic sense whatsoever to continue in business next year."

Negotiations to keep the Barons from sinking ended Wednesday in New York with the NHL and Barons owner Mel Swig each putting up $350,000 and the players' association agreeing to borrow $600,000.

Eagleson emphasized that the $600,000, to be repaid in the next two years from revenue from extra exhibition games, is reserved for salaries.

"We don't want the Cleveland management to add contracts or increase payments to players. They'll be able to make trades on the understanding that there be no sale for cash. We saw no reason to put our money in and then find out that Mr. Swig and the Barons had sold three or four players and walked away with $20,000 or $300,000."

Eagleson also said league owners should drop the requirement that any decisions be made by unanimous agreement; schedules should be re-arranged so a team plays more games against nearby clubs and makes fewer cross-continent trips; the four-division alignment should be scrapped in favor of three divisions of six teams or perhaps three divisions of five, dropping three clubs.

Bout Sanctioned

TORONTO (CP) — Promoter Adam Scinocco says the Canadian Boxing Federation has agreed to sanction the March 7 bout between George Chuvalo and Bob (Pretty Boy) Felstein as a Canadian heavyweight title match.

Four-Team Final

Victoria Valkyries face Duncan at 10 a.m. Saturday in the opening game of the Vancouver Island senior "B" women's basketball championship tournament at Mount View gymnasium.

The other two teams in the double-loss elimination battle, Nanaimo and Comox, play at 12 noon.

Further games are scheduled for 2, 4 and 6 p.m. Saturday and action resumes at 10 a.m. Sunday. The final is scheduled for 2 p.m. and another game, if needed, will start at 6.

CRUCIAL MATCH

Victoria West, the defending Canadian champions, and Victoria Athletics, who captured the national crown in 1975, meet in their final premier division mtch of the Vancouver Island Soccer League season Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Game time is 2:15 p.m.

Athletics have a one-point lead over Wests in the battle for first place with only three weeks remaining in the regular schedule. But the latter club enjoys a game in hand over their rivals.

Both teams are still alive in Jackson Cup competition leading to a berth in the provincial championship and another shot at the national title.

NEW ROUGHIE COACH HAS FLEXIBLE PLAN

REGINA — Jim Eddy, new head coach of Saskatchewan Roughriders, has confirmed that he intends to give himself more flexibility than is normally enjoyed by football coaches.

Eddy, who signed a two-year contract Monday and was officially named Tuesday to replace John Payne (now an assistant with Detroit Lions) at the helm of the Western Football Conference club, repeated Wednesday that he plans to delegate coaching responsibility.

His first move in the project to acquire the flexibility to move around and spot problems in specific areas was to name quarterback Ron Lancaster as offence co-ordinator of the team.

As well as Lancaster, who will continue to play, Eddy, a man with 21 years of coaching experience, wants an offensive line coach, a defensive co-ordinator and a defensive assistant coach.

The plan is designed to put Lancaster on the field, a defensive co-ordinator on the sidelines with Eddy and two assistants upstairs in the stadium watching the play.

Praising Lancaster as the man who knows most about the total offensive picture in Canadian football, Eddy said he believes it is a good time in the veteran quarterback's career to become more involved in coaching.

Trips to Reward Amateur Boxers

There could be more at stake than pride for some of the battlers scheduled to take part in a Victoria Athletic Association-sponsored boxing card Saturday night at Central Junior High.

Results from the 14-bout card may help the British Columbia Amateur Boxing Association determine the makeup of at least one provincial team this year.

That's the case in a 100-pound division bout between Gary Robinson and Tom McMurchy of Cloverdale. Both are being strongly considered for selection to an under-16 provincial team that is scheduled to tour England this summer.

Another bout, matching Derrik Hoyt of Cranbrook against Jamie Oldenberger of Hastings Community Club, will send the winner to the Edmonton Golden Gloves tournament March 4-6 as one of B.C.'s representatives.

Saturday's action starts at 7:30 p.m.

The card:

60 pounds — Gerald Arsenault (Vic) vs Bob Sheldon (Clov.).
60 — George Pirese (Hast.) vs Dale Robinson (Vic).
65 — John Panke (Vic) vs Billy Hartford (Clov).
85 — Paul Panke (Vic) vs Craig Sibley (Clov).
90 — Ron Williams (Nan) vs Perry Franklin (Clov).
135 — Mike Parenteau (Hast) vs Larry Spady (Clov).
60 — Malcolm Montgomery (Vic) vs Brendan McLellan (Clov).
100 Gary Robinson (Vic) vs Tom McMurchy (Clov).

139 — Derrik Hoyt (Cran) vs Jamie Ollenberger (Hast).
139 — Danny O'Sullivan (Vic) vs Glen O'Connor (Clov).

Trios Gain Consolution Puck Final

Oak Bay Trios broke out a smart offence Thursday to advance to the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League's consolation final.

Cutting loose for 53 shots, the Trios defeated Kerry Park Islanders of Mill Bay 9-2 at Oak Bay to win a best-of-three semi-final 2-1. Oak Bay now will meet the winner of a Lake Cowichan-Victoria series which is deadlocked 1-1 and concludes tonight at Lake Cowichan.

The league's championship series also resumes this evening, starting at 8 in the Esquimalt Sports Centre, with Saanich Braves holding a 1-0 lead over Esquimalt Legion in a best-of-seven final.

Dale Schmidt scored three goals and Stan Alstad added a pair to spark Oak Bay's victory.

Pat Perry, Craig Palin, Larry Hansen and Evan Young also connected for Trios while Brad Pettinger and Bruce Burky scored for Mill Bay.

Paul Vaeson blocked 36 shots for Oak Bay while Eric Dawes and Tony Burns combined to turn away 44 shots for Islanders.

Ranger Owner To Pass

DALLAS (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn has called a meeting in Dallas next Wednesday to discuss the sale of pitcher Paul Lindblad of Oakland A's to Texas League, but Rangers' owner Brad Corbett says they will hold the meeting without him.

"I see no reason for my appearance at such a meeting," Corbett said Thursday. "If Kuhn wants to void the deal, that's his business. It's between him and Charlie Finley owner of the A's and that's none of my business."

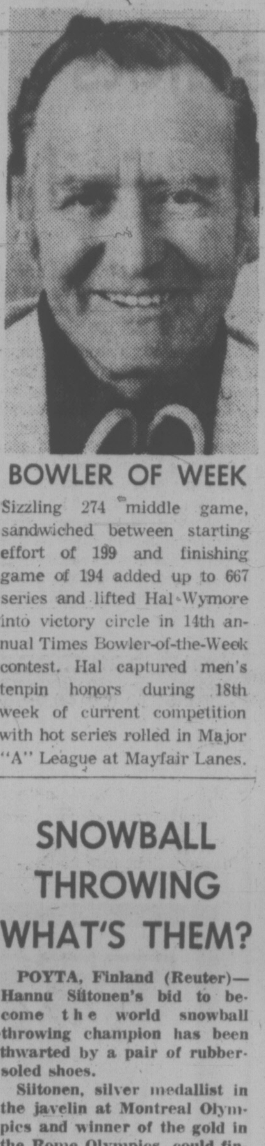
Corbett said he intends to be in Pompano Beach, Fla., where the Rangers will open their spring training camp today.

Kuhn's action came after Finley, who has sold most of his top stars to other teams, sold Lindblad, one of his top relief pitchers, to the Rangers for a report $400,000.

Lindblad, who lives in Arlington, said he was delighted with the move and has agreed verbally to a contract with the Rangers. Corbett said he has signed.

Lindblad said that even if nobody else shows up, he will be at the meeting with Kuhn.

Kuhn anounced the meeting in telegrams sent to Corbett and Finley, saying he would not approve the purchase until a hearing was held.



BOWLER OF WEEK

Sizzling 274 middle game, sandwiched between starting effort of 199 and finishing game of 194 added up to 667 series and lifted Hal Wymore into victory circle in 14th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Hal captured men's tenpin honors during 18th week of current competition with hot series rolled in Major "A" League at Mayfair Lanes.

SNOWBALL THROWING WHAT'S THEM?

POYTA, Finland (Reuter)— Hannu Siitonen's bid to become the world snowball throwing champion has been thwarted by a pair of rubber-soled shoes.

Siitonen, silver medallist in the javelin at Montreal Olympics and winner of the gold in the Rome Olympics, could finish only fifth.

Most other competitors used spiked shoes, including the winner, Jorma Ketola of Finland, who hurled his snowball 81.45 metres (267 feet 2½ inches).

Each snowball is machine-made and weighs 400 grams (about 14 ounces).

NEW TENNIS CIRCUIT

NEW YORK (AP) — A new, four-week women's tennis circuit with total prize money of $80,000 has been announced. It will be called the Lionel Cup.

It's Boat Show Time

This is the first day of the annual Vancouver boat show which will be held at Exhibition Park until March 6.

Show hours are 6 to 10:30 p.m. on weekdays, 1 to 10:30 p.m. on Saturdays and 1 to 6 p.m. on Sundays.

For the first time this year the boat show will be run by the Canadian National Sportsmen's Shows.

During the past 30 years the CNSS has run many trade shows in eastern Canada, including such stand-outs as the Toronto Boat Show.

A federally chartered organization, the CNSS uses its profits to help conservation programs, outdoor sports and recreation facilities. More than $6 million has been given in grants since the CNSS was formed.

Harold Shields, vice-president of operations for the Sportsmen's Shows, says, moving into western territory, means that more CNSS grants will be coming this way.

The B.C. Wildlife Federation used a $4,000 CNSS grant to help underwrite the costs of publishing a booklet on the history and development of the coal industry in British Columbia.

This is the second Vancouver show for the CNSS this year. The first was the vastly successful Recreational Vehicle Show held in February.

Members of the Canoe Bay Sailing Club are hoping for better luck this Sunday when they set out for their 14½-mile Canoe Rock race at 9:30 a.m. in the vicinity of the Sidney government wharf.

The wind was so flat and the adverse tide so strong last Saturday none of the boats were able to complete a six-miler within the time limit and roughly half of the 47-strong fleet couldn't even make it over the start line.

Keel boats of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club had a long-distance race last Sunday but results aren't available for another reason. The boat finished so close together that the race committee is still trying to sort out sail numbers and positions.

Many of the RVYC boats will be out again this Sunday, joining their friends at the Turkey Head Sailing Association for two around-the-buoy races. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association's Laser sailors will have series racing again on Sunday, starting at 1 p.m.

Robin Spear was over-all winner last week, beating out Colin Nichols and Garry Rogers.

The RVYC's Laser sailors will also have series racing on Saturday, beginning at 1:30 p.m. Charles Simpson won the first of two races sailed last Saturday, Dave Teece and Doug Gray being runners-up. The second time around it was Barry Wright, followed by Bob Dalgleish and Dave Richardson.

The club's Cal 20 fleet will have the fourth race in its B series on Saturday, getting the gun at the same time as the Lasers.

George Lewis' Sea Fever was first over the finish line last Saturday. After her came Ed Life's Semiramis, Conrad Hoskins' Celsib, Tony Marshall's Sunbeam, Wood Palmer's Colindigo Frank Cushion's Por Gusto, John Martin's Idle Hour, Harry Marshall's Tongariro, Sis Biden's Pegasus, Eric Penlison's Tarkwa and John De Boucier's Galenia.

Aikido Workshop At UVic

Well, if you are there's an aikido workshop being held at the University of Victoria's McKinnon Gym from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Sunday, March 6.

What's aikido?

Well, say the experts, it's a '"non-fighting martial art."

Sponsored by the UVic Aikido Club, the workshop — for aikidoists and non-aikidoists who would like to learn a little about the sport — is being conducted by Mary Heiny, a third-degree black belt holder from Seattle who trained under a master in Japan.

Cost of the four-hour workshop is $6 but hurry if you're interested. The club is limiting it to the first 50 who apply.

Nanaimo Plans Entry In Junior Boxla Loop

The Nanaimo and District Lacrosse Association has taken steps it hopes will lead to the inclusion of a Nanaimo team in the Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League in 1978.

In a major executive shuffle, the Nanaimo Jr. "B" Timbermen now will be known as the North Island Jr. "B" Timbermen and will be headed by general manager Dave Weighill and coach Ken Maughan.

Larry Maughan will be the assistant manager with Ken (Lefty) Best as assistant coach.

This executive had undertaken the job of building a team that will apply for entry in the WCMJLL next season and is appealing for assistance in the form of additional club directors from within the North Island area.

Players (17-21 years of age) in the North Island area (Cowichan Valley to Campbell River) are advised that a team meeting will be held Saturday, Feb. 26, at the Nanaimo Civic Arena at 3:30 p.m.

Anybody wishing further information is asked to contact Weighill at 758-1483 or Ken Maughan at 754-5640.

A BAD FALL . . . AND TOUGH RIDERS

Racing's Spectres Lie In Wait for Cauthen

NEW YORK (AP) — As one who has travelled the road, Eddie Arcaro sees two spectres lying in wait for horse racing's sensational, 16-year-old apprentice, Steve Cauthen.

"Wait for that first fall — the kid hasn't had a real bad accident yet," said the king of the stakes riders now enjoying the life of a country gentleman in Miami.

"I haven't had the privilege of seeing young Cauthen ride yet, but from what I've heard from a lot of people, the boy is an excellent rider. They say he's cool, has a mind of a 24-year-old and a natural feel for horses.

"I think it's great. He has given horse racing a big boost. It's good to see the sport back in the headlines."

However, Old Banana Nose — as they called him — is disinclined to apply immediate superstar status to the Kentucky star who, with 121 winners this year, as of Wednesday, is off to the fastest winning start in the sport's history.

"Nobody was a better bug that Bill Shoemaker," Arcaro said. "Remember, Bill was riding mostly on the West Coast and against the best riders of the day — Johnny Longden, Jack Westrope and Ted Atkinson. He had little choice of mounts. The top stables had their own riders under contract.

"New York, at this particular time of the year, is the best place for a kid to make a good showing. The best riders run away from cold weather. So Cauthen hasn't had to go against the tough guys — Vasquez and Cordero.

"Riding is easier in New York, too. The rules are tougher than anywhere. Your number goes down even if you bump a horse in New York. In California they ride closer. There are more jam-ups, more chances for accidents."

Cauthen, Arcaro said, is fortunate to have so far avoided any tragic spills.

"I had my first bad fall when I was 17," Eddie said. "I was riding in Chicago on a horse named Gun Fire. I got cut off and went down in the middle of the pack. I got a fractured skull and a punctured lung. I was sidelined for four months. I wanted to quit, but I had a tough guy who was my boss. He pushed me right back on a horse as soon as I was fit."

A fall, Arcaro said, is the horror of every man who takes to the saddle.

"This is a tough game. A man who says he isn't afraid of a spill is either an idiot or a liar. We had seven killed in 1975 and five last year. There must be 24 or 25 paraplegics.

"Accidents happen. You can't escape them. And how you handle them marks the progress of your career."

Next to a fall, Arcaro said, weight is the ghost that most haunts the tiniest champions in sports.

"Cauthen, like Shoemaker, is very small, I understand," he said. "But they tell me he has big hands and big feet. When I raced they wouldn't sign you up if you had big hands and feet because they figured you were still growing."

Arcaro rode for 31 years, winning 554 stakes races — including five triumphs in the Kentucky Derby, six Belmonts, six Preaknesses and two Triple Crowns — before retiring in 1961.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As all bridge players know, there are occasions when the defenders' trumps should be gathered in immediately; and there are times when trumps should not be touched until "more pressing business" has been taken care of. This theme is embodied in today's deal, which came up in the 1973 National Championships.

♣ A K 9 4

◇ Q

SOUTH
♠ J 7 3
♡ Q J 10 3 2
◇ A 3 2
♣ Q 6

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡
3 ◇	3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

West's three-diamond bid was the weak jump overcall, showing a six-card suit within a poor hand.

A low spade was played from dummy on the opening lead, East taking the trick with his ace. East shifted to the diamond queen, South's ace winning. Declarer then led a low heart to the board's ace, after which he returned a heart. When East played low, South won the trick with his queen.

Then followed the queen, king and ace of clubs, South discarding his deuce of diamonds on the third club lead. Thus his only losers were a spade, a diamond and a trump.

When the deal was replayed (this was a team-of-four match), our new South declarer also arrived at a four-heart contract (with West making a two-diamond overcall, instead of three diamonds). The play to the first two tricks was identical to that which occurred at the first table: West's spade opening was captured by East, and the diamond queen was returned to South's ace.

But this South declarer adopted a different line of play. Instead of drawing trumps immediately as his counterpart had done, he decided to try to get rid of one of his losing diamonds before drawing trumps. Unfortunately, when he discarded the deuce of diamonds on the third club lead, West ruffed his with singleton trump.

The defenders had now made two tricks; and it was impossible for declarer to avoid losing a diamond plus a trick to the trump king. And so South incurred a one-trick set, for a loss of 100 points. Thus, as it happened, declarer's hurry to dispose of a diamond cost him his contract.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, Feb. 26

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Check messages, directions, instructions — misquotes could be plentiful. Know it and double powers of observation. Relative could be singing blues for mere sake of complaining. Organize your own priorities. Protect interests — fulfill responsibilities, obligations. You're going to be rewarded for efforts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obtain valid hint from Aries message — do you own task not jobs other should be doing for themselves. Refuse to be a human crying towel. Accent on protecting assets, finding ways to intelligently utilize funds. Aggressive, fast-talking individual is in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle is such that you have chance to rectify errors, to gain advantage from another's experience. Superior admits puzzlement and will let you carry the ball. Be ready with hard facts, not wishful thinking.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight teaching, learning, intuition. What was feared could turn out to be "on your side." Know it and proceed witeh added confidence. Another Cancer, a Leo and Aquarian could be part of your personal scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The number "3" could crop up throughout your day. Emphasis on calls, writing, artistic expression, communication with one at a distance. You may also be concerned about weight, diet, a scattering of forces. Promise of romantic interlude lends spice.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Dig deep for information — you could strike pay dirt. Someone "important" wants to make room for you at top. Property settlement could be in picture. Aquarius, Scorpio, Taurus persons figure prominently. What had been elusive will now be within your grasp.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be prepared for change, travel, variety, special communication from member of opposite sex. Distance, philosophy, education could dominate. Basic issues tend to "slide away." Means you may be more concerned with future prospects than with current events. Strive for balance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on home base, arrangements within family situation, domestic adjustments. You win with diplomacy, lose by attempting to force issues. Taurus, Libra individuals figure prominently. Accent on deep feelkngs, hidden emotions. You'll see!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): See as is, not as you wish places and persons might be. Give full play to inner feelings. You sense now when something momentous is to occur. Pisces, Virgo individuals are in picture. Your ability to know without knowing, to react without formal training is much in evidence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Unusual dream deserves interpretation. The number "8" ffirures prominently. Accent on basic services, health, employment, dealings with individual who means busines and can be of financial aid — if you show willingness to take on more responsibility.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish rather than begin project. Tie loose ends. Strive to improve display, distribution, image. A photographer could play significant role. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Affair of heart could dominate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stress new starts, originality, independence. You make inroads toward goal. You may not feel progress is sensational, but it is significant. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons could figure prominently. Basic problem can be resolved.

If February 26th is your birthday you are determined, stubborn, attractive and creative. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. Ictober will be one of your most significant months of 1977, a year which finds you discovering what is really of importance. You see people, placeds as they exist — you learn valuable lesson as result of disillusionment. What you own will grow in value.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Greg glanced at the slip of paper and handed it back. "Quite a coincidence both numbers having the same six digits like that," he commented.

"Sure, but that's only part of it," Charlie told him. "You get one by switching the first and last halves or the other, and it's just three less than four times as great."

What were the two numbers?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: PRINT was 10375 (odd).

Rodgers Sues Alouettes

MONTREAL (CP) — Slotback Johnny Rodgers and his John R. Superstar Ltd. corporation filed suit Thursday in Quebec Superior Court seeking $818,000 from Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Rodgers, who signed a series of one-year contracts with San Diego Chargers of the National Football League last month, claims in the declaration accompanying the writ that his contracts with the Alouettes — calling for $646,000 over the next four years — are still in force.

In addition, the former Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Nebraska, who joined the Alouettes in 1973, alleges he and his corporation have suffered $150,000 damages to reputation throughout Canada by being "wrongfully attacked and maligned by statements to the media by the club."

There is a further claim for current indebtedness to the corporation of $63,500, which includes $42,500 due to now on the 1977 contract.

A total of $213,500 is demanded as due the plaintiffs now and $604,500 is claimed as payable when due on the four years of the contraet claimed to be still in force.

Rodgers jumped to the Chargers after a 1976 season during which he was continually embroiled in controversy over missing practices and team meetings.

Yank Bat Boys' Beef Pays Off

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief pitcher Sparky Lyle said Thursday that New York Yankees will pay their four batboys world series shares of $100 each out of their fine fund, an account the players had intended to use for a party.

It was reported Wednesday the batboys had not been paid their part of the world series money traditionally meted out by a vote of the players.

Lyle said the neglected payment was a mix-up on his part.

"It was just a misunderstanding and I take full responsibility for it," he said.

The Yankees had voted series shares at a Sept. 28 meeting which he missed. He said several of the players there wanted to keep the batboys' shares small in order to keep their own portions large.

Lyle also said he and other players met later and decided to give each batboy $100 out of the team fine fund, which contained money players had assessed each other for small infractions such as batting out of turn in practice.

"Not all the players participated in the fine fund, so I was given the money to hold," Lyle said. "We were to pay the batboys and use the rest for a party . . .

"I didn't want to keep the money around the house, so I put it in my own chequing account. With one thing and another, I forgot to mail it to them."

World Series champion Cincinnati Reds voted one-quarter series shares ($6,591) to each of their two home batboys and $200 to two batboys of visiting teams.

Level of Students' Literacy Falling, Says Teachers' Report

EDMONTON (CP) — An increasing number of students entering Canada's universities are deficient in English training, says a report released Thursday by the Association of Canadian University Teachers of English (ACUTE).

The report also states a trend towards demanding less from university students and the proliferation of alternative English university courses are leading away from sound English education.

The 111-page report was prepared for ACUTE by two University of Toronto professors, F. E. L. Priestly and H. I. Kerpneck.

An ACUTE spokesman said the report — funded by the Richard Ivey Foundation — was commissioned in 1975 because of the widespread belief that the level of literacy in students had fallen.

"Hard evidence is hard to come by," said Dr. Juliet McMaster, ACUTE president and English professor at the University of Alberta.

"But most English teachers feel students are not getting the rigorous training they used to get in such areas as using grammar and in basic writing."

Priestly and Kerpneck said their report finds much to blame and offers few words of praise.

But they added they did not find English teaching in Canadian universities in a state of ruin of depravity.

The report states most students entering university are much less proficient in English than in the past, but the top 10 or 15 per cent are as good as ever.

Reasons for the deficiency in English include a deterioration in public language, partly due to the pervasive effects of television.

"In the days of radio, there was careful monitoring of grammar," said McMaster. "Now, in television, you can catch people, including politicians, in slack usage all the time."

Other causes mentioned in the report are: a decrease in the time spent in teaching English and grammar in schools; abandonment of external exams and a decline in the qualifications of English teachers, coupled with greater demands on them.

Also criticized was the substitution in most provinces of the bachelor of education degree — usually carrying minimal requirements for English study — for the bachelor of arts degree followed by one year of teacher training as the normal qualifications for teaching English in high schools.

The professors said they see universities as having a choice between steadily lowering standards or trying to help incoming freshmen.

Although the deficiencies are at the top pre-university level, the professors recognize that universities will continue to become involved in trying to raise standards of English training.

Drank Herself to Death ... With Water

MIAMI (UPI) — A 29-year-old woman killed herself by drinking large amounts of water, perhaps the first such fatality ever recorded, medical authorities report.

Dade County deputy medical examiner Dr. Ronald Wright said Thursday he was listing the death of Tina Christopherson as "probable suicide."

"As far as I know, it's the first case of its kind," Wright said. The victim died from "water intoxication," compulsively drinking up to four gallons of water daily.

It was, said a cardiologist, "an incredibly slow and painful way to bring on death."

Miss Christopherson, who was diagnosed as suffering from "chronic schizophrenia," had told friends she drank water, sometimes as much as four gallons a day, to "cleanse her body" of suspected cancer.

Her mother died of stomach cancer in 1973.

Doctors said the woman upset her body chemistdy by the obsessive water-drinking.

Her tissues, particularly her lungs, swelled, and a heart rhythm disturbance began.

Death resulted Feb. 18 when Miss Christopherson finally could not breathe and her heart stopped.

Search for Children Leads to Maid's Job

NAPLES, Italy (Reuter) — A 32-year-old Canadian divorcee is working as a maid here while trying to trace her three children who disappeared with her former husband six years ago, police sources said today.

Karin Barth of Montreal, has asked the police here to help her find her three daughters: Concetta, 10, Annabella, 9, and Claudia, 7.

After divorcing Italian emigrant Francesco Nicoletti in 1970, she let the children go to Italy with him for a visit and he never sent them back, said a statement she made to police here.

Mrs. Barth, who asked the international police organization Interpol to help her trace the children, only recently received news that they are in the Naples area.

The sources said she has taken a job as a maid to finance her stay in Naples while she tries to find the children.

FISHY ISSUE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A city councilman who fell down the stairs of City Hall last month after slipping on a wrapped tuna fish sandwich is suing for $5 million.

An attorney for Councilman Frank Biondolillo said his client was still in hospital with "permanent injuries to his spine" which have partially paralyzed his right leg, foot and toes.

Biondolillo notified the city of his intention to sue for $5 million to cover medical costs and lost income. The 49-year-old councilman's wife, Sally, also will sue for $500,000 for loss of services.

Kidney from Russia with Love

NEW YORK (UPI) — A kidney taken from the body of a Russian teen-ager who was killed in an automobile accident Monday in Moscow has been successfully transplanted into a 32-year-old Brooklyn construction worker.

It was not the first such transatlantic transplant, but it was believed to be the first involving an organ from a Communist country.

The donor, not identified, died of head injuries. One of his kidneys went to another Russian, and the other, packed in ice, was flown to New York from Moscow.

It was placed in the body of Jose Serrano of Brooklyn in an operation performed at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Centre.

Hospital sources said the transplant was the result of an agreement reached last spring between Dr. Albert Rubin, director of New York-Cornell's Rogosin Kidney Centre, and Dr. Valery Schumakov of the Moscow Transplant Institute.

Because the Soviet Union accepts the criterion of brain death, transplants are more easily performed there than in most parts of the United States, a hospital spokesman said.

He said Schumakov called Rubin as soon as the kidneys became available to ask whether one was needed in New York.

Serrano, who has been on dialysis for a year, was chosen from a list of possible recipients.

BIG VINNIE IN HIDING

HONOLULU — Vincent Teresa, 48, a one-time New England Mafia figure who turned government informer, may be in hiding in Hawaii after being deported from Australia.

Authorities said they did not know whether Teresa known as Big Vinnie remained in the islands or took another plane for the mainland.

Before leaving Australia, Teresa said: "If those guys in America know I'm on a certain plane, I could get it at the airport — right between the eyes."

U.K. Scientist Faked Data

LONDON — A young British biochemist today admitted faking results of published experiments during the last four years and apologized to the world scientific community.

The remarkable confession was made in a letter to the authoritative science journal Nature from Dr. Robert Gullis, who last year ended two years of work at the Max Planck Institute in West Germany.

Nature published two papers based on the phoney data.

"I wish to disclose the fact that papers published in several journals with myself as principal author are not reliable," Gullis wrote.

"The curves and values published are mere figments of my imagination, and during my short research career I published my hypotheses rather than experimentally determined results."

In all, eight papers based on Gullis's imagination were published in six leading scientific journals, and eight other scientists attached their names to his as co-authors.

The papers dealt with the response of particular cells to opiate drugs, and would have been read by almost every biochemist in the world dealing with similar research.

The deception was revealed after Gullis's fellow scientists at the Max Planck Institute were not able to duplicate his findings.

Gullis, understood to be back in Britain but not working as a scientist, said in his letter that he takes full responsibility for "unfortunate incidents" and said he wanted to "apologize to the scientific community and various people involved."

ONE-TIME CENTREFOLD girl in Penthouse magazine, Fiona Watson, 23, is reported in London to be dating Prince Charles. She appeared in the magazine three years ago wearing only a string of pink beads.

Bukovsky Blasted

MOSCOW—Tass, the Soviet news agency, began a fresh attack today against exiled dissident Vladimir Bukovsky, labelling him a criminal.

Tass commentator Alexei Petrov said Bukovsky's reputation in the West as a writer is undeserved. He cited Bukovsky's convictions of anti-Soviet activities and accused him of not working a day in his life.

Bukovsky has spent 12 of his 34 years in Soviet prisons. He wa freed from prison last year.

Butterflies Weren't Free

LONDON — Rare and exotic foreign beauties were the downfall of bank clerk John Proctor. He stole them.

Proctor was convicted Thursday of removing 182 rare butterflies worth $5,100 from London's Natural History Museum.

Prosecution said Proctor, 36, sneaked the butterflies out of their cases while pretending to study them during his lunch break.

ANARCHISTS REMEMBERED

MILAN, Italy — Veteran Italian Socialist leader Pietro Nenni is asking U.S. President Carter to re-examine the trial of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, two Italian anarchists electrocuted in Boston, Mass. on Aug. 23, 1927.

In a telegram Thursday to the American embassy in Rome for forwarding to Carter on the 50th anniversary of the executions, Nenni described the trial as a "denial of justice."

SENTENCE DELAYED

OAKLAND, Calif. — The sentencing of Wendy Yoshimura, 34, Patricia Hearst's underground associate, on weapons and explosives charges has been delayed for three weeks because her probation report was not ready.

Judge Martin Pulich postponed the action Thursday.

Last month Miss Yoshimura was convicted on charges relating to discovery of a cache of arms and bombs found in a garage she rented in Berkeley, Calif., in 1972. She faces a possible maximum sentence of 15 years on one count, and five years on each of two other counts.

Attorneys for Miss Yoshimura, free on bail, said they planned to file a motion for a new trial next week.

John Delivers: Pizza or Bomb?

By Joseph F. Sullivan
New York Times

PRINCETON, N.J. — John A. Phillips's life hasn't been the same since he became Princeton University's Tiger cheerleader, started his own pizza-delivery business and designed an atomic bomb.

The pizza operation is attracting a lot more customers — "there are 14 of us involved in the business," Phillips says, "and on a good night we can gross $400". Phillips's physics paper, which first drew public attention. October, is attracting interest, too: officials of both Pakistan and France have asked the lean, dark-haired 21-year-old senior for copies of the report.

The Pakistani caller, Phillips said, "kept talking to me and said it would be a worthwhile thing to do." But, Phillips said, he turned down the request, leaving the caller "upset."

Phillips, whose report on making a bomb for $2,000 was based on publicly available information, said he had also rejected the French request.

He said he had reported the call from the Pakistani to Sen. William Proxmire because he respected the senator, and to the Central Intelligence Agency. The call from the French came three months ago and from the Pakistani on Jan. 18.

Proxmire, who disclosed the episode this week, said it illustrated how desperate some foreign countries were to attain nuclear bomb capabilities.

Iqvas Butt, the Pakistan information minister, denied in Washington that his country wanted to build a bomb, and he said contact had been made with Phillips by a junior embassy official who had obtained his name from the United States Energy Research and Development Administration.

For a time, Phillips's classmates called him "Shroom" — short for mushroom, which referred both to his pizza business and his physics project. The other day he relaxed in white jeans and school sweater at the Ivy Club, a social and eating club on campus, and conducted interviews with reporters when he was not in class.

He recalled that his being the only student who had auditioned for the right to wear the tiger costume and cavort at the football and basketball games last September and his Aristotle Pizza — titled after his middle name — were his chief points of identification on campus.

After new news of his nuclear paper began circulating last fall, the student, who is from North Haven, Conn., became an overnight celebrity.

Phillips, who is majoring in aero space science, said the research and writing of his paper had taken five and a half months, and was based on information he had obtained from the school library and public government papers he had got through the mail and during a trip to Washington.

His adviser on the project was Prof. Freeman Dyson, a physicist at the Institute for Advanced Studies who has worked on nuclear projects and who was curious about how Phillips had obtained all his material.

"I think it was a case of someone without access to classified material guessing correctly at a component known to someone who has security clearance," Phillips said.

He has been advised by his teachers, who gave him an "A" for the paper, and by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who visited him after the foreign contacts, not to show his paper to anyone.

Phillips said the only part of the paper that could be sensitive dealt with how to create a "supercriticial mass" in the bomb and set the stage for its explosion. In the bombs that fell on Japan, the component used to trigger the bombs was TNT. Phillips said his component made his version somewhat more advanced than the first-generation bombs, but not advanced by today's standards.

The success of his school paper has delighted his parents, Prof. and Mrs. Aris Phillips of Yale University. His father teaches mechanical engineering.

Phillips also has received a number of job offers, and believes he has a manufacturer lined up for a motorcycle safety device he designed.

"It should reduce all major injuries motorcyclists are susceptible to, up to a speed of 40 miles per hour," he said.

He worked on the motorcycle device after crossing the country from Berkeley, Calif., to Princeton over a two-week period last year.

"I really enjoyed the experience, but after I learned more abut how dangerous motorcycle accidents can be, I'm amazed at myself," he said.

Phillips said he had decided to try to design an atomic bomb to test the contention of proponents of easy access to plutonium and uranium that small countries could never design a bomb.

"I think I've demonstrated that it doesn't do any good to prevent dissemination of information, because it's already out," he said. "The only was to stop proliferation of nuclear weapons now is to restrict the distribution of plutonium and uranium."

Drag Strip Proposed

NANAIMO — Car racing enthusiasts here want to use part of the Cassidy Airport runway as a drag strip.

The Motor-way Steering Committee has asked city council for support in its bid to persuade the federal government to allow a 75-foot wide section of the 200-foot runway to be used for racing.

George Stevens, spokesman for the group, said plans call for a grandstand, parking for 3,000 cars and ancillary buildings.

Stevens said the runway was built to handle large jets but is only being used by light aircraft. There is plenty of room, he said.

Council referred the matter to its airport committee.

GREASE ZOO

TORONTO (CP) — Employees at Philip Balamut's service station work in unusual surroundings—they have to contend with piranhas, goldfish, myna birds and an eight-yearold monkey named Chimo who likes gaskets as much as bananas.

But the customers and their children keep returning to the menagerie for motorists established a few years ago when Mr. Balamut decided he wanted something better than just a grease pit.

"So I added flower pots, fish, the monkey, birds and everything else," he said. "It's been a lot of fun but there have been some expensive and funny moments."

One of them was the memorable day that Chimo sat on the piranha's aquarium in the office while all employees were tending cars outside.

A piranha grabbed her toe. She went wild and jumped around screaming, refusing to let anyone inside to get to the cash register during the lengthy time it took for her to ease the pain.

On another occasion, she ate gaskets destined for a customer's car.

"We'd been waiting nearly three weeks for those parts," Mr. Balamut said. "She just chewed them up."

He was forced to lend his own car to the customer during the three weeks it took to get new gaskets. Another time she grabbed $3 from a young hitch-hiker, the only money he had, and Mr. Balamut repaid

Ghost Town Gazette Replaces Cereal Boxes

By JOE WHEELAN

SUPERIOR, Wyo. (AP) — The Ghost Town Gazette doesn't pretend to be an up-to-the-minute newspaper, says editor Sandra Zbegner.

But it is an ambitious undertaking in a community that hasn't had its own newspaper for the last 35 years.

"It's something to read in the morning instead of a cereal box," Mrs. Zbegner said of the monthly newspaper she began publishing in June.

Superior's rebirth during the 1970s helped inspire her to launch the paper. She said Bob Marsky, mayor of this community of 550, suggested that she key the paper on his column about town government.

Mrs. Zbegner writes stories on such things as child-birth techniques and solar radiation.

The name of the newspaper comes straight from the late 1950s and 1960s when the bottom fell out of the community's coal-mining economy.

Union Pacific operated the mines to supply coal for its locomotives until the late 1940s. But when the railroad turned to diesel, the town's only source of income evaporated.

Without jobs, residents found little reason to continue living in the arid community that lies 7,100 feet above sea level in a hollow on the western edge of the Red Desert. The nearest town of any size is Rock Springs, and it is 30 miles away.

Most of the residents sought jobs elsewhere. Only a handful, mostly retired miners, stayed on.

The present decade brought construction of a 2,000-megawatt, coal-fired power plant, requiring a work force that numbered in the thousands. Superior, only 10 miles from the plant site, had dozens of empty houses to accommodate them.

Mrs. Zbegner, whose husband is a laboratory technician at the plant, said she was eager to try something new after finding little to do during her first year in the rustic community.

She described the newspaper as a "hand-to-mouth" operation but said it was meeting expenses, despite the lack of financial backers. Most of those who bought the newspaper were out-of-state subscribers who used to live here.

For 15 cents an issue, subscribers got eight pages of in-depth articles, human-interest stories, recipes, outdoor living tips and, of course, news about Superior.

"I want it to be more than just a Superior newspaper," she said.

She has enlisted the aid of five part-time reporters.

Now she has set her sights on publishing the paper twice a month.

"Things are starting to happen in Superior now."

Rabbit Trade Hopping

EDMONTON (CP) — With several hotels and large restaurants in the Edmonton and Calgary areas indicating they would like to add rabbit to their menus, the demand for the furry animal is outstripping the supply, said Cameron Ross of the Alberta agriculture department's processing branch.

Mr. Ross said studies have shown rabbits have more protein and fewer calories than beef, lamb, pork or poultry.

There now are two plants in Alberta, in the north-central area and the south, which process about 15,000 rabbits a year.

"The plant in southern Alberta has been so short of rabbits that it has had to get them from the United States.

The plants now pay about 55 cents a pound for live fryer rabbits and about 45 cents for mature roaster rabbits. The fryers retail at about $2.25 a pound and the roasters slightly less.

Mr. Ross said raising rabbits can be a profitable hobby if managed properly for people living on small acreages because they require a small space, are clean and easily cared for.

NARWHAL TUSKS HELPING CHILDREN

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — An Eskimo carver and a Saskatchewan surgeon are going to mass-produce surical pins of ivory from Arctic animals to help children with growing problems.

Nick Sikkuark, 33, of the Northwest Territories and Regina orthopedic surgeon Dr. Borden Bachynski are using ivory from narwhal and walrus tusks in a surgical procedure known as leg-lengthening.

Mr. Sikkuark is a self-taught and self-employed artist living in Pelly Bay, an Eskimo settlement of 255 people more than 1,200 miles north of Winnipeg.

The territorial government is providing him with a precision lathe to produce the ivory pins, each the size of a toothpick.

Dr. Bachynskin who has been working on using ivory pins instead of metal for 15 years, has refined the surgical techniques to implant the pins in children's legs and help them develop normal limbs.

The technique of leg-lengthening is a simple principle. The problem exists when increased blood flow in a growing child's leg makes the limb grow too quickly, with the result that the youngster has one short leg and a permanent limp.

To counteract this, bone surgeons have developed a method of implanting a foreign object such as a brass screw in a bone in the shorter leg. This stimulates greater blood flow and the bone grows.

Surgeons have found that metal pins can result in body complications such as swelling, irritation, blood problems and unsuccessful surgery.

They have been searching for years for a more suitable material for implanting. Ivory was thought to be one of the least harmful substances to human bone and one which would be absorbed over a number of years after the surgery.

The Formula

Refrigerator Deodorant

By NORMAN H. STARK

Leftovers in the refrigerator often pick up the odors from other foods. Obviously what is needed is an odor-absorbing substance that will contain the scents so they won't intermingle. After all, we can't blame a kid for not wanting to drink garlic-flavored milk. So here's an effective low-cost way to prevent the problem.

You'll need one cup PORTLAND CEMENT, one-fourth cup SILICA GEL (any refrigeration serviceman will have this), one-fourth cup CHALK (found at drugstores or chemical supply houses), and one cup VERMICULITE (From a building supply dealer or gardening supply store). Mix these ingredients thoroughly and add sufficient water to form a cream-like paste. This mixture may then be poured into molds, which can be paper boxes or metal cans, and allowed to dry at about 300 degrees Fahrenheit in an oven. To use, place molded blocks in refrigerator. After several weeks of use remove and reactivate by putting in oven for three to four hours at 400 degrees Fahrenheit. After which, it may be reused.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Red Tape Stops Study

VANCOUVER (CP) — Legal and administrative problems have put a temporary halt to tests of a new method of male contraception.

Dr. Robin Percival-Smith of the University of B.C. said Monday that the federal health department is looking into the legal aspects of using the drugs, and there is discussion on whether World Health Organization research money should go directly to the university, or be channelled through Ottawa.

The project is to test effectiveness of the hormones progesterone and testosterone to reduce sperm. About 30 volunteers are involved.

Dress Drew Criticism

WASHINGTON (WP) — If Rosalynn Carter and Margaret Trudeau took time out to talk about fashion — and it is very unlikely that they did — they would find they had a lot in common.

Both like clothes but don't like to harp on the subject, press. Both have an independent style and opt for the comfortable and casual including jeans for the most informal occasions. And just as Mrs. Carter brought her sewing machine to the White House, Mrs. Trudeau has one in her residence at 24 Sussex Drive in Ottawa.

Mrs. Trudeau, who occasionally hops on her bike, wearing jeans, and goes off to shop with a similarly dressed Royal Canadian Mounted Policeman trailing her on a bike, likes to browse unnoticed through the racks. She makes her selections at boutiques such as Josee Les Jardin, John Warden or Rive Gauche in Montreal or the fine Holt Renfrew specialty shop.

"In the beginning she bought a lot of clothes from Canadian designers," observes Warden, a designer of ready-to-wear and lingerie who has his own botique. "But now she seems to prefer others. She may be shopping on Seventh Avenue." Later he added sadly, "It's really too bad. She could do for Canadian fashion what Mrs. Onassis did for the Americans."

There are French designer labels in her wardrobe, including Yves Saint Laurent and Chloe, and outfits from Italian designer Andre Laug, but for very special occasions she makes her own dresses. She designed and made he own wedding dress (and baked the cake, too) and created the wedding dress as well for the nanny to her children, Mary Alice Mullally.

Designer Warden, who has not seen Mrs. Trudeau in the dress worn to Monday's state dinner at the White House, terms the choice "a little on the classic side" but believes it was "just as fashionable as a long dress."

Wini Rider, fashion editor of the Montreal Gazette, says Mrs. Trudeau's choice of a short dress for a state dinner probably grew out of the much touted informality at the White House. "We all have been reading how low-key the Carters have been so perhaps she was responding to that."

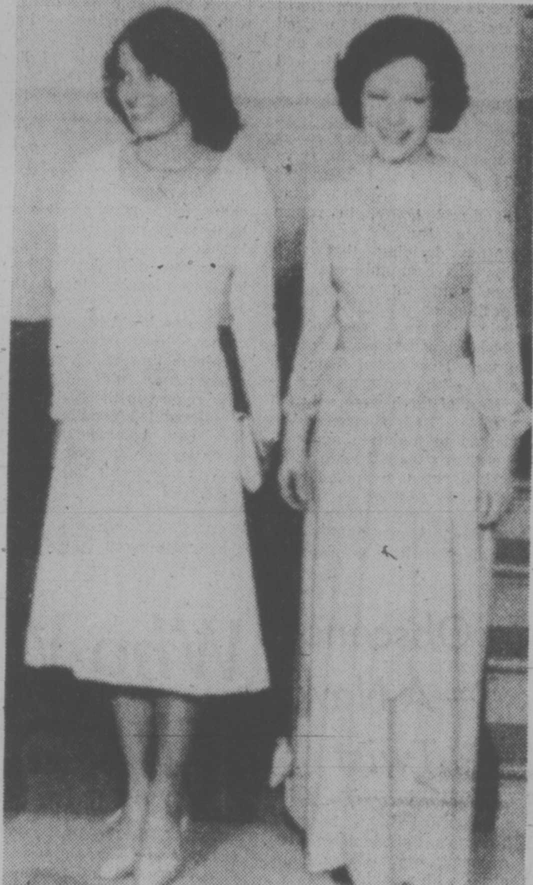
There is little written about Mrs. Trudeau's clothes in the Canadian papers, not only because she doesn't want it discussed but also because people are not that concerned, generally, about what she wears, according to Carolyn Weiner of Holt Renfrew. "She's a nery private person and she does her own thing. I admire her for that," Weiner adds.

One Montreal boutique invited press coverage of Mrs. Trudeau's shopping excursion to the store and later found all the clothes she had purchased returned to the shop. And she has not returned there since.

Several American designers have criticized Mrs. Trudeau's choice for Monday's dinner and Laetitia Baldridge, former social secretary to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis when she was the First Lady, agrees. "Unequivocably it should have been a long dress," says Baldridge. "It's a most formal and dignified occasion."

It's hardly the first time Mrs. Trudeau's independent style has been criticized. Mrs. Trudeau told one caller to a radio station, where she was answering questions about having worn blue jeans and a Liberal party tee-shirt on a visit to Cuba, "I dress and act like a lady most of the time. I have some beautiful lady-like clothes."

To another caller she announced that she no longer wanted to be simply "a rose in my husband's lapel." Then she added, "If you rely completely on protocol, you can become a robot."



CONTROVERSY developed over the short dress worn by Mrs. Margaret Trudeau, left, to the Washington state dinner she attended with Mrs. Carter.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Readers: We've had so many letters requesting specific inmformation on individual plants that we are going through the plants, one at a time, sharing all pertinent information. You will want to clip these columns as we'll be introducing you to new potential plant friends, as well as reintroducing you to some old favorites.

GERANIUM. This huge family (Geraniaceae) is certainly one of the best known, if not the oldest variety, of flowering indoor plants. More than 500 species were brought from South Africa to Europe by Dutch traders and it wasn't long before potted geraniums were in windows the world over.

Geraniums are very easy to cultivate indoors, but they must sit in the very brightest spot in your home. During the summer months, which is the growing period, the plants must be kept uniformly damp. Provide humidity with dry wells all year round. You can feed them every month during this blooming period with an acid-base fertilizer specially formulated for flowering plants, but use it half strength. It's a good idea to put these plants outside during the summer, in a par;tially sunny spot. Pinch back new growth frequently to insure full plants.

In the fall, when you bring them back inside, bathe them thoroughly with biodegradable soap and warm water, just to make sure all potential pests are removed. If biodegradable soap is not available, use a mild liquid soap in very small quantity. The general rule for washing is to clean off the leaves of all plants periodically to prevent dust and dirt from clogging the pores of the leaves, just as they clog the pores of your skin.

When the plant has finished blooming you can easily take stem cuttings. Geraniums are simple to propagate and fun to share with your friends. Just put the stems in water and chances are they will sprout; then plant in small pots, being careful not to pot too deep.

If these plants are watered or fed too much during the winter months they have a tendency to get leggy and will not produce many blooms. Fresh air is a must and they will not be happy where there is artificial heat or air conditioning.

The geranium blooms range in color from red to lavender to pink to white, and many varieties have two-tone leaves. Some flowers have a scent, some are large, some are quite small, but two things they all have in common are their beauty and their willingness to please!

NEW WHEELCHAIR RUN BY BREATH AND CHIN

NAGOYA, Japan (Reuter) — A battery-powered wheelchair that can be controlled by the occupant's breath and chin has been developed by a Japanese vehicle parts manufacturer.

The wheelchair, whose batteries run for 2½ hours before recharging, has been designed for people paralysed from the neck down.

By blowing into holes in a switch box, the occupant can recline the chair. By manipulating the box with the chin and activating switces with the breath, an occupant can also move the chair at various speeds, backward as well as forward, and turn it off.

Each chair costs about $2,900.

How to Purchase a Mattress

By LYNNE GORDON

caveat emptor

There is nothing better than a good night's sleep and nothing worse than a bad mattress. We spend close to 3,000 hours a year, or one third of our entire life in bed, so the choice of a mattress that ensures sound, restful sleep is an important one.

When you are selecting a mattress, don't just judge the attractiveness of the cover — it's what is underneath the ticking that's important. A "good" mattress is one that is comfortable and suits the size and shape of the sleeper. It should be firm, but not too hard. When selecting a mattress, consider the kind of construction — inner spring or foam, the kind of ticking and padding, and the box spring.

A lot of misleading terminology has come into use in the last 30 or 40 years over the proper degree of firmness of a mattress. Most people know that a mattress that is too soft can be disastrous for your back. With the older, softer mattresses there was a tendency to sag where the main body weight rested.

An orthopedic surgeon told me that "This will not give total support to the small ligaments and joints in the back. This means that some of those muscles have to work overtime to give you support while you sleep — the body is not allowed to be quiet or still." With a firmer mattress, one that give a measure of support and automatically adjusts to the weight of the neck, trunk, pelvis and limbs, this is not a problem.

But how do you tell if a mattress is too soft, too firm, or just impossible to sleep on? According to a retailer, "The biggest mistake people make is buying a mattress that is too hard which not only interfers with sleep, but can also damage the shoulders and neck."

Choosing a mattress that is firm, but not hard, is the central point. The materials that determine firmness and quality are the weight and gauge of the coils, the kind of inner spring construction and the padding.

The number and thickness of the coils will have a lot to do with the degree of firmness. The higher the coil count, and the heavier or thicker the coils and wires that tie and support them, the greater the firmness. Coils have gauges which correspond to their thickness; the higher the gauge or number, the thicker the coil.

There are two types of inner-spring coiled mattresses, the open coil and the pocket spring. The open coil has approximately 300 separately attached springs, the ends knotted together to hold them in place. The pocket coil, which gives a firmer support, has approximately 800 springs, each encased in a fabric pocket and then sewed together.

Ideally, an inner spring mattress should become firmer as the weight on it increases. Otherwise, a condition called "hamocking" will occur, with the heavier parts of the body depressed and the lighter parts elevated.

The padding will also determine the firmness of the bed. The padding lies just below the ticking, or outer fabric. It should be of good quality, such as 100 per cent cotton felt. This is a tightly compressed fabric that will not lose it's shape quickly.

The box spring is the most important, and most often overlooked feature of a good bed. The box springs are the foundation of a bed, like the foundations of a house.

The quality of firmness of the box spring is, once again, dependent upon the number of coils, the gauge of the wires holding the coils, and the thickness of the coils. The coil springs are built into a wooden base. The wood parts are screwed, stapled or dowelled at the rounded corners and the cross members, or slats, are usually made of wood or metal.

It is wise to buy the box spring and mattress together. If you are replacing a worn mattress, chances are the box springs are worn as well, since about one third of the resiliency will be supplied by this part.

It is the box spring that really takes the brunt of the body weight and which tends to soften as quickly, or more quickly than your mattress, particularly in the middle. So, if you are buying only a new mattress because of a sagging mid-section, the new one will soon develop one also, due to the lack of support from the box springs.

To check if the box spring is in good shape and can be used with a new mattress, look for cracked coil springs, springs detached from the wooden slats underneath, tears and open seams. Bounce around on it with the mattress on top, to see if it has developed any noises. Measure the box spring you have to be sure that the mattress will not extend beyond the component.

Every dealer I spoke with gave the same advice for the final selection of a mattress — lie down on it before you buy. This may cause some embarrassment if the experiment takes place in the middle of a crowded store, or if there are two or three salespeople standing around. Do you bounce around? Do you curl up in your normal sleeping position? The answer is yes.

Simply feeling the side or centre of the mattress with your hand won't let you know how its going to feel, and what kind of support it will give your back. And when you take your "lie in", test the mattress while it's on top of the box spring — the box spring you will also be purchasing.

Don't be embarrassed to undertake the "true test of a mattress" — the salespeople certainly aren't."

FAIRY TALE QUERIES

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — A Duke University psychologist has completed a study showing that fairy tales read by children in Western cultures are significantly more violent than those read by children in Japan and India.

Dr. Doyle Gentry, professor and head of Duke's division of medical psychology, said a comparison of Grimm's fairy tales depicted twice as many acts of aggression as Indian tales studied and four times as many as the Japanese fairy tales.

"Fairy tales are important transmitters of culture, found in virtually every society possessing a written heritage," said Gentry in a recent interview. "They are read to children at an early age, often before the child has developed the capacity to distinguish between fiction and reality, and before the child has been systematically exposed to other forms of media such as TV and comics."

"Whether fairy tales are going to have any harmful effects on children, like psychologists have suggested cartoons and movies do, I don't know," Gentry said. "This study, which is purely a descriptive one, poses a lot more questions than it answers."

Gentry pointed to examples of aggressiveness such as an elephant trampling a man's head, a crab cutting a crane's throat, and in snow white, the wicked queen salting, cooking and eating an animal heart she believed had been cut from the murdered heroine.

Gentry said his study was conducted along the broad lines of trying to find out why the "United States is clearly the most aggressive culture in the world."

"I do think that if certain things make a difference in the level of violence in our country then at some point we have to identify them and rank them in order of their importance," Gentry said.

"A lot of social scientists and psychiatrists now feel that we see so much violence early in our comic books, in our television programs and in movies that we accept it as a way of resolving conflict," Gentry said.

Qantas Jumbo In Near-Miss

FRANKFURT (Reuter) — Three West German air force Phantom air planes and an Australian jumbo jet carrying 260 persons nearly collided over southern Germany Wednesday night, the federal air safety office said Thursday.

The spokesman said the pilot of the Boeing 747 belonging to the Australian Qantas airline reported the "near-miss" to the Munich air safety centre.

One of the three Phantoms cut across the jumbo's flight path and the other two behind.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

...it tells you how

They Live Rent Free In the Smokies

For years Jim and Lou Hammill sat on their backsides and flapped their "gums" about getting back to a simplier, more agrarian, more rational way of life. But — like many folks — they hestiated to "take the plunge."

Then one day the apartment house they were living in changed hands and the new, money-hungry landlord doubled their rent. That was their cue to stop talking and start doing.

About the same time, they "discovered" a little-known (to them) way of getting back to the land that had been right under their noses for years!

In the course of their previous outings to the Blue Ridge and Great Smoky Mountains of western North Carolina, they had noticed hundreds of dilapidated and (apparently) deserted old houses scattered across the countryside. Yet, until they were forced to move from their apartment, they never thought to ask the owner of one of those places if they could live — rent-free — in an abandoned house, in return for fixing it up.

After deciding that they didn't have anything to lose, they went out and started knocking on doors. And — to their surprise — each of the 30-odd landowners they approached welcomed them, literally, with open arms!

Most of them were only too glad to find someone who wanted to maintain and protect their vacant dwellings.

They were swamped with offers. In addition to shelter, owners offered them such "extras" as free building materials, part-time employment and even financial assistance! (In every case, they were told they could have at least a half acre of ground for gardening.)

They found it a pleasant task to select a domicle that (1) would be suited to their own personal needs, yet (2) could be easily repaired and winterized.

Ultimately, they chose a one-bedroom, single-story house with a large attic (for future family expansion), situated in the midst of 20 acres of forest and pasture.

Their place's No. 1 problem — structurally speaking — consisted of some damage that'd been caused by a mudslide 20 years earlier. (Mud had knocked the foundation away from the rear of the house, and damp rot — along with a few termites — had taken over from there.)

The repair job involved digging away the earth in back of the house, jacking the structure up, and rebuilding the damaged area.

Cost of the project: Nothing! They already owned a shovel, replacement lumber came from a tumbled-down barn, salvaged bricks for the foundation from a nearby burned-out house, and their landlord loaned them the jack.

Since each old house comes with its own unique set of problems Jim and Lou can't offer many rules of thumb with regard to the restoration of dilapidated dwellings. But they can, however, offer a few very general pointers for anyone who wants to try their method of finding a home in the country. They are:

(1) Don't choose a house that's within 20 miles of a tourist area. Your landlord may be tempted — after you've renovated his property — to rent the place out from under you for up to $300 per month (unless, of course, you have a wirtten agreement that protects your rights).

(2) Don't jimp at the first offer that presents itself! Chances are, you can find another house — one needing many fewer man- and or woman-hours of labor to restore — within only a couple of miles. In other words, shop around.

(3) Make sure you have access to water, even if (as in their case) it must be hand-carried from a nearby stream. Water is something you cannot do without.

(4) Plan ahead. Spring is when you should start to insulate your house for the following winter. And winter is when you should start planning your summer garden.

(5) Don't be discouraged when you first begin to restore your "new" home. You'll make all the needed repairs eventually, and your body will get used to your new work schedule. (You won't always pass out from sheer exhaustion at the supper table!)

And — most important — don't be afraid to ask someone for help. Many country folks are proud of their skills and knowledge, and are only too happy to share their know-how.

If you've been wanting to live in the country but (for one reason or another) haven't made your move just yet, start knocking on doors. With a little luck, you'll soon be fixing up a splendid old house and living rent-free!

Obscene — A New Twist

TORONTO (CP) — The phone rang in a house in Toronto's Cabbagetown area. A young woman was home, alone, with a cold.

"This is the Metropolitan Toronto Police," the efficient sounding male voice told her with some urgency.

"We have an obscene phone caller in the neighborhood and we think we have him on a line. A Bell operator can switch him over to your line, and if you'll just talk with him for 10 to 15 minutes we can trace him and nab him. Will you co-operate?"

"It was very speedily done," said the woman, a social worker.

The man who said he was a police officer told her she might not like some of the questions the obscene caller would ask, but said she should answer them, not ask any questions and not be embarrassed.

With an "all right" and what sounded like lines switching, another voice came on the line, "slow and creepy."

There followed a steady stream of intimate questions which the woman tried to answer as vaguely as possible while it slowly dawned on her the whole thing was a very sophisticated ruse that ended after about 15 minutes when the man clicked off in mid-sentence.

The woman called police who said it was definitely a hoax and advised her to call Bell Canada if it happened again.

It is a new twist in the obscene phone callers' repertoire, said Insp. Robert Sterling.

"They have all types of approaches. And some of them are getting pretty sophisticated."

The problem for police is trying to catch the caller with the phone in his hand and the line still connected.

"Convictions are few and far beween," he said.

Who Will Raise The Children?

NEW YORK (AP) — For nearly two years, James Levine crisscrossed the country talking to fathers who have willingly stepped into the shoes of mothers.

The result of those conversations is his recently publishel book on men and child care, Who Will Raise the Children? New Options for Fathers and Mothers. In it Levine tells of the growing number of men who have a taste for full-time fatherhood.

These men, says Levine, include househusbands, single men who have decided to adopt, divorced men who arrange to work part-time so they'll have more time with their young chilren.

In his travels for the book, Levine spoke with more than 120 men who have taken a different view of family living.

The 30-year-old Levine, who is married and the father of two, is a consultant on day care and child care in Wellesley, Mass.

The author said in an interview that few statistics are available on how many men have taken to what he calls "parenting."

"We've always thought of women in child-rearing roles and the fact that men are doing this is something new in itself."

Available figures show that 13 per cent of families in the United States are headed by single parents and eight per cent are headed by men, Levine said.

The study he conducted with the aid of a Ford Foundation grant found that a man's reversal from family provider to child rearer can offer a fresh approach to family living.

Etching a profile of the man who typifies this new breed of father, Levine said he has found hin to be "very independent-minded, with a lot of ego strength and self-assuredness; open-minded and flexible; supportive of the women's movement; and usually somewhere between his late 20s and early 40s."

Levine listed the benefits focused fatherhood offers to the family unit.

The bonus for parents, is a "wider range of choices which lets them arrive at life-styles that work for both the mother and father."

"If parents have more choices about what they want to do, the quality of child care improves."

A major plus for the father is "understanding what women's lives are like, especially in terms of taking care of another person.

"A man also can develop an emotional closeness with his children, which many men can't express now."

Mothers benefitted because more choices opened up for them in terms of new jobs and educational opportunities and other ways of fulfilling themselves as individuals.

"Women who feel that child-rearing is their responsibility and that they must succeed as mothers will be relieved of some of their guilt."

The child gains "by experiencing a breakdown of many barriers."

"It's important for kids to see more men in nurturing roles—for them to see that it's OK to be caring and to be a male. This can have a big effect on kids' llives. When they see their parents share feelings as well as tasks, children can only become more flexible."

Forget His 'Ex'

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old woman who is being married soon for the first time. My fiance is 38, and this will be his second marriage. His first lasted four years and ended in divorce before I knew him. (No children.) He never mentions his ex-wife's name, and has never told me what went wrong with their marriage.

His ex-wife lives in this city, and it would be very easy for me to contact her. A friend of mine has suggested that I call her, invite her to lunch and find out what went wrong with their marriage.

I am curious to know what his "ex" has to say, but on the other hand, I'm afraid of what I might hear.

Is ignorance really bliss, Abby? BLISSFULLY IGNORANT

DEAR IG: Nobody said, "Ignorance is bliss"; the quote is: "IF ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

If there is anything you want to know, ask your fiance. One woman's leftovers is another woman's banquet. Skip the lunch.

DEAR ABBY: My son and his family live near me, and for the last eight months I have seen a male friend of theirs stop in for coffee every morning while my son is at work.

My daughter-in-law and I have a close relationship, so I told her that I thought it looked bad for the neighbors to see this fellow's car parked in front of her house every morning — even though I was sure he was only a good friend.

That was three months ago, and his car is still parked in front of their house every morning.

Should I tell her that I will not be available to babysit any more unless this practice is stopped? NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: You've already told her that you thought it looked bad for the neighbors, and it didn't seem to faze her, so I doubt that threats to quit babysitting for her would produce results. Even if your daughter-in-law is innocent of any wrongdoing, for her own sake, she'd be wise to avoid the appearance of evil.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something in your column to discourage the practice of paying children for getting good grades in school.

Our daughter is in the seventh grade. She's always been a good student, but because her girlfriend is being paid $10 for every "A" and $5 for every "B" on her report card she thinks we ought to reward her in the same manner.

We expect our kids to get good grades, and we don't feel that they should be paid for it.

Kids always want what their friends have, and we think handing out tens and fives for "A's and "B's" is wrong. What do you think? FED UP

DEAR FED UP: Parents, not children, make the rules in their own homes. You can't control what goes on in other homes, but you can tell your children that you won't pay them for doing what they're expected to do, regardless of what their friends' parents do.

Some Allergic To Cold Water

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

Is it possible to be allergic to cold weather? There are times, when iut is cold out, that I cough and sneeze and have symptoms of a cold and yet I know by experience that times, when it is cold out, will last about twelve hours. — Mrs. T.Y.

Dear Mrs. Y.:

It is most certainly possible. A great many people also develop itchy, giant hives when exposed to extremes of heat or cold. Some doctors believe that it is the sudden change from one temperature to another that may be responsible.

When one has learned by past experience that extreme cold can cause such reactions one must simply try to avoid exposure to the weather.

The antihistamine or anti-allergy drugs seem to be effective and can reduce the severity of these reactions.

It should be remembered that anihistamine drugs, in order to be most beneficial, should be taken consistently and at regular intervals so that a concentration of antihistamines is built up in the body.

Taking an anti-allergy pill just occasionally rarely is effective. The length of time that these drugs are taken depends, of course, on the advice of the doctor.

I had an attack of jaundice three months ago. Is this a condition that tends to come back time and again? —Mr. N.N.

Dear Mr. N.:

Jaundice is a symptom, not a disease. It is a discoloration of the skin and of the conjunctiva, the thin membrane that covers the eye. The yellowish color is due to an excess accumulation of bile pigments in the blood.

The liver is a chemical factory that manufactures and excrets bile pigments. When there is any interference with the function of the liver, or if there is an obstruction of the free flow of bile from the liver into the intestines, the backup of bile causes jaundice.

When there is an obstruction in the gall bladder, or when stones block up the ducts from the gall bladder, jaundice will follow.

The exact cause of your jaundice must, of course, have been investigated. There are now many intricate chemical and biological tests that quickly and definitively pinpoint the exact reason for jaundice.

Once the cause is established and eliminated, there is no reason why you should expect that the jaundice will return.

U.K. Labor Loses Its Majority

LONDON (Reuter) — The Labor government lost its commons majority today after a byelection success by the Conservative opposition.

The Conservatives easily held a seat in the central London constituency of City of London and Westminster South with an increased majority over Labor.

The result of Thursday byelection means Prime Minister James Callaghan must be more careful in his dealings with members of Parliament since his party and allies are outnumbered although there are two byelections pending in Labor — held seats.

Labor is still the biggest party with 310 seats and can usually rely on the support of two Irish and two Scottish members to muster a total of 314. The combined opposition parties now have 315 members.

Fortunately for Callaghan these opposition groups, including Scots and Welsh nationalist parties as well as Conservatives and Liberals, have rarely been in full accord.

DUST MASK is worn by Colorado state highway patrolman Joseph Cullyford as he stops traffic on Interstate 70 during dust storm Thursday that cut visibility to zero. Cullyford sports goggles, respiration mask and hooded jacket. Highways and schools were closed.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge Fred Green imposed a four-month sentence Thursday in Victoria provincial court on a 23-year-old man who admitted stealing a leather jacket from a department store.

Terrance Michael Pitcher, of 1418 Harrison Place, pleaded guilty to theft under $200 in connection with a Feb. 11 incident at Woolco department store, 3601 Douglas Street.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Pitcher took the coat, valued at $125, stripped identifying tags from it and left the store. He was pursued and caught by store security staff, Mulligan said.

Mulligan said the act was not one of impulse and asked the judge to note a 1974 conviction at Ocean Falls for possession of stolen property and three more recent convictions in Duncan for breaking and entering, extortion and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08. Pitcher had been sentenced to one year in jail for the break-in and extortion and was fined $250 for the drinking-driving offence.

Green agreed that Pitcher's record left the court no alternative before handing out the four-month sentence and placing him on six months probation.

Alfred David Marty, 52, of 972 Lyall, elected trial by judge without jury on two counts of indecent assault and had a preliminary hearing set for May 4.

He was released on $1,000 surety bail after spending more than a week in custody.

Judge William Ostler committed Phillip Rafferty, of 140 Ontario, for trial in connection with the Jan. 21 armed robbery of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, 1568 Fairfield.

A lone gunman got away with $6,115 in the holdup at the Fairfield shopping plaza branch.

Donald George Stewart, 20, of 6392 Oldfield, was fined $150 after pleading guilty to obstructing a peace officer.

Court was told Stewart and a companion were being searched in their vehicle Feb. 11 by Saanich police when Stewart grabbed an officer by the lapels, telling his friend to "go on, he's got nothing on us."

Stewart told court he was picking up a brother at Claremont high school when the incident took place.

A fine of $300 was levied against 18-year-old Gary Earl Coad, of 4000 Braefoot.

Coad pleaded guilty to failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Mulligan told the court Coad left a beer parlor Feb. 11 and hit a parked car on Quadra in Saanich. He then returned to the beer parlor, court was told, and informed police someone else took his car. Coad later admitted to Saanich police he was responsible for the hit-and-run accident.

In addition to the fine, Coad was placed on three months probation and prohibited from entering any licensed premises.

★ ★ ★

A 60-year-old North Vancouver man, who defence lawyer Dean Wilson said was an executive director of Alcoholies Anonymous, was fined a total of $550 after pleading guilty to impaired driving and refusing to take a breath test.

Keith William Middleton was fined $500 on the first count and $50 on the second.

Court was told Middleton was noted Feb. 11 by Sidney RCMP driving between 25 and 30 mph in an erratic manner south on the Pat Bay highway.

Wilson explained that Middleton was going to Victoria on business but had learned that day that his wife had a malignant tumor. Wilson also said that Middleton complied with the breath demand the first time but did not realize he had to comply with a second demand.

Other drivers fined were: Cory William Morrison, 26, of 231 Meade, $400; and Stanley John Fernstrom, 50, of 2007 Tanlee Cres., Saanichton, $400.

Quick Action Wanted To Save Trails, Rivers

Legislation to preserve trails, rivers and shoreline is recommended in a B.C. Outdoor Recreation Council brief presented recently to the ministry of recreation and conservation.

The council wants the ministry to establish quickly an administrative framework to implement the legislation with the help of such agencies as the parks and fish and wildlife branches and the B.C. Forest Service.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf is urged to give priority to establishing such a program, especially on Vancouver Island, the Lower Mainland and the Kamloops-Okanagan districts.

Submissions in the brief were made by 130 conservation and recreational clubs in scattered parts of the province.

John Hasell of Vancouver, chairman of the council, said there is no legislation to protect rivers and shoreline in B.C.

"Shorelines have been the least-managed areas areas for recreation and conservation in the province," he said. "It is undortunate that, in a province which prides itself on 95 per cent of the land being publicly-owned, so much or our lake and ocean shoreline is in private ownership and for practical purposes, public access prevented."

The council said establishment of trail and river corridors and the protection of the shoreline would benefit the travel industry. The program would be less costly to maintain than picnic sites and campgrounds.

Within five years the council wants eight wild rivers, 11 natural rivers and 15 recreational rivers given special status.

It also recommends as interim objectives the designation of 45 day-use recreational trails, 15 back-country, 12 historic trails and 11 scenic shoreline management areas.

The council's brief notes the success of a trail, river and shoreline conservation program in the non-urban areas of B.C. will depend on the active participation of the ministry of forests.

It also noted there are many significant potential river and trail corridors in regional districts.

It recommends the minstry encourage regional districts — financially and technically — to develop trails, and preserve the amenities of rivers and shoreline.

Carter Urging Military Trim

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration, in a precedent-setting action, has recommended cuts in foreign military aid to Argentina, Ethiopia and Uruguay because those nations violate human rights of their citizens.

The reductions, which were disclosed Thursday by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, take the new administration's overseas human rights policy beyond verbal protests to tangible action for the first time. They also dramatize U.S. concerns going well beyondthe Soviet bloc to military-run nations which have been allied with Washington.

In the past Congress has urged and occasionally legislated foreign aid cuts on human rughts grounds, but the executive branch strongly opposed such action as undiplomatic and counterproductive.

TWO COSMONAUTS HOME SAFELY

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts landed safely in snowy Soviet Central Asia today, ending a trip of nearly three weeks aboard an orbiting space laboratory, the official Tass news agency said.

Tass said the Soyuz 24 reentry capsule carrying mission commander Viktor Gorbatko and flight engineer Yuri Glazov made a soft landing in a pre-set area near the town of Arkalyk in Kazakhstan, approximately 1,250 miles east of Moscow.

"The cosmonauts feel fine after the landing," Tass said.

Gorbatko, 42, and Glazkov, 37, were blasted into space Feb. 7 and linked up with the Salyut 5 orbital laboratory the next day.

The cosmonauts successfully completed their mission to dock with, board and live on the space station, according to Tass.

The agency referred to another Soviet manned mission last summer during which another cosmonaut pair spent 49 days aboard the 25-ton Salyut station — launched last June 22.

"The planned program of exploration of two expeditions in the Salyut 5 orbital scientific station has been completed successfully," Tass said, indicating the Soyuz 24 mission would be the last involving the space station.

"The results of the scientific exploration produced by the two crews in terrestrial orbit will be used in the interests of the national economy, science and technology and also for the development of new spacecraft," it added.

NO BOGUS PARTS

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada, CP Air and Nordair reported today that no uncertified parts have been found in their Boeing 727 or 737 planes following news that several uncertified plane parts were found in the United States.

The search for unacthorized parts began after a number of tools and blueprints disappeared from Boeing's plant in Seattle, Wash.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration (FAA), which sets standards for U.S.-built aircraft and authorizes production of parts, is investigating the matter.

An Air Canada spokesman said the airline found no uncertified parts in its 14 Boeing 727s. CP Air made a similar statement concerning its seven 737s and five 727s.

Nordair also reported that its six 737s also contained only Boeing factory parts.

In the U.S., the FAA says it believes it has located all the bogus parts and that none has caused or could cause an air accident.

City Partners Are In the Chips with Fish

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

In 1974 there wasn't a single fish and chip shop in Prince George, which is pretty tough on a guy who was raised in Victoria.

The solution for Ronald Scott, car salesman, was to open his own restaurant with the help of another Prince George car salesman, Sy Mytting.

This in turn launched the Capt. Scott fish and chip franchise shops, a phenomenal story of growth.

The company grew from a single restaurant in 1974 to 40 outlets in western Canada today and it will have almost 100 before year's end. The restaurants are in B.C., Alberta and Saskatchewan and will soon expand to Manitoba, Ontario, Washington State, Oregon and California.

The international headquarters is in the Harbor Towers in Victoria.

"A person would have to be bananas to live anyplace else," says Mytting. "The weather is fabulous."

Scott and Mytting are equal partners but the idea came from Scott's upbringing in Victoria.

Born in Saskatoon, he came to Victoria at age four and knew from an early age that he wanted to be a salesman. By age 15 he was working in a gas station and at 18 he was selling furniture. He went into the car business at Prince George at age 21 in 1970.

He was doing well and had no thoughts about anything but cars — until he got hungry for fish and chips.

"When we saw people lining up outside our resaurant we knew we were on to something. The next thing that happened was businessmen came to us and asked about getting a franchise," Scott said.

"Quite frankly, I wasn't too sure how a franchise operated in the food business. So I spent many hours in the library reading up on it and then I said, why not?"

In 1975, the first full year, the company grossed $800,000. This grew to $2.4 million in 1976 and will top $7 million this year.

The company is opening four new restaurants a month and will add at least 48 this year.

"We are growing faster than McDonalds during the first three years of its operation," Scott said, "and I'm not surprised. I think there is a greater opportunity in fish and chips than in hamburgers."

Despite the growth, the headquarters will remain in Victoria, although large branch offices are planned in other areas.

Neither Scott nor Mytting knew much about cooking before they went into the business, but they have learned a few things along the way.

The only problem facing the company is a shortage of ling cod. Capt. Scott's has doubled its price to fishermen in the past year, but they have been more interested in fishing for salmon and herring.

"We are going to have to bring in cod from the Atlantic to keep our restaurants supplied," Scott said.

There is one Capt. Scott's in the Victoria area in the McKenzie Mall at Shelbourne and McKenzie. A second restaurant is planned for Colwood.

Scott is 27, married with two children while Mytting is 28, married and has one daughter.

"Our children are young," says Mytting, "but they are already smart enough not to ask to be taken to Ronald McDonald's."

City Dollar Program On Again

The Victoria trade dollar program, which raised $22,000 in its first year in 1976, will go on sale again May 16, Visitors Information Centre president Al Frame said Wednesday.

He told the VIC annual meeting the tourist organization has a cash surplus of $66,440, up from $27,540 at the same time last year, due in part to the new trade dollar program.

Membership dues brought in another $32,348, up from $25,787 the previous year. There are 500 members, up from virtually nil when the centre began operation three years ago, he said.

Victoria trade dollars are sold during summer months and can be used as cash until they expire at the end of September. After that they become souvenirs.

Frame paid tribute to Terry Farmer for outstanding service as founding chairman and first president of the centre.

The main function of the VIC is to operate the Causeway tourist bureau, which is open every day but Christmas, but the VIC will branch out tinto external promotion programs this year with the funds it has raised in 1976.

Blooming Shame

The garden climate on lower Yates Street is hopeless, Dennis Young, executive director of the Capital Region Board noted Thursday.

The reason: drunks, who stamp over the little flower bed in front of the regional offices at 524 Yates.

Young told his executive committee he would like to put an ornamental iron fence around the "delightful little landscape." Otherwise, he said, "you might as well pave it."

At the moment, flowers have to be replaced every weekend, the committee was told. It will decide later what to do.

Liquor Store Hits Snag

The Capital Regional Board Wednesday refused to deal with an application for a commercial development and liquor store on Pender Island until it gets approval from the North Pender Island community plan committee.

The board suggested to applicant Paul Estell that he go back to the committee and ask for amendments to the community plan to accommodate his proposal.

His proposal calls for a government liquor store, post office, bank, lumber yard and hardware business at the junction of Bedwell Harbor and Razor Point Roads.

At present there is only one government liquor store on the Gulf Islands — at Ganges on Salt Spring Island.

The island's community plan has designated a commercial centre close to existing commercial developments at Port Washington and Hope Bay.

Postal Talks Cut Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — An official with the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Thursday that all on-going consultation with post office management has been cut off.

Frank Walden, western region director of the union, said the action is being taken because the post office continues to violate the collective agreement that is to be renegotiated this summer.

Walden said management is taking a survey on Vancouver Island to determine whether the post office can be shut down Saturdays.

It could become an experiment for the whole country, he added. "But the union wasn't told about it."

Walden disclosed that the post office started holding "think-tank" sessions last November in Montebello near Ottawa.

"We told them to stuff it because it was a bunch of garbage. All they want to do is sit down and have a few drinks."

Walden said the next top-level session on industrial democracy, to be held next month in Red Deer, Alta., will be ignored.

The union issued a statement which said the only meetings it will attend will be grievance hearings and the coming national negotiations at which the main issue is technological change.

MONDAY MEETING DEMANDED

Amin Won't Let Americans Leave

Times News Services

Ida Amin today barred the 200 Americans in Uganda from leaving the country and ordered them to meet him in a group with lists of their possessions on Monday. The Uganda dictator also claimed that 5,000 U.S. Marines were massed off Africa and rebuked President Carter for "false" comments on Uganda.

Carter expressed strong concern over the situation in the African nation and the White House said he was "monitoring it closely."

The U.S. State Department called in the Ugandan charge d'affaires in Washington for "a full explanation" of Amin's order.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said, "it is safe to presume the president will do whatever is necessary and proper to save American lives."

He answered with "no comment" questions whether Carter planned to send in any rescue missions to Uganda.

Asked whether Carter had given any military orders, Powell said, "I can't give you any details on operational orders, nor can I tell you that there have been any other than routine orders."

A spokesman for the West German embassy in Kampala, which has handled U.S. interests in Uganda since the United States closed its embassy in 1973, said Americans who were telephoning were being advised not to worry, to stay indoors and not to provoke Ugandan officials.

Acting Ugandan ambassador S.M. Cherebet said later that he had assured assistant secretary of state William Shaufele that Amin was simply calling the Americans together to reassure them.

Union Numbers Up

VANCOUVER (CP — The provincial labor department says in its latest research bulletin that 44.9 per cent of B.C.'s work force belonged to unions as of Jan. 1, 1976, an increase of 6.3 per cent over the previous year.

Wages Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — Statistics Canada said Thursday that average weekly earnings for workers declines to $235.26 during December from $236.77 in November. Workers in British Columbia had the highest average weekly incomes, at $264.89 in December.

Snow Blocks Roads

WINNIPEG (CP — Southern Manitoba's heaviest snowfall of the winter was continuing today and the provincial highways department advised against road travel.

Milk Pushed

REGINA (CP) — All vending machine concessions located in city-owned properties must include at least one milk and fruit-juice machine and one dry food machine with 50 per cent nutritious items beginning July 1.

Inquiry Ruled Out

QUEBEC (CP) — Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard announced today there will be no public inquiry into circumstances surrounding the fatal accident Feb. 6 involving Premier Rene Levesque.

$1B TRAVEL DEFICIT

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians travelling abroad last year spent $3.12 billion, almost 23 per cent more than in 1975, Statistics Canada said Thursday.

Visitors from the United States and other countries spent $1.94 billion here.

The result was a record deficit on travel of $1.18 billion.

An increase in the numbers of Canadians visiting the U.S. and a decrease in U.S. visitors to Canada resulted in a deficit with the U.S. of $610 million.

Region Gets The Boot On Islands

Planning and zoning functions for B.C.'s Gulf Islands will be taken away from regional districts and given to the Islands Trust under a bill introduced in the legislature today.

The Islands Trust Amendment Act slashes drastically the responsibilities of the regional directors from the Gulf Islands and increases dramatically the power of the Islands Trust, which many people believed would be cut out altogether by the Social Credit government.

Immediate response from Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region board and its director from the outer Gulf Islands, is that the bill puts island residents in the same spot Indians were in when they were dumped on reserves.

The change strips power from elected regional representatives and puts control of land use into the hands of people appointed by the government, he said.

It means land control can be dealt with "in star chamber fashion," he said.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said today the bill is an indication of his confidence in the Islands Trust and notification that the organization will be around for a long time.

The trust, established by the NDP in 1974, was designed to give Islanders more control over the unique rural nature of the Gulf Islands.

The trust is comprised of three general trustees appointed by the provincial government and two elected trustees from each of the 13 major islands designated in the act.

SPORTS CAR was sliced in two early today when vehicle slammed into power pole in the 3900-block Carey. Its driver, Edward Higgs, 34, of 720 Vernon, is reported in fair condition in Victoria General. LILLICO MUST EXPLAIN

Dick Lillico, the B.C. government's public relations man in London, England, has been ordered to tell all he knows about his Grizzly Valley gas shares to the judicial inquiry under way in Vancouver.

In a telegram to Lillico Thursday, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, told him to "set out in affidavit form" any knowledge he has of trading in Grizzly Valley shares.

At the inquiry hearing earlier this week, fired ministerial adviser Arthur Weeks, the central figure in the Grizzly Valley controversy, said he had told Lillico that he (Weeks) had bought shares in one of the companies involved in the $100 million Grizzly Valley pipeline and that Lillico subsequently bought shares.

McCarthy, who appointed Lillico to his $22,200 a year job in July, 1976, said she talked to him late Wednesday night and he confirmed he had bought shares in one of the Grizzly Valley companies.

So far four government employees have lost their jobs for trading in Grizzly Valley gas shares, but McCarthy said the she would not dismiss Lillico.

But now, she said, any information about such trading is the responsibility of the inquiry.

"I don't see that it serves the interests of the people of B.C. to fire people at this point in time," McCarthy said.

Lillico, McCarthy said, is in a different position from the others who lost their jobs. Two of those including Weeks, were personal aides to Economic Development Minister Don Phillips and two were employees of the B.C. Petroleum Corp.

Any other government employees found to be trading in Grizzly Valley shares will also be considered the responsibility of the inquiry.

We don't want to go on a witchhunt," she said.

McCarthy said Lillico confirmed only that he had bought shares in one of the Grizzly Valley companies.

Lillico works out of B.C. House in London with Bob Strachan, former NDP cabinet minister who is B.C. agent-general.

Ferry Foot Fares Cut; Vehicle Hike Forecast

Fare cuts announced today by B.C. Ferries will give foot passengers rides for half-fare for seven months of the year. There is no change in vehicle rates.

General Manager Charles Gallagher said he foresees higher rates in future for vehicle traffic, but not before 1978.

Starting March 1, adult foot passengers travelling, Mondays through Thursdays and Saturdays between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen or between Departure Bay Horseshoe Bay will pay $2 instead of $4 each way and children will pay $1 instead of $2. The cut off age for children has been reduced to 11 from 14.

A car and driver will continue to pay $14 each way, the year-round fare on the two main ferry routes. However, passengers in a car will get the reduced fare.

Gallagher said normal fares will apply on Fridays, Sundays and holidays and at all times during the five-month summer travel season from May 1 to Sept. 30.

Fare reductions also apply to other Lower Mainland and Gulf Island ferry routes.

The standard fare for the Sunshine Coast remains the same as on the mainland — Vancouver Island routes with the same Monday-Thursday and Saturday reductions from October through April.

Gallagher explained the Gulf Island service gets only a one-way reduction because fares were already 50 per cent lower for north-bound travel.

The $10 vehicle rate with $4 for the driver remains, for southbound traffic between

A MARRIAGE IS A MARRIAGE, AND HE BEING ENGLISH, AND YOU BEING FRENCH DOES NOT ENTITLE YOU TO A REFERENDUM IN A YEAR OR SO.

DOLLAR SLIPS

The Canadian dollar in terms of U.S. funds fell to the lowest point in three months today on the New York market while in Europe gold prices began climbing.

The dollar fell to the 95 (U.S.) cents level, nearly matching the low reached after the election of the Quebec separatist party.

Analysts in New York said the latest flurry of dollar sales was caused by forecast Thursday by Robert MacIntosh, executive vice president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, that the dollar would fall to 90 U.S.cents this year

But the U.S. analysts said the slump also comes against a background of increasing general nervousness this week about the outlook for the currency.

In Europe, Meanwhile, speculators and investors appear to be returning to gold markets, dealers say, for the first time in more than two years.

Steady buying orders were received all this week, and few holders of gold were interested in selling, London dealers said.

That drove the price of bullion up $4.50 an ounce to $141.125 (U.S.) Thursday in Zurich, the world's biggest gold-trading centre. The price rose more than $3.50 to $140.125 in London, the second-biggest market.

B.C. Paying Consultant $50 an Hour

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, saying it was "an unusual case," admitted Thursday that a senior civil servant is receiving a $50-an-hour consulting fee in addition to his yearly salary.

Mrs. McCarthy told the legislature during question period that Richard Higgins was appointed last month to review the Public Service Labor Relations Act. Legislation enacted three years ago based on a report prepared by Higgins.

She said Higgins was available to conduct the review, for which he is receiving the $50-an-hour, because he is on pre-retirement leave.

Under such leave, a civil servant receives his full salary. Higgins' wage is $34,500 a year.

Conservative leader Scott Wallace, who raised the issue in the legislature, said in an interview Mrs. McCarthy is "practising double funding in her own backyard."

Dr. Wallace was making reference to a memo revealed last week in which Mrs. McCarthy is quoted as being against double funding.

The memo urges all cabinet ministers to hire persons from the private sector rather than from universities when consulting work is necessary.

YOU'LL PAY MORE WHATEVER YOU DO

British Columbians face price hikes galore March 1, and if you want to drown your sorrows, that's going to cost more, too.

If you are a drinker or a smoker, be prepared to lay out a few extra bucks for life's little pleasures starting Tuesday.

The price of beer goes up, with a dozen bottles costing $4.35 including tax and deposit, from the current $4.07. Beer by the glass is going up from 40 to 45 cents.

Imperial Tobacco is bumping its wholesale price for cigarettes which means a retail price increase of about two cents on a package of 20, which now sells for 75 cents.

Rothman's of Pall Mall Canada Ltd. says it is considering a similar increase.

And if you want to complain in writing, that will cost you more too. The cost of mailing a letter increases to 12 cents from 10 cents on March 1.

Staying home will cost more too, because the cost of lighting and heating that home goes up. Domestic electricity rates jump by up to 14.7 per cent and natural gas rates by up to 22.1 per cent. The increases start March 1 but won't show up on B.C. Hydro bills until May 1.

Prices of gasoline, diesel oil and home heating fuel go up by at least 2.3 cents a gallon because of federal pricing policies for crude oil.

Federal sales tax is also being increased by an undetermined amount and the retail price could be boosted even more by oil companies and service stations.

The price of watching cablevision has already gone up 75 cents in Victoria to $5.25 and viewers in Vancouver face an identical increase on March 1.

And it all comes at a time when large cash payments are due for ICBC insurance.

Those considering flying away from it all are also out of luck.

CP Air and Air Canada have just announced domestic air fare increases averaging from five to seven per cent take effect on March.

Newspapers Miss Payroll, Slump in Duncan Blamed

The Cowichan Leader and Pictorial missed its weekly payroll Thursday, blaming the economic slump in Duncan for its shortage of cash.

Andy Bigg, publisher of both papers, said the $6,7000 weekly payroll was missed because some Duncan businesses have been unusually slow in paying their bills.

Some of the employees may be paid today, he added.

The two newspapers are owned by Westpres Publications of Winnipeg. The company has indicated it will not forward funds to meet the payroll and local staff must redouble their efforts to bring in accounts receivable, despite the economic problems of the community.

Bigg said advertising had been at normal levels during January and February but it appeared retail sales were down and companies were scrambling for funds in anticipation of possible work stoppages during labor negotiations this summer.

Bigg said he was acting on orders from Winnipeg in not meeting the payroll and said employees would be paid as soon as more funds were generated through accounts receivable. Some employees would be paid today. He declined to comment further.

At least six of the 20 employees indicated they will look for work elsewhere unless they are paid by noon Saturday.

PM Backs Attack on CBC

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau defended the right of cabinet ministers today to attack the French-language CBC for airing what he described as "lousy . . . biased" stories that promote Quebec separatism.

And he congratulated Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet for offering CBC President A. W. Johnson a list of Radio-Canada employees — the French-language service of the government-owned corporation — whom he considers advocates of Quebec independence.

The prime minister, under pointed questioning by former NDP leader T.C. Douglas and Gordon Fairweather (PC — Fundy Royal), said a number of government MPs have a "very great fear" that Radio-Canada employees are "propagating separatism."

"I'm not at all offended that they think so, and say so," the prime minister said.

Later, outside the House, Maurice Dupras, parliamentary secretary to Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie, called for loyalty tests for anyone working for a Crown corporation such as the CBC.

"There should be a loyalty test to the country," Mr. Dupras said.

Mr. Douglas told reporters the Trudeau government only fuels the Quebec independence movement if it follows through threats to fire alleged separatists in the CBC.

"You will make martyrs out of those people," Mr. Douglas said.

"If there is any way to make French-speaking Canadians turn separatist it is to tell them that any supporter of the Parti Quebecois is going to be fired," he said.

His heated response to opposition MPs was the latest development in a growing controversy over whether the government has a right to interfere in the operation of the CBC if it feels the cor-

City Buys Land, CP Deal Denied

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Victoria city council Thursday approveed the purchase of a $550,000 property adjacent to the Crystal Garden site amid emphatic denials that the deal will aid the CPR's convention centre proposal.

Mayor Mike Young said there is no such intention behind the acquisition of the property, which had been offered for sale by Canadian Pacific Hotels in a telephone call from Toronto earlier this week.

He denied there had been any private negotiations involving certain members of city council and company officials prior to Tuesday's phone call, which he received just a few minutes before conucil's weekly caucus meeting.

Young said the sale offer was made because CP Hotels knew the city was interested in the site of the old steam laundry at the corner of Douglas and Humboldt.

He had been told the company could not "forestall" the site's disposal any longer, had taken the matter to caucus and obtained preliminary approval for the purchase.

He challenged aldermen to argue that there was any other sequence of events: "If anyone doesn't think that is what occurred I would like you to say so."

The mayor's comments followed a remark by Ald. Murray Glazier that "the town is rife with rumors of all sorts of deals."

Glazier, who had voted against the the purchase at Tuesday's in-camera meeting, said he was still unable to support the formal motion Thursday because there had been little explanation as to why the property was needed.

Ald. Ron McKenzie sided with Glazier, although he admitted that on Tuesday he supported the motion.

"But certain things have happened in the interim," he added. "I have not been made fully aware of the background arrangements . . . across the street specifically."

(The latter comment was an obvious reference to CPR's tentative plans to build a convention centre by extending the Empress Hotel's Crystal Ballroom. Some aldermen speculated earlier this year that the city might complement such a development by building a parking structure on the other side of Douglas).

Young stressed, however, that CP Hotels are "looking at their own development on their own site," and said the company has no interest in the former steam laundry property.

But it had received offers for the land and was not prepared to wait indefinitely before selling it.

Other aldermen indicated that more than one offer to purchase the property had come from the private sector. Ald. John Hayes said at one time there was a deal for CP Hotels to sell it to "a developer in town who has an atrocious reputation for building horrible buildings."

Ald. Bill Tindall said it was "very vital" that the city acquire the site and consolidate virtually the entire Douglas - Blanshard - Humboldt - Belleville block in public ownership, regardless of what future development occurs there.

He also rejected suggestions that there had been "backroom deals going on."

In all aspects of council business there are preliminary dicusssions before specific items and recommendations are brought forward to committee stage, he said, and there is no reason to "bring forward details that are purely speculative."

Ald. Bob Wright agreed that briefing every council member on business which was being explored in a tentative way would be an unwieldy, time-consuming procedure.

But such explanations failed to satisfy McKenzie, who maintained that in the CPR land sale affair "only certain select people were picked out" for direct involvement while others were left in the dark.

He asked that council members be informed of sensitive negotiations as they develop, "rather than have them dropped on us at the 11th hour."

Young replied that he could give no such assurance.

Only Glazier and McKenzie opposed the motion to acquire the property, with funds which had been committed toward the restoration of the Crystal Garden building.

After the meeting Hayes told reporters the move does not mean the city is abandoning any hope of proceeding with the restoration project.

"Quite the contrary," he added, pointing out that the consolidation of the adjoining land would make the scheme more feasible.

He said he is not concerned about the city's sidetracking the necessary funds into a land purchase, noting the provincial government has yet to commit itself to helping with the Crystal project.

PAYING $220,000 MORE 'GOOD DEAL'

A 4.5-acre property which the city of Victoria sold to the provincial government nearly three years ago for $190,000 is coming back into city ownership — for $312,000.

After city council approved the purchase of the property at Mount Stephen and Ryan on Thursday, housing committee chairman Ald. John Hayes told reporters the transaction is a "good deal" for the city because the actual value of the land is now much higher.

"We are buying it back for the amount we paid for it plus carrying cost," he said.

Hayes said it makes more sense for the city to control the site's development rather than the province.

Some proposals for comprehensive development of the property have already been received from developers but council has not decided specifically what to do with the land.

Hayes pointed out that the lots are already serviced, adding: "Some may well be sold separately as single-family lots."

80 Busted After Bugs

Police in B.C. tapped 91 telephones and bugged 17 rooms last year, according to figures released Thursday by Attorney-General Garde Gardom.

The figures were contained in the annual report of the Protection of Privacy Act, tabled in the legislature by Gardom.

The attorney-general also tabled the annual report for 1975 and a report for six months of 1974, when the legislation came into effect.

The 1976 report says 80 persons were arrested whose identity became known to police as a result of the buggings.

The average period for which bugging authorizations were given was 35.5 days, with an average renewal of 36 hours. Only five authorizations were for more than 60 days.

Criminal proceedings incorporating evidence obtained by electronic surveillance numbered six, of which five resulted in convictions.

Fifty-two cases relied on information received from the taps, but the evidence was not introduced in court.

Use of electronic surveillance under the act was down from 1975, according to the reports, and "cannot be attributed to any specific factor."

"The main point is that it is still being used as an effective tool in the fight to control major crime in the province," the 1976 report says.

The 1975 report shows a total of 207 instances of taps and buggings, with 49 instances in the last half of 1974.

The 1976 report concludes: "some difficulties still arise with the use of the privacy act. These include supply of manpower and funds, specifically in cases of lengthy investigations and with delays in proceedings."

All Sides Rap Widow Cut-Off

Times News Services

OTTAWA — MP's from the three major political parties urged Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde on Thursday to end the government practice of cutting off spouse's allownaces when a person's husband of wife dies.

Liberal, New Democratic and Progressive Conservative MPs called the practice discriminatory, inhumane, grossly unfair and an unwarranted hardship.

The demands came in the Commons health, welfare and social affairs committee.

In turn, Lalonde rejected the protest as a method of "trying to bring the pension age down to 60 by the back door." Under current law the spouse of an old-age pensioner may claim a spouse's allowance if he or she is not eligible for an old-age pension or a guaranteed income supplement.

Old-age pensions are available to any person aged 65 or over, regardles on income, who meets certain residency requirements.

The pensioners spouse, aged 60 to 64, while not eligible for a pension, may collect a spouse's allowance depending on the couple's joint income.

However, when the pensioner dies, the spouse can no longer collect the allowance, and most must turn to welfare programs operated by the provinces.

Meanwhile, Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde told the committee the federal government is seeking an agreement that would free thousands of people in Canada from making mandatory payments to the United States social security fund.

The legislation, which would tie old age security pension benefits to the number of years a person has lived in Canada, must still get final Commons and Senate approval and royal assent.

Because it provides partial pension payments, unlike current legislation, it opens the way for reciprocal agreements with foreign countries.

Lalonde said he hopes the U.S. Congress will pass legislation soon to allow the American government to make a social securtiy agreement with Canada.

A pension official told the committee that even without the U.S. legislation, it is likely that an interim agreement will be made.

Herb Gray (L — Windsor West) said thousands of people in Canada have to make both Canadian and U.S. social security payments because they work for U.S.-controlled or -owned companies, are the children of U.S. citizens or have dual citizenship.

Lalonde told Gray that until the special agreement is made with the U.S. "there will unfortunately be cases of double coverage with double contributions."

Under the proposed agreement, the person would contribute to and receive full social security benefits from both Canada and the U.S. depending on how long he or she has lived in either country.

Medical allowance ended for Jean Wright

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Sixty-one-year-old Jean Wright has a multitude of health problems that culminated four years ago with her left leg being amputated below the kee.

For a year and a half she got a special handicapped allowance of $169 a month from the provincial government. It barely covered her medical expenses, she says.

Last March, without warning, the allowance was cut off.

When she asked why she was told that because her husband gets $560 a month in pensions she is not eligible for government assistance.

"Before we were just able to get by, even clear up a few debts," she says. "But not now."

Joanne Newbauer, 25, has a unique problem and it isn't just her disability — a severe, crippling gheumatoid-arthritis conditon.

★

Two years ago a man left her $10,000 in his will. She was in her final year at UVic at the time receiving a handicapped pension and special stipend to pay for a live-in helper to assist her dressing, washing and cooking, none of which she can do on her own.

When she got the inheritance all assistance was cut off.

Her father, a bus driver in Dawson Creek, and the Cadboro Bay United Church, saw her through the year.

She graduated and she's still hoping to find a job. She says if she cashed in her inheritance it would be gone in seven months.

She'd rather use the money to buy a house and achieve greater independence.

She tried to see Human Resources Minister Bill Bander Zalm about her problem. The day before the interview the minister's secretary called her and said he was too busy to see her.

She hasn't tried again.

Louis Todd, 72, is a pioneer fourth generation Victorian, a retired dockyard worker.

He and his wife are dependent upon federal old age pension, provincial supplementary allowance and $60 he gets each month from Canda Pension Plan.

Between them, they receive $492. In January, 1976, his supplementary allowance cheque was $37.32. In April it was decreased to $36.52.

He doesn't know why. Since then he's had two increases, one 13 cents, the other 18 cents.

★

His wife needs dental work and he needs new glasses. They can afford neither.

"There's nothing we can do," he despairs. "There's no one to fight for us."

He blames his problems on Vander Zalm. "I think he's a dictator myself," he says. "We've never had a government like this in the province before . . . never."

Talk to anyone on income assistance these days and the message will be repeated over and over again: GAIN, the Socred's Guaranteed Available Income for Need program — should be spelt LOSS.

Hugh McLeod, of the Victoria Physically Handicapped Action Committee — HAC for short — sums up the feelings of recipients in one word: antagonistic.

There are rumblings of a showdown, of confrontations, of mass rallies to coincide with the human resources ministry budget debate expected to begin in the legislature the middle of March.

Whether plans for demonstrations or protests will come to fruition is another matter. McLeod says the disadvantaged are tradtionally reticent, even apathetic.

Most, he says, are too frightened to complain.

Pension shrunk for the Louis Todds

"I'm scared to open my mouth for fear they'll take everything away from me," she says.

When the GAIN program come into effect last Oct. 1 — a consolidation of the Social Assistance Act, the Minicome Act and the Handicapped Persons Income Allowance Act — Vander Zalm pledged it would "aid the worthy persons."

But according to Marilyn Callahan, president of the B.C. Associaton of Social Workers, only two small groups have actually benefitted.

Individuals aged 55 to 59 got a $70 a month hike, raising their basic rate from $160 to $230. And welfare recipients with dependents got an additonal $50 a month — but only if they had been on continuous assistance for at least four months.

For old age pensioners, GAIN hasn't made any difference. One elderly Victoria woman said her montly supplemental allowance is the same as it was in October 1975 — $38.88.

For the handicapped, however, GAIN has meant a decided loss.

A handicapped person with dependants applying after Oct. 1 gets anywhere from $70 to $130 less a month than a person in identical situation who applied before.

Vander Zalm in an interview with the Times said he recognized there are discrepancies.

"But," he said, "we have a grandfather clause that says no one already receiving a pension will receive a cutback if the rates are decreased."

The minister regards GAIN as a good deal for the province. Before Oct. 1 the federal government subsidized about 40 per cent of the handicapped and mincome pensions. Since Oct. 1 the federal cost-sharing is 50 per cent.

That means the province is receiving $35 a month more for each pensioner between the ages of 60 and 64.

In the case of the handicapped, the province is saving $22.50 a month, or nearly $3 million a year. Under the old arrangement Ottawa gave the province $110 on each $265 spent on handicapped pensions. The province paid $155 but now Ottawa and the province share equally — $132.50 each.

★

The handicapped feel the savings should be passed on to them and several groups, including HAC, have fired off letters to the minister asking for an explanation.

This week Vander Zalm sent out a reply in the form of a two-page letter in which he states his 1976-77 budget took into account the changes in the federal cost-sharing arrangement.

The $22.50 cannot be passed on, he said, because there is no provision in his budget to do so.

Vander Zalm points out that on Oct. 1 he raised the basic income assistance rate from $160 to $230 and refers to the budget for the handicapped as being set at $128 million.

In both respects, says Mrs. Callahan, the minister is misleading people.

First, she says, the $230 rate applies to only one group — those age 55 to 59.

All other groups are excluded. The normal assistance rate is still $160 a month for single persons, the same it's been for more than two years.

Second, she says, the $128 million budget includes all income assistance to senior citizens, not just the handicapped.

While the issue of the $22.50 savings to the province remains unresolved — at least in the minds of the handicapped — another issue is coming to the fore.

Ironically it has to do with the handicapped's own savings.

★

Although GAIN regulations allow pensioners to have assets up to $1,500 in value, the handicapped say they are being penalized no matter how much money they manage to set aside.

Take the case of Frank Robinson, a 54-year-old pensioner living in the Battin-Fielding home for the handicapped in Saanich.

Recently he had his $265 pension cut to $260.33. He isn't sure whether it was because he had received a $47.60 renter's grant or because he had over the years saved $800 out of his pension money to buy a wheelchair.

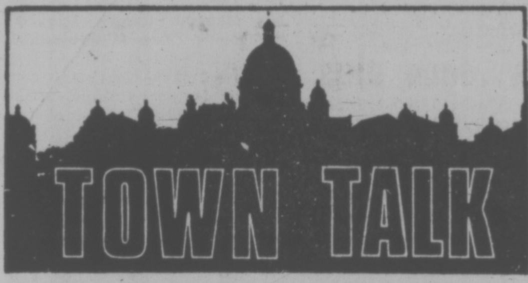
Rose Lemire and Ellie Bowerman, two other residents at Battin-Fielding, say they know of a pensioner who had her pension chopped a dollar or two presumably because she had saved $100 — money she was putting aside to pay for her funeral.

"It seems we aren't allowed to have any savinngs," says Miss Lemire, 33, "Not a cent, nothing, or we'll get our pension cut."

"I think a lot of disabled were hoping Mr. Vander Zalm would come up with some sort of program that would really help them," says Miss Bowerman, a 38-year-old spastic paralysis victim.

"But this isn't helping. All he's doing is making more waves, creating more stress and anxiety.

"We're always in the position where we have to ask for so damn many things. But why should we be always on the asking side? We want also to be on the giving side too."



It's a Vancouver radio station which is promoting a public competition to name the Burrard Inlet ferry system but it's a Victoria man who's come up with what we think is a winner.

You've read of the Yarrows Ltd.-built bright orange boat buses, Beaver and Otter, which will hustle commuter traffic across the inlet come spring? Question is: what to call the system?

The London underground is known to all as "the tube." In Paris it's the Metro. San Francisco has BART, the Bay Area Rapid Transit.

Peter Davies of Victoria says we should call our system — BIFY (Burrard Inlet [illegible]y.), or better yet BIFFY to recognize the ferries.

Then, he says, people can declaim: "I've been on the BIFFY today."

While the legislature sits Monday Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy will be walking the streets of Seattle handing out daffodils.

She will be among 35 Victorians promoting this city in what the Victoria Chamber of Commerce calls its Bloomin' Blitz of Washington. Mrs. McCarthy and the group, many of them in Victorian costume, will be photographed and interviewed by the Seattle media.

Mayor Mike Young is also going — but it is not certain whether he will be handing out daffodils.

Organizers are Flos Prior, Dennis Eyolfson and Ald. Helen Beirnes.

Everyone complains about juvenile delinquency, but unlike Mark Twain's weather, people can do something about it.

In this case, the Mainstay Research Project funded by an LIP grant has issued a questionnaire to 5,000 area residents asking them to express their views on the delinquency problem.

Project spokesman Gary Hubbs says there is a need for more community involvement in the rehabilitation of juvenile offenders.

Manyof the kids need homes in the city — but there just aren't enough homes. The questionnaire hopes to find neighborhoods and groups of people willing to help.

"Then Mainstay will investigate way of reaching those adequate," he says.

The students will scour the neighborhood for pledges several days prior to scouring the neighborhood for garbage.

Proceeds will go toward school activities.

Split Delays Hovercraft

Disagreement among Ministry of Transport officials has delayed delivery of the extra hovercraft which was to be based in Vancouver for marine search and rescue work.

H. O. Buchanan, of Vancuver, MoT's regional director of marine services, said today the Treasury Board was to have dealt with the purchase order on Thursday.

"It was knocked off the agenda . . . they wanted one more kick at the cat," he said.

Acting on recommendations by the special committee on search and rescue needs, it was decided to buy an SRN-6 hovercraft from British Hovercraft Co., costing roughly $1 million.

The smaller SRN-5 hovercraft now based in Vancouver is from the same company.

MoT and department of supply and service officials went to Britain, produced details and costing and prepared a purchase order. It has yet to be placed.

This is because other MoT officials want to ditch the SRN-6 in favor of the Voyageur, which costs about $2½ million, and is built in Canada by Bell Aero Space Co., an American firm which is a division of Textron.

There are two Voyageurs based in Montreal, used for icebreaking and buoy work, Bucanan said. Costing more, they are also more expensive to operate, using 180 gallons an hour compared to the SRN-6's 70 gallons an hour.

"On the plus side the Voyageur can work in higher waves but on the minus side it's a bigger machine," Buchanan said.

"The Voyageur has not yet been given a year-long diet of search and rescue," he conceded.

The allotment of funds for a new West Coast hovercraft will run out March 31.

"That's the end of the fiscal year and if you haven't spent the money you lose it," Buchanas explained.

The waffling will probably result in the West Coast again being short-changed on marine search and rescue facilities . . . for at least another boating season.

News Report 'Misleading'

A Supreme Court jury was told today the headline and parts of the first two paragraphs of a Colonist story today were "absolutely wrong and misleading".

Mr. Justic Harry McKay read to the jury the headline and first two paragraphs of an account of the fourth day of the trial of John Edward Aitken, 30, accused of first-degree murder by causing the death of Marie Alice Monique Nordelli (Gypsy) Dhillon, 30, mother of three, while committing rape.

He said there had been "no evidence before you that this is a rare blood type and in your absence yesterday there was no evidence before me that this is a rare blood type."

McKay said it is "absolutely essential" that the jury decides the case on what they hear in the courtroom "and nothing else."

Island-Long Corridor Proposed for Hikers

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Development of a 300-mile Victoria to Cape Scott trail is among 15 backpaking trails which have been recommended to Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf by the B.C. Outdoor Recreation Council.

The council says the trail would form a central recreation corridor and be feasible without a large amount of new construction because it would make extensive use of existing trails.

"As in all long distance trails, the key to success lies in the potential for using small sections of it," the council says. "Access would be available from Victoria, Port Renfrew, Bamfield, Port Alberni, Courtenay via Forbidden Plateau, Campbell River and Kelsey Bay via roads, and also Port Hardy.

Other recommendations in a brief prepared by representatives of 130 conservation and recreation groups:

—Preservation of six miles of Lochside Drive, the old CNR right-of-way, from Blenkinsop Lake to Island View Road for riders and walkers.

—Preservation of the West Coast strip between Jrdan River and Port Renfrew and River and Port Renfrew and the designation of the Cowichan River and trail as a recreational area.

—Setting aside as a "wild river" the Megin River, 15 miles west of Tofino.

The brief was prepared by the council at the request of Grace McCarthy when she was minister of recreation and conservation.

The purpose of the study was to determine to the extent of public interest in the preservation of trails, rivers, shorelines and other recreationsl areas.

"The council was overwhelmed with suggestions from Vancouver Island and the Gulf Island," said Alan Carter of Vancouver, ORCBC co-ordinator. "We received more than 45 proposals from the island alone."

"The study revealed to us that the people of this province are much more aware than poiticians of the necessity to preserve samples of natural landscapes, shorelines, historic trails and rivers," he said.

Carter said Vancouver Island needs immediate attention because of the extensive logging.

"There are few wild rivers left," he said.

The section of the council's brief dealing with Vancouver Island shows that residents are concerned for the future of all rivers because there is no protective legislation. (See story on page 51.)

The council wants immediate action to preserve the shorelines of Nitinat Lakes, Rocky Point and William and Albert Heads, Prevost Island, Brooks Peninsula, Lasqueti Island, Flat Top Island, Sooke Beach and Village Bay Lakes on Quadra Island.

They also urge designation of 25 trails — for walkers and riders, and some for more cyclists and all-terrain vehicles.

The submissions were made by represeatatives of conservation and recreational clubs with more than 10,000 members.

Regarding the west coast strip between Jordan River and Port Renfrew, the council suggests setting aside a narrow corridor for recreation. Access would be via the creek beds.

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market reversed an earlier decline to rise fractionally in light mid-afternoon trading Friday.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 1.24 million shares compared with 1.42 million at the same time Thursday.

Declines led advances 168 to 149 with 226 issues unchanged.

Power Corp. of Canada Ltd. Class A shares rose ⅛ to $8⅛ following news that a subsidiary has entered into an option agreement to sell 51 per cent of Imperial Life Assurance Co. of Canada shares to Laurentian Fund Inc. at $100 a share.

The subsidiary, Trans-Canada Corporation Fund, holds 102,490 shares.

A trading halt was issued at the opening in shares of Imperial Life Assurance, which last traded at $72 a share.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Blue chip stocks staged a modest rally Friday, but the rest of the market remained weak in slow trading.

NYSE volume came to 11.98 million shares two-thirds of the way through the session.

Analysts said traders were tentatively seeking out bargains and covering previous short sales among depressed issues in the Dow 30.

Other than that, they said, the market continued to suffer from concern over rising U.S. interest rates and fears of a resurgence of inflation.

Few stocks showed more than fractional changes on a quiet day for business and financial news.

Sony Corp., the most active NYSE issue, rose ⅛ to $9½.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate afternoon trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange Friday.

Interprovincial Pipe Line A was off ⅛ at $12⅝, Kaiser Resources ⅛ at $15, Noranda A ¼ at $31¼ and Trans-Canada Pipelines ¼ at $13½. Abitibi Paper was up ¼ at $10¼, Bank of Montreal ⅜ at $14½, Bell Canada ⅛ at $49 and Canadian International Power A ⅜ at $21.

CHICAGO

CHICAGO (AP) — Farm commodity futures prices were unevenly weak in rather light dealings on the Board of Trade Friday.

There appeared to be a lack of incentive in unusually active opening and trade then simmered down to dealings mostly among local professionals. Public involved at this point was very light.

The pattern for price movements was set on the opening when large commercial interests sold wheat, corn and soybeans futures. Soybeans fell about five cents, wheat and corn one to two cents. The losses were trimmed under some quick profit-taking by the locals again but trade then slowed down noticably.

The U.S. government reported after Thursday's close that soybeans crushed last week for oil, meal and cake totalled just over 17 million bushels. The figure was thought to be constructive and a shade under the previous week's.

There was very little export business overnight but export cimmitments, announced by the government also were considered about average. The two government reports failed to arouse any particular trading fever.

After the initial price moves, followed by profit-taking, there was another retreat in the main pits. Prices moved in a narrow range throughout the first hour. The grain moves generally influenced a steady to 4 cent lower price trend in iced broilers.

CLUES ACROSS:

3. DROP not crop. The clue's word "seasonal," while lending sense to "DROP," is hardly necessary for "crop." Also, the word "magnitude" (rather than simply size) has overtones of meaning better suited to "DROP."
7. TASTE not paste. "The world of jewelry, etc." is a vague term favoring TASTE rather than paste, which has certain specific uses. Also, it's more strictly a question of paste gems than of simply paste.
8. ACTS not arts. Unlike most ACTS, which depend partly on appreciation by the ear, "certain" ones are "purely visual." This sort of distinction is less apt in the case of arts, which are quite ordinarily understoos to be visual arts.
9. BOWL not fowl. It is in a BOWL, rather, that culinary usefulness can aptly be related to size.
10. TRAIN not trail. A trail simply slopes in places, quite independently of whether any "journey" is involved.
13. FACE not fake. The confidence inspired by a "good" looking FACE is illogical in the sense that the person may be a villain; but, if a fake looks good, it is quite logical to be confident that it's the real thing.
15. LIPS not hips. In usage, it is "thin LIPS"; but, rather, slim hips.
22. TAKE not make. Since, theoretically, a teetotaller could make an alcoholic drink (for somebody else's consumption), TAKE is more firmly apt. To TAKE a drink means to drink it.
25. PAVING not pacing. The job of PAVING the sidewalk is an occupation, but hardly an exciting one. Pacing hardly rates as an occupation at all.
26. NAGGED not nagger. If a wife is "attractive," she cannot really be a nagger. She may, unfortunately, be NAGGED.

CLUES DOWN:

1. HAIR not pair. HAIR is immediately apt: it may be "nicely groomed." Pair is a stage further removed, in that a "pair" may mean horses, and horses may be nicely groomed.
2. STRIKE not strife. It is doubtful if a typical worker ever wants strife, or considers strife necessary. "STRIKE" is more reasonable.
4. ROOM not roof. The clue hints that access would normally be easy (if one were not in danger of getting shot). ROOM is more apt, since it is fairly normal for a roof to offer no easy access.
5. PALE not pals. PALE is more apt, since being pals is supposed to reflect or result from affinity, rather than to give it. Also, if youth A is a pal of youth B, whereas youth B is a pal of youth A, is that really one thing common to both of them? Every youth is pals with somebody, surely?
6. STARTED not starved. Having STARTED is certain reason to continue; but having starved (being, presumably, no longer starving), the person has apparently given up already.
11. SAIL not fail or wail. To wail may be unwise, but hardly "dangerous" is an understatement for "fail," which can be a directly disastrous or fatal thing to do.
12. RASH not rush. Taking risks with speed in traffic is more than being in a rush, it's dangerously RASH.

Children Rate TV Ads

Asked by University researchers if they think TV commercials always tell the truth, 50 per cent of the kindergarteners surveyed said they do.

But among third graders, only 12 per cent believe ads always are truthful, and fewer than 3 per cent said yes among sixth graders.

Janis Ian's In Demand Again

By JOYCE MAYNARD

NEW YORK — If a person writes a hit song when she's 14 years old, performs with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic at 15, tours the country and records three albums by the time she's 17, and has a nervous breakdown by the time she's 20 (finding herself living at home and borrowing cigarette money, her songs turned down by the same record company that used to send limouisnes to pick her up), it's not so surprising, maybe, to find that, at 25, she has a good deal of gray hair.

The song that touched off Janis Ian's career in 1967, was a folkpop lament called "Society's Child," about a doomed romance between a white girl and a black boy. More than a million copies of "Society's Child" were sold, but by 1969, Miss Ian had spent all her money and abandoned her career.

"I did it for survival," she says now, eight years later, having made her comeback, last year, with the Grammy-award-winning song "At Seventeen." With her new album, "Miracle Row," just released, Miss Ian spoke last week in her simply furnished apartment, across from Lincoln Centre, shortly before setting out on a national concert tour that will bring her to Carnegie Hall on April 9.

"I just got bored with myself," she said of the early fame that led to her five years in retirement, to a period of psychiatric therapy. "And I got sick of not fitting in anywhere. I wasn't an adult and I wasn't a kid. People almost expect prodigies to die young."

And for a while, Janis Ian appeared to be headed toward obliging them. "There's about two years that are totally blank for me," she said with detachment. "A lot of drugs and weird relationships, and a trip to the hospital after I got hold of a razor blade.

"Then, a couple of years ago, the romanticism of being crazy stopped for me. I got gastroenteritis and ended up spending six months flat on my back, eating tapioca and thinking. And I just decided I wanted to be sane again. I remembered what I really set out to do, so I got back into doing it."

In the years since she left the music business, though, fashions had changed considerably, and the folk-styled, classically trained singer, no longer quite young enough to be a curiosity, found herself unable to get a recording contract. She played small concerts, performing — for frequentl hostile audiences — as the opening act for rock bands whose members would make disparging comments to her backstage, or try to pick her up, thinging she was a groupie.

JANIS IAN

Finally, though, she was given a contract. The title song of her comeback album — far more musically complex and jazz-oriented than her earlier work — was called "Stars":

Altars, they come and go
They come fast or slow
They go like the last light
Of the sun, all in a blaze
And all you see is glory
But it gets lonely there
When there's no one here to share . . .

(c. 1972 Mine Music Ltd. — April Music Inc. Reprinted by permission.)

After "Stars" came an album called "Between the Lines," which included a song called "At Seventeen" about the experi ence of being an unpopular, unpretty high school girl surrounded by cheerleaders and prom queens. Her biggest hit since "Society's Child," "At Seventeen" elevated Miss Ian once more to the level of a performer for whom other singers serve as the opening act, for whom limousines once more come to the door, for whom the seats on the plane are, once again, in the first-class section.

"People get different, after you have a hit," she said somewhat toughly. "It's like you suddenly inherit a million dollars."

This time, though, Miss Ian feels more confident with her success. She admits to enjoying the money and the customized bus she has just acquired for touring, with a 65-foot tractor-trailer following behind, carrying sound equipment, and the expanded circle that now includes two business managers, a secretary, a lawyer, an agent, a publicity woman, a three-piece band and back-up vocalist.

She enjoys the gold records — which hang in her bathroom — and a certain feeling of vindication she experienced going up on stage in front of an audience that included most of the record company executives who had turned her down when she brought them her new songs in 1973. But the most important benefit from her recent success, Miss Ian said, is that it has given her freedom to work.

When she's not on tour, she spends most of her time in New York, writing songs. The living room of her apartment looks more like the set for a teevision show — with simple, matched modern sofas, upholstered in beige and brown checks — than what a visitor might expect of a young performer of semi-rock music. There are photographs of her parents on a coffee table, and the place is spotless.

In the music room, seven guitars hang on wood-paneled walls beside the piano, which is a Steinway, and on the bookshelves there is a row of file boxes neatly labeled "Correspondence" and "Songs — 1971" and "Dylan" and an indication of the singer's jazz leanings — "Billie Holiday." And next to them, a leather-bound set of Dickens.

Janis Ian herself appears similarly unflamboyant — in hammed blue jeans, a tailored shirt and a blazer. A little heavier than she was at 15, she wears her hair in the same short, curly Afro style. But though she is less than five feet tall, even with heels on, she no longer looks, or speaks, like the precocious kid. Her talk is not only of performances and music, but also of song rights and royalities. She has an office and a file cabinet. She has a briefcase.

Miss Ian's feelings of alienation from the cheerleaders' world have been a continuing theme through much of her singing career. In the lyrics she writes the singer often sees herself as unattractive and unloved. There are a lot of songs with titles like "Let Me Be Lonely" and "I'll Cry Tonight," about lovers who left, or simply never appeared in the first palce.

Not a pretty or glamorous woman, Miss Ian has a sweet face, especially when she smiles, but gives the impression of a person who thinks otherwise about herself. She moves, for someone so small, with little lightness. She dresses darkly. There is not much coquetry in her, and if there is vanity, one would guess she finds it all in the music, not in the mirror. "I got away too long with being cute," she will say, and then hastily add, "I mean, in my music."

She has known, since she was 12 years old, she said, that she's sexually attracted to both men and women — a subject that she speaks about openly, but dismisses with the comment, "I don't see what that has to do with my music."

Hot Lips Houlihan

White Wedding for Hot Lips

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Hot Lips Houlihan, the naughty nurse in M-A-S-H, will be married on the series next month, ending prime time television's longest extramarital affair.

Maj. Margaret Houlihan has been horsing around with Major Frank Burns for four years now. But this year they have gone increasingly to bed alone.

Hot Lips has found a lieutenant colonel in Tokyo and on March 15, the final show of the current season, the happy couple will exchange vows in one of the wackiest ceremonies in the annals of the tube.

The rites will be conducted by Father Mulcahy, the show's not-too-bright vicar. Major Burns, near hysteria at the loss of Hot Lips, will act as best man. Col. Sherman Potter will give the bride away.

Corporal Klinger, the weirdo transvestite of the field hospital group, will challenge nurse Houlihan for best dressed member of the wedding party. He will be the bridesmaid in a fluffy silk robin's egg blue empire gown and pearl necklace, carrying a nosegay of violets.

Leave it to Hot Lips to make a mockery of the solemn nuptial ceremony. The brazen hussy has the gall to wear white. She who has seduced, or tried to seduce, everyone above the rank of major who ever stumbled into the hospital.

Once she becomes the bride of Lt. Col. Donald Penobscott, will Hot Lips remain faithful, or will she revert to her old alley-cat proclivities?

"That's hard to say," said Loretta Swit, the lush blonde who plays Hot Lips to a tee, "it all depends on the writers.

"I do know that if Margaret fools around she will be the first prime time married lady to cheat on her husband. But then she was the first prime time lady to carry on a hot and heavy affair and get away with it.

"She may even remain true to her husband. Margaret has mostly been a one-man woman, even if it was the wrong man."

Switt is a curious actress. She defends Hot Lips as if the nurse were her twin sister. Loretta, incidentally, refers to Houlihan only by her christian name, Margaret. Never Hot Lips.

"The producers tell me that Margaret's bridegroom returns to Tokyo where he's stationed," Loretta said. "That means she will be separated from him for long periods and probably will take her sexual frustrations out on the poor guys in the M-A-S-H group.

"I'm not sure Margaret is capable of a really deep love. I think part of her interest in her husband is the fact that he's a lieutenant colonel. Margaret is impressed with rank.

"She'd probably like him a lot better if he were a general."

Off screen, Loretta has never been married. One assumes her love life is considerably more discreet than Houlihan's.

Certainly, she doesn't dig military brass. At least she hasn't been seen in public with anyone in uniform.

But Loretta may beat Hot Lips to the altar. Loretta said she has fallen in love and will be married soon herself.

"The race is to the swit," was the way she put it. The man in her life is a New York stock broker and they plan to be married in Rhode Island.

"The date hasn't been set yet. But I just may get married before Margaret does. We'll make our home here in southern California."

Loretta said there are few parallels between herself and Houlihan.

"Margaret and I look a lot alike but we don't have much of anything else in common," she said, laughing.

"Margaret has no sense of humor. But she's a great nurse. I wouldn't be much of a nurse. She likes war games. And she's impressed with superficialities.

"But when push comes to shove, Margaret is a good kid. She loves children and so do I. She can never have a child on the show because they'd send her back to the states and that would be the end of Margaret on the series."

Loretta doesn't think Hot Lips' marriage will seriously alter the interrelationships of the characters in M-A-S-H. She believes Houlihan's marital status will open new avenues of comedy.

"The emphasis is distributed among so many characters on our show that Margaret's new status won't disturb the point of view that much," she said.

"I really don't know what the producers have in mind. But you can bet whatever happens to Margaret will be funny."

DR. JONAS SALK TO HOST SERIES

Dr. Jonas Salk hosts a series of six, hour-long TV dramatizations about the 19th century medical pioneers who revolutionized medicine "from a mystical mess to a rational craft." Four of history's most heralded scientists for their germ theory of disease are portrayed on Microbes And Men, Saturdays at 6 p.m. beginning Feb. 26 on Public TV 9.

Spanning 65 years between 1846 and 1911, Microbes And Men spotlights the handful of scientists who had the vision and tenacity to establish the germ theory in a world suppressed by ignorance and prejudice. The four on whom the series concentrates are Ignaz Semmelweiss, Louis Pasteur, Robert Koch and Paul Ehrlich.

The series moves chronologically, weaving each scientist's achievements in and out of the larger story of the discovery of invisible organisms (microbes), and the medical application of this knowledge. Many scenes were filmed on location, where the historical breakthrough actually occurred.

ARTHUR LOWE as chemist Louis Pasteur in Microbes and Men series.

FILTERS FOR COLOR
If you intend to do any landscape photography in color, you will need filters which are designed especially for color film.
The Skylight or 1A, for instance, cuts out much of the blue light that is so often found in high altitudes, or seascapes consisting mainly of water. Other filters used for color are the 82A, a bluish light-balancing filter to cut down the reddish color of late afternoon sunlight. A pale pink or yellow filter will add warmth if the daylight is on the bluish or cool side.
The Skylight filter does not affect the exposure, but for others the filter factor supplied by the manufacturer should be used. If you are experimentally inclined, and not concerned with reproducing true color, you can create a world of fantasy color by using other than the recommended filters and film.

Television Mailbag

By RICK ROBERTS

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Carol Burnett is absolutely the best entertainer on television. Can you tell me how she got started and where I can write to her?—J. M., Marlton, N.J.

A. Born in Texas and raised in Los Angeles, Burnett was studying journalism at UCLA when she decided to switch her career direction and began studying theatre arts.

An anonymous benefactor gave her a $1,000 loan which she used to move to New York City.

Once there, she became involved in stock productions and managed to get a 13-week appearance on the Paul Winchell Show.

In 1956, she made her first appearance on the Garry Moore daytime show, which led to a nightclub act and other television appearances.

Since those early days, she has starred in Broadway productions, movies and several television specials.

You can write to her in care of CBS, Television City, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.

Q. I'd like to know if Sada Thompson played in any other shows besides "Family?" — S.C., Somerdale, N.J.

A. One of the most distinguished stage actresses in the country, Thompson has made only a few television appearances.

Among these have been the role of Mary Todd Lincoln in the series "Sandburg's Lincoln," and in "The Entertainer."

During her acting career, she has won nearly every award presented for theatre productions, including the Tony, the Variety Poll of New York Critics Citation and the Outer Critics Circle Award.

A native of Des Moines, Iowa, she was raised in Fenwood, N.J. She studied drama at the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Q. Please help settle an argument. Who wrote the songs for the remake of "Peter Pan?" Wasn't it Burt Bacharach?—C. I., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. Anthony Newley and Leslie Bricusse wrote the musical score for the show.

Q. I would like to see the "Poseidon Adventure" come back on TV. I missed it the first time. Is there any chance it will be on again? — D.A.A., Washington, Pa.

A. There's always a good chance a movie — once shown on television — will return, again and again and again. Usually, the first two showings are sold to a network and then prints of the film are sold on a syndicated basis.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N4.

The Carpenters Join Hamill

Dorothy Hamill, Olympic gold medalist and Ice Capades star, will be joined by guest stars Beau Bridges and New York City Ballet star Edward Villella, plus special guest stars, The Carpenters, on her second Network special, which airs Sunday, February 27, at 9 p.m. on the CTV Television Network, Channel 8.

Produced on location in Quebec City, during the Quebec Winter Carnival, this special program will feature Ms. Hamill in a display of her exciting figure skating talents. In addition, she will appear in a variety of sketches with Bridges and Richard and Karen Carpenter, and she will dance with Villella.

This will be the second special for Ms. Hamill, whose first show last fall on the CTV Television Network, "The Dorothy Hamill Special," drew high ratings and praise for her talents.

Her special on February 27 will be produced by Al Rogers and Rich Eustis, and Bill Davis will direct.

School-Fitness Classes Produce Unfit Children

School fitness programs are found lacking in a report by Gail Scott, which focuses on the inadequacies of physical education classes that are producing a generation of unfit and unhealthy children.

The shortcomings of children's physical-fitness programs will be one of the W5 team's reports on Sunday, Feb. 27 at 10 p.m. on Channel 8.

Other reports scheduled are:

Consumer reporter Ruth Fremes explores the North American phenomenon of bartering which has incredible implications in beating the taxman. Bartering — the exchange of goods for service or service for goods — even reaches into the high realms of corporate wheeling and dealing.

Investigative reporter Jim Reed files a story that offers a perfect example of bureaucratic strangulation of human enterprise that costs money and lost opportunities as he speaks with David Harison, a Vancouver man who ran a successful LIP grant-supported employment agency until the Government decided he wasn't good enough at filling out forms.

Filmed on location at the Winter Palace in Tehren, reporter Isabel Bassett, with Field Producer Peter Reynolds, offer an exclusive interview with her Majesty Farah Diba, Empress of Iran. Among the last of the absolute monarchs, the Empress, her husband, the Shah and their four children talk freely of their unique position and lifestyle.

"W5" is produced by Jack McGraw with associate producers Dave Quance and Jeff Fry for CTV's News, features and information programming department.

FILM DRAMATIZES HABITS OF WASTE

Modern society with its penchant for creating garbage at an accelerating pace becomes a mini-drama in One Man's Garden, to be seen on the CBC-TV network, Sunday, February 27, at 12:30 p.m.

In this story, the young hero has been rejected by his ladylove and the traumatic experience leads him to the conclusion that the ultimate destiny of all things and beings is to be discarded as waste. He descends into the Realm of Refuse in quest of the truth about garbage and becomes the patron saint of all that is burned, buried or discarded.

One Man's Garden is a National Film Board production, written and directed by Donald Winkler. Don Scanlan plays the role of Simon, the modern-day version of Adam who could have started the first garbage dump when he tossed away the first apple core.

RETURNS HOME

Clark to Work In CBC Drama

By JAMES NELSON

TORONTO (CP) — Susan Clark has returned home after 10 years in Hollywood to work on a television show and one of the first things she did was spend some hours in the tender care of the Metropolitan Toronto Police.

She was with them by prior arrangement to learn to handle a gun so that she can play the classic role of Hedda Gabler with well-practised ease.

"That's what makes acting such fun, as well as work," she said in an interview. "You're always learning something new, and being paid for it."

Miss Clark was prominent in Canadian stage, radio and TV work until 1967 when she signed her Hollywood contract. It has been renegotiated once and still has another year to run. After that, she said, she has lots of plans for the future.

Two years ago, she won an Emmy award for the best single performance by an actress for the title role in Babe, the biography of Babe Didrikson Zaharias, the famed woman athlete. For that role, she spent 10 weeks, working six to eight hours a day, in athletic training.

Last year, she played the lead in Amelia, the film biography of aviatrix Amelia Erhart. She spent 18 hours in a small plane, learning to fly.

Now she is rehearsing the great Ibsen play for a CBC-TV production which will go on the air next season.

It's a role Miss Clark has wanted to do for many years because, she said, she feels a great compassion for Hedda.

Hedda is a woman of the 1890s who rides well and handles handguns easily. Miss Clark likes to ride, but guns were something outside her experience until she took lessons from the Metro police.

A native of Sarnia, Ont., who grew up in Toronto, she has kept her ties with Canada, having a farm near Collingwood, Ont., and relatives here. While she has made frequent visits to Toronto in the last 10 years, this is her first work project.

Hedda Gabler is being directed by George Bloomfield, who also directed the production of Heloise and Abelard in which Miss Clark appeared 10 years ago. It was that performance that brought her to the attention of Universal Studios in Hollywood.

Tall and lythe, with auburn hair and grey-green eyes, Miss Clark said she still likes to do the occasional stage show and would like to do more radio work. But nobody in the U.S., nor in Canada except for the CBC, does radio drama any more. And with her contract with Universal, she can't undertake any long-run stage work.

The Hedda Gabler engagement, therefore, is ideal for her, taking about 3½ weeks to rehearse and record.

She did Lady Macbeth in Shakespeare's play at the Seattle Repertory Theatre in 1973, and that was a thrill for her, to get out of the film and television studios and back onto the stage, doing the kind of work for which she trained initially.

She studied ballet, voice and piano as a child, and made her professional mark at the age of 16 in a production of Silk Stockings with Don Ameche. With that behind her, she went to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London, winning scholarships and a number of roles with the Shakespeare Festival Company.

In Canada between 1964 and 1967, she was in such TV specials as Oscar Wilde's An Ideal Husband and Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew.

The CBC seems to have been avoiding the standard classics in its TV drama department lately, and its preparation of Hedda Gabler for next season may signal a return to them.

Encampment of Arabs Hired for TV Drama

When the 'Ten Who Dared" crew went to Africa to film on location in the Sahara, casting the extras was easy — the producers simply hired the nearest encampment of Arabs. There was only one hitch — as all the campers were nomads, there seemed no way to plan in advance. And shooting wasn't scheduled to start for three months.

Producer Michael Latham decided on an extraordinary precaution — one of the production managers was assigned to live and travel with the new cast members until the cameras were ready to roll. Three months later, the nomads arrived exactly on time — an impressive daybreak procession of men, women, children, goats, camels and tents.

But the production manager was nowhere to be seen. As it turned out, he was virtually unrecognizable — 90 days in the desert has drained his body by 40 pounds, and his skin had turned the color of old rawhide.

The point of it all was to make a realistic television film about Charles Doughty, a solitary Victorian who wandered the Sahara in search of legendary ruins said to bear and inscription in an unknown tongue.

Doughty is the subject of the eighth episode of "Ten Who Dared," the 10-part Mobil Showcase television series about great adventurers. Hosted by Anthony Quinn, it will be telecast on Channel 11 on Thursday at 8 p.m. However unrecognizable the "Ten Who Dared" production manager became as a result of his grueling experience — "he wound up working as a nightwatchman at a chemical plant, trying to forget all about television," according to producer Latham — Doughty's trek was longer, lonelier and far more dangerous, for Christian visitors were most unwelcome in Arabia in the 1870s.

The Arabs called him "infidel," and attempts were made on his life. Doughty would have been better off if he had disguised himself as a Moslem, as had every European who had preceded him. But he was a willful man, and refused to pose as something he was not.

Such integrity did not fail to impress. Decades later, T. E. Lawrence visited Western Arabia. Doughty, Lawrence wrote, "had become a legend in the desert. They tell tales of . . . the tall impressive figure, very wise and gentle, who came to them like a herald of the outside world."

The script for "Charles Doughty" was written by David Howarth, author of "The Desert King," a biography of King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia. And it marks the directorial debut of David McCallum, the former "Man from UNCLE" star.

Girl's Look at Love In Childhood Series

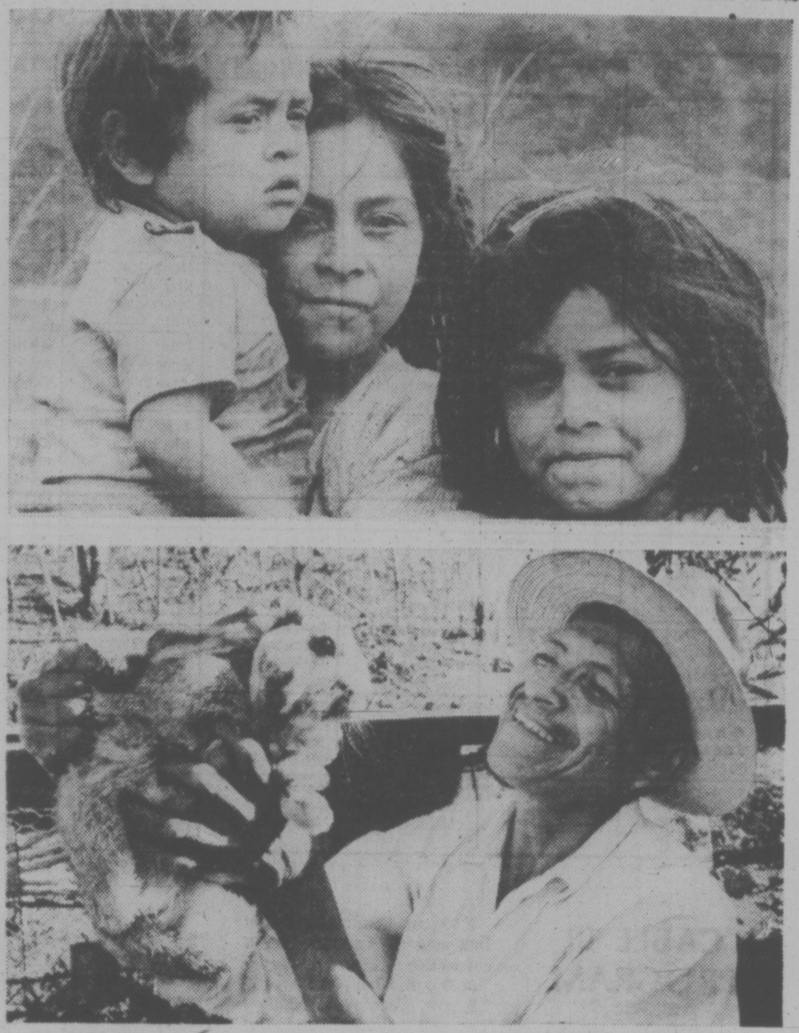
A nine-year-old girl's naivety of an adult love affair sets the course for a romantic fantasy on Barbara Waring's autobiographical drama, "Easter Tells Such Dreadful Lies," the Great Performances "Childhood" presentation on Wednesday, March 2 at 9 p.m. on Public TV 9 (rebroadcast Sunday, March 6 at 2 p.m.).

Under the spell of her own imagination, Easter Braden drifts into a shimmering fantasy when her older brother, Harry, idly tells her that her surgeon father is having an affair with one of his patients, Nancy Thomas. Harry, 13, goes away on a camping holiday and Easter gets to know Nancy Thomas, who lives with her old mother in a cottage nearby, and is fraught with romantic significance, and is only sorry that the lovers will not trust her enough to speak out.

When Harry returns, Easter confides in him about the romance. He's completely forgotten what he's told her, and cruelly decides to go with Easter to Nancy's cottage where he tells the whole torrid fabrication to the Thomases. The fantasy is shattered and Easter runs off in humiliation to hide her tears.

Network Stars

TEAM CAPTAINS Cabe Kaplan of ABC and Telly Savalas of CBS play volleyball, NBC's Robert Conrad tests his arm with a baseball throw and ABC's Penny Marshall swings a tennis racquet at ABC Sports' "Battle of the Network Stars" last year won by ABC. They'll all be back when ABC answers the challenge of CBS and NBC on "Challenge of the Network Stars," an ABC Sports special airing Monday, Feb. 28 at 9 p.m. on the ABC Television Network, Channel 4.



ONE YEAR AGO Guatemala was torn apart by an earthquake that killed some 2,200 people and left one-third of the country homeless. Monday, Feb. 28 at 10:30 p.m. CBC-TV's Man Alive focuses on this tiny Central American country as its people rebuild their lives through self-help programs which are being partially financed through $22 million of Canadian aid. The program is entitled Campo Vivo which in Guatemala means the countryside is alive.

Playwrights Grant Announced by ABC

In a move to expand opportunities for playwrights and to increase the amount of original dramatic material for television, American Broadcasting Companies, Inc. has provided a grant to the National Playwrights Conference of the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Center, Waterford, Conn.

The grant was announced today by Frederick S. Pierce, president of ABC Television. Pierce said the grant was an expression of ABC's continuing desire to support and encourage the creation of new dramatic works. "This not only provides an opportunity for young playwrights," he said, "but establishes a foundation for cultural achievements and helps to enrich all of the performing arts, including television."

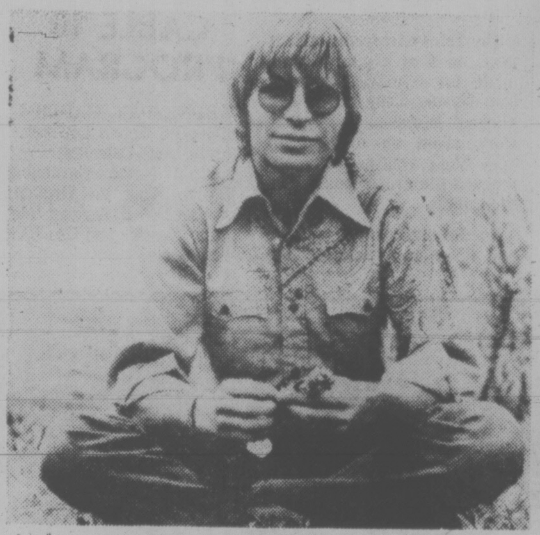
500 Million Blackbirds Invade U.S. Countryside

Uncanny as the Alfred Hitchcock script, an estimated 500 million blackbirds invade the American countryside from New England to Texas every year. The rash of problems that accompanies the ominous winged population is the subject of NOVA's "Bye Bye Blackbird," Wednesday, March 2 at 8 p.m. (rebroadcast Saturday, March 5 at 5 p.m.) on Public TV 9.

Acutely aware of damage to crops caused by birds, farmers from the central agricultural belt agree that "something must be done!" Spurred on by fears that the birds are responsible for spreading the sometimes fatal disease, histoplasmosis, and the fact that birds have caused fatal air crashes, citizens have set out to destroy their roosts.

But desperate naturalists have been quick to defend the birds against their would-be destroyers. And sandwiched between these opposing views are federal and state wildlife services, charged on the one had to protect America's wildlife, and on the other, to develop wildlife controlling research and — sometimes — to supervise the destruction of the birds.

"Bye Bye Blackbird" is an assessment of the blackbird dilemma, that considers both the behavior of the animals, and the havoc they wreak on our economy and health. Human beings and nature are seeming less compatible all the time.



JOHN DENVER will star in new one-hour special Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 8 and Wednesday at 9 p.m. on 4. Also appearing are Johnny Cash, Glen Campbell, Roger Miller and Mary Kay Place.

Diana Ross on TV

Award-winning entertainer Diana Ross will make a rare TV appearance in a 90-minute special Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 8.

Along with the obvious entertainment values, An Evening with Diana Ross, taped recently in Los Angeles, also depicts Diana's life story and career. Of the many important stages in Diana's career, one of the most significant and identifiable with her success was her association with "The Supremes". That time is reflected in a flashback to those days and a medley of their hits that includes "Love Child", "Baby Love", "Stop in the Name of Love", and "You Keep Me Hanging On". This portion of the show concludes with film clips of their final performance together.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

'Fascinating Character'

By STEVEN H. SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Birgitta Tolksdorf plays Arlene in "Love of Life" (CBS), the blonde beauty who craves all the finer things in life and knows how to go about getting them.

"I guess you could say Arlene is from the wrong side of the tracks but she isn't altogether a bad girl," Birgitta said, defending the character she has been playing for more than two years.

"When the writers created Arlene, I think they saw her as more of a tramp, but I'm glad they decided to give her more depth. She isn't lucky as far as men are concerned, but that's part of the fascination of a character like Arlene. No matter how bleak her life becomes, she seems to bounce back."

The lovely actress, born in Osnabruck, West Germany, came to the United States as a young girl, studied classical piano for years as a young girl, and earned a Bachelor of Music degree from Fontbonne College in St. Louis.

"All my teachers said I showed promise and I could have probably become a concert -pianist, but I didn't have the temperament for it," Birgitta confessed. "It was a very lonely existence, sitting hours upon end practicing by yourself. I did it for a number of years and then I finally made a decision to get out into the world."

Acting appealed to Birgitta, and working with other actors certainly freed her from the solitary life.

"I didn't touch a keyboard for almost two years," said Birgitta. "However, recently, I started playing a little each day, and I find I have a whole different outlook on it. I actually enjoy playing now."

Perhaps Birgitta will find a role in which she can incorporate her piano playing with her acting. In the meantime, she can be seen as the sexy Arlene Lovett Harper in "Love of Life."

Gets What She Wants

Birgitta Tolksdorf (above) has been "tramping" through "Love of Life" (CBS) as Arlene Lovett Harper, a woman who knows how to get what she wants; Andrea McArdle (right) who's Wendy Wilkins in "Search for Tomorrow" (CBS), is headed for Broadway, playing the title role in the musical, "Annie."

CHANNEL CHATTER

Andrea McArdle, who is seen as Wendy Wilkins in the long-running "Search for Tomorrow" (CBS), won the coveted role of Little Orphan Annie in the Broadway-bound musical, "Annie." Andrea could be the latest Toast of the Great White Way . . . Veteran actor Larry Gates has joined the "Guiding Light" (CBS) as District Attorney Eric Van Gelder, and he'll be busy at the trial of Rita Stapleton, the nurse involved in the death of Malcolm Granger . . . Paul Gleason, who played Dr. David Thornton in "All My Children" (ABC), took leave from the show. Most of his time seems to be spent in the company of beautiful Candice Bergen . . . Shades of Dark Shadows. NBC is planning a 13-week serialization of two Gothic novels, "Spindrift" by Phyllis Whitney and "The Dark Shore" by Susan Howatch. Each series will be presented on daytime TV in half-hour chapters—if the dramas are well received, you can probably look for more of the same. The mini-series has even found its way into the soap opera world . . . Veteran soap opera fans who go back to radio days will be sad to note that Virginia Payne, who played "Ma Perkins" for 27 years on CBS Radio (1933-1960), died Feb. 10th at age 66 in Cincinnati, Ohio.

PLOT PORTENTS

On "All My Children," Anne and Paul's tension regarding their retarded infant daughter, Beth, reaches its peak when a climactic turn of events indelibly affects their already strained relationship.

Jeff is in the middle of a big mess on "General Hospital" (ABC). He wants Monica to have a baby and worries about Heather refusing to consider an abortion. Meanwhile, the plot thickens when Diana begins to suspect Heather's letter to her mother is forged. Over at the Dante's house, suspicion is also rife—Mary Ellen thinks Mark is fooling around and Mark thinks Mary Ellen doesn't love him anymore.

The real motives for the death of Trish's stepfather Jack remain murky to Salem citizens on "Days of Our Lives" (NBC). Lawyer Mickey hasn't gleaned the truth, and Doctor Laura with her sodium pentothol truth serum has only a few clues. But watch for a breakthrough soon.

On "Ryan's Hope" (ABC), Mary and Jack's strained marriage continues downhill, so to speak, while Faith Coleridge feels let down by her surrogate mother, Maeve. Also, Delia doesn't help matters much when she puts her two cents in regarding Faith and Pat's wedding plans.

As usual, the outrageous plots continue on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Heather catches her parents making love; Martha learns she's been fired; Grandpa convinces his girl friend to move in with him; and Cathy tries to shock the baby kidnapper.

Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

I like to think that there are still some people in the world who might give something away rather than sell it — although, Heaven knows, they are few. I am thinking of those who might own some item of historical interest which properly belongs in a local museum or art gallery which, often enough, does not have the budget to acquire everything that is offered. Fortunately there is a device which allows the owner to feel like a public benefactor and make a profit at the same time.

Let us say you own a painting, a scene in your own town by a local artist of the 19th century — or a pioneer diary or sketchbook — items which clearly belong with the local art gallery where the rest of the population can enjoy them and where they can be expertly protected against the further ravages of time. All you have to do is to offer them as donations. If the offer is accepted, the gallery will have the painting or what-not appraised by an independent expert (people of unimpeachable integrity) who will estimate its current market value. The gallery will then give you an income tax receipt for that figure.

Consider the alternatives. You can look for a private buyer — a costly, time-consuming needle-in-a-haystack operation in which you are helplessly vulnerable. You can sell the item to a dealer, who will not long remain in business if he gives you more than one-third of its probable resale value — or you can reduce your income tax payments by an equivalent amount, more if you are in a higher tax bracket. Take a pencil and paper and figure it out. It works.

Robt. Lasalle of Penticton, B.C., asks if I know how the old carbide lamps used to work.

They were popular around the turn of the century with miners and bicyclists. As I understand it, the lamp was constructed in two parts. The lower chamber held calcium carbide, a common grey chemical which could be purchased in lumps from the hardware store.

The upper chamber was filled with water which dripped onto the carbide causing a chemical reaction which released a combustible gas which escaped through the burner where it was ignited with a sparking device or a match.

HOLLYWOOD — Max Von Sydow, a star of "Voyage of the Damned," regretfully believes that too many people are missing the point of the picture, or at least the point as he sees it.

The film tells the poignant story of Jewish refugees attempting to escape Hitler's Germany with no place to run.

"Some critics see this as purely Jewish propaganda, but it's not that," Von Sydow said the other day during an interview in the lobby of Los Angeles' Century Plaza Hotel.

"Nor is it a reminder of what happened once that we mustn't let happen again.

"The picture isn't about the past. It's contemporary."

So what's its import?

Is it a plea in behalf of Russian Jews who'd like to escape to Israel?

"Oh, no," Von Sydow said. "It is a reminder that we have refugees in the word today and that we must do something about the problem.

"Yes, I'm talking about the Palestinian refugees. I'm talking about all refugees.

MAX VON SYDOW
. . . a reminder

"I don't know how to solve their problem, but we must solve the refugees' problems first and then the problems of the world so that there will be no more refugees."

Von Sydow not only fails to agree with the critical interpretation of "The Voyage of the Damned," he doesn't even agree with the most usual interpretation of "the Exorcist," another film in which he starred.

"That wasn't about a confrontation with the devil so much as it was about mothers who don't love their children enough," he declared.

"The principal character was the young priest whose mother didn't love him enough.

"Then we had the young girl whose mother didn't love her enough either, not enough to give her the care she needed.

"This lack of love gave the devil an opportunity to do his work."

Hilly Hicks to be seen next in "Gray Lady Down" was a child preacher, but don't confuse him with Marjoe Gortner, because Hicks is still preaching.

"I'm a preacher in the old Baptist tradition," Hicks avers. "That doesn't conflict with being an actor, too, because most of the Baptist preachers I know feel that you have to have two occupations.

"You can preach even when you're not preaching. Let your light shine, you know . . ."

Hicks got into acting by way of the student body presidency at Thomas Jefferson High School in Los Angeles which served as unidentified background for a movie called "Halls of Anger."

Hicks helped with the script and played a small part in the movie.

"I kept preaching and acting both right through high school and Occidental College," he remembers. "Other students used to call me 'Preacher' which was all right except that it caused me some trouble with girls.

"Preaching still does, in fact.

"Some girls feel funnier about going out with a preacher than they do about going out with an actor."

In "Gray Lady Down," Hicks plays a navy medical corpsman, a role in which he feels very much at home, pointing out:

"A preacher is a healer too."

Bullet ants, the world's largest, are being sought in Belem, Brazil, by Dr. Charles Hogue, senior curator of entomology for the Los Angeles County Musem of Natural History, for casting in AIP's production of H. G. Wells' "The Empire of the Ants."

According to the plot, Joan Collins and Robert Lansing, human stars of the movie, will be attacked by mutant ants as large as tigers.

Although the ants being sought by Dr. Hogue don't really run that big, he does expect to round up about 10,000 of the kind, each at least an inch and a quarter long.

World Population Keeps Growing

The world's population continues to grow at the rate of 2.2 per cent a year, according to figures compiled by the Environmental Fund. The world's population is now 4.15 billion.

Population is growing fastest in Africa, Asia and Latin America, and a report in Family Practice News, a publication for physicians, observes that "because of their continuing high birth rates, the developing countries of these three continents have now reached the point where 40 per cent or more of their national populations are under 15 years of age."

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

HOLLYWOOD — With two malignancies and widowhood behind her, Marguerite Piazza is ready for the stage and camera again.

And, oh, what a delight she is!

For in addition to possessing still the marvelous voice which made her a star of the New York City Centre Opera Company and late of the Metropolitan Opera and the presence and personality which kept her on television's "The Show of Shows" for its five successful years, she now has the mein of a gallant woman who's survived deepest adversity.

Beautiful and gifted, her success came early in the New York City Centre Opera.

Then, as television began to roll, she was recruited for the new medium. She appeared with Ed Sullivan and Jack Paar and then was signed by producer Max Liebman to join Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca on "The Show of Shows."

From there she went to the Met, becoming the only star of a television series ever to have made that remarkable transition.

One might have thought that her life couldn't have been improved upon, yet it was when she met and married William J. Condon, a handsome and wealthy Tennessean.

Marguerite Piazza
. . . from TV to the Met

After becoming the mother of six children, Marguerite redirected her career toward supper club appearances so that she could have more time with her family.

She and her husband bought a gracious old mansion in Memphis and she became extremely active in the city's civic and charitable affairs.

Her life was a dream come true until 1968.

In that terrible year, Condon died of a heart attack and Marguerite learned that she had melanoma, a particularly vicious type of cancer.

When her doctor told her that she could be beautiful in her coffin or scarred by radical surgery, Marguerite promptly insisted that she wanted to live, because she wanted to bring up her children.

The operation was successful, but its aftermath, which included plastic surgery, was painful. Nevertheless, five months after the ordeal, Marguerite was singing with the Memphis Symphony Orchestra, her optimism intact.

But she might not have been so optimistic had she known that a second round with cancer was ahead of her, cancer of the uterus which struck two years ago.

Again her ordeal was violently painful.

"I had two radium implants for 72 hours, and the radium hurt worse than the surgery," she says.

But, once more, surgery was successful so that now Marguerite feels radiantly healthy.

She has remarried (her husband is Harry Bergtholdt) and, since her second experience with cancer, she and her entire family have become deeply interested in natural vitamins as a way to better health.

Bergtholdt is encouraging his wife to expand her career, which she's never completely abandoned, and, since her children are now old enough to spare her, she's eager to use her talents more widely.

"You can't take a person out of an environment she's known all her life and expect her to be contented," she says.

McClelland and Stewart have a winner with Ghost Fox, by James Houston. It's a popular historical romance dealing with an archetypal North American subject — life among the Indians as seen through the eyes of a white captive. The time is mid-eighteenth century, painstakingly researched; the local is Quebec and New England, which its author knows well; and the perceptions of Sarah, its white captive heroine, are as contemporary as a 50-cent cup of coffee.

Except for an awkward first chapter, Ghost Fox also manages to achieve a pace which varies from a lively lope to a spell-binding gallop. I found myself reading it while dusting the piano, zipping my snowboots and feeding the cat. (Some books are so hard to put down that it's easier to take them with you.)

Not that Ghost Fox doesn't have its flaws. Characterization, for example, is only superficial. Houston's all-out attempt at humor, when Sarah romps with a jolly Scots major given to capsule history lessons and dialectical clangers like "by Jove!", falls flat. Metaphors which persist in reinforcing human sentiments (fireflies like "long-lost children," blizzards which "purify," loons which "cry like a baby") are so frequent they're distractingly noticeable. And worst of all, Houston is occasionally guilty of manipulating his characers to make them conform to the necessities of his plot. (As in his disposal of Peleg, at the end of the novel.)

Such complaints would be enough to sink most novels. Set against Houston's very real achievements in Ghost Fox, however, they seem like ungrateful nit-picking. When a writer can hold a reader's attention like this, who cares if he's not Leo Tolstoy?

★ ★ ★

"Ghost Fox" is Sarah Wells's Indian name, given her because of her pale skin and long "queue" of auburn hair. Sarah is 17, strong and "heavy-chested" and with a "a bonnie way about her." When an Abnaki raiding part attacks her farmhouse, she stands her ground with a pitchfork. Of course it is no use.

She is tied by means of a rawhide neckline and dragged off along with Peleg, a Scottish bondsman who later escapes. They are taken as slaves in reprisal for Abnaki losses in the continuing French and Indian wars, in which the Abnaki sided with the French against their sworn foes, the Mohawks, who sided with the English.

Their destination is Mississquoi, at the north-eastern tip of Lake Champlain. After a series of mostly harrowing events, Sarah manages to escape. More harrowing events and she is caught. Next follows a peaceful period as the adopted daughter of a chief, and the beginning of Sarah's appreciation of the Indian way of life. ("We believed you lived a wretched life. Yet I see now that your life here is far easier and more pleasant than the one we used to live at home."

But nothing lasts forever, especially peace. A shifty trapper arrives, with a barrel of rum and disaster hard on his heels. I won't disclose Houston's ending, except to say that his denouement is pure 20th century escapist romance. Houston's readers should readily accept it and so should movie audiences. (I'll eat my typewriter ribbon if Ghost Fox doesn't end up as a movie. Fortunately for my digestive system, a precedent has already been set with Houston's first novel, White Dawn, which was filmed in the Arctic and published in 13 languages.)

★ ★ ★

Other sure-fire attributes of this novel include Houston's relative reticence on the subject of sex (making his book acceptable to all ages), his handling of violence as an aspect of Indian sociology (making it seem not only non-gratuitous, but even necessary), and the fact that Ghost Fox is based on a true story.

There's an anecdote Houston tells which illustrates the lengths he was prepared to go to in his efforts to make the novel authentic. At one point his heroine decides to spend the night in a tree, as a precaution against marauding wolves. Can a human being actually sleep in a tree, Houston wanted to know?

So he climbed one — in a New England forest — to find out. While he was discovering the answer (yes, if you let your limbs dangle, cougar-style) a man with a rifle came along and wanted to know what the hell he was doing. Houston said he couldn't bring himself to tell the fellow he was researching a novel. "Oh, I'm just sort of — up here," he said. Fortunately for the reading public, the man with the rifle was satisfied with that.

KINGSTON . . . exorcising some ghosts

Maxine Ting Ting Hong Kingston, now 36, lives in Honolulu with her husband and 13-year-old son, 2,500 miles away from the stifling Chinese laundry and the little Victorian house in Stockton, Calif., where she grew up.

She is far from the ghosts that haunted her childhood: the ghosts of ancestors and taboo and tradition her parents brought from China; the pale Caucasian ghosts all around in the inexplicable land called America.

Maxine Hong Kingston's first book, a memoir-fantasy that mingles fact and dreams, is called The Woman Warrior: Memories of a Girlhood Among Ghosts. It crept on the scene last fall, with almost no advance ballyhoo and a small printing, and left reviewers stunned and admiring. "Brilliant," "thrilling," "a poem turned into a sword," they said. It has become a best seller and has just won the National Book Critics' Circle award as the best nonfiction book of 1976, upsetting the expected winner, Irving Howe's "World of Our Fathers."

Out of Snowstorm

"Who is Maxine Kingston?" a critic asked when her book came out. "Nobody at Knopf seems to know. They have never laid eyes on her." Last month (January) they did.

Mrs. Kingston journeyed from Honolulu for the awards ceremony and to see her family, parents and five younger brothers and sisters, scattered from California to South Carolina.

She came out of a snowstorm into her publisher's offices for an interview, a tiny thing with masses of black hair already threaded with white, muffled in scarf and cap and oversized coat. She is 4 feet 9 inches tall. "Charlotte Bronte was 4 feet 9," she said, drawing herself up proudly and with a grin.

The book is dedicated to her father and mother, who cannot read English.

"It is part of a product of over a quarter of a century of writing," Mrs. Kingston said. "I began writing when I was 9. The day was very clear to me. I was in fourth grade and all of a sudden this poem started coming out of me. On and on I went, oblivious to everything, and when it was over I had written 30 verses. It is a bad habit that doesn't go away."

It was also her escape, as were the fantasies that transformed her into Fa Mu Lan of her mother's "talk-stories" — the woman warrior who fought gloriously in battle and became a legend to the Chinese people centuries ago.

Mrs. Kingston's mother, Brave Orchid, leaps from the pages — infuriating, indomitable, full of admonitory tales. A doctor and midwife in China, she followed her husband years later to the United States in 1939, bearing six children after the age of 45. Her lot was drudgery in the laundry: "You have no idea how much I have fallen coming to America," she told her daughter.

Brave Orchid was often cruel to Maxine, a girl-child in an immigrant village culture, and worse, sullen, troubled and unruly. When her parents or neighbors would say, "Feeding girls is feeding cowbirds" she would thrash on the floor and scream so hard she could not stop. At her American school, she did not speak up in class for three years, and once bullied a smaller girl, who did not talk at all, shrieking "Talk! Talk!" at the bruised and sobbing child, as if a single word would free them both.

And yet the family was there, strong and rich in history and an imaginative language. Maxine "wanted to get away — to see what else there was. I had a great sense of curiosity. I would make friends with odd-looking kids with red hair. The Negroes — I wanted to get inside their houses. I would follow them home after school. I wanted to explore everything — everything," she said.

Poetic Images

Her working method when she was doing the book was to "talk-story" to herself, as her mother had done. "Sometimes I told sections to myself in Chinese and then would do it in English on the typewriter to get the rhythm and power. Americans are knocked out by Mao's poetic images, like 'running dog' or 'paper tiger.' We all talk like that, in colorful poetic images."

She said of Brave Orchid: "My mother is the creative one — the one with the visions and the stories to tell. I'm the technician. She's the great inspiration. I never realized it until I finished the book."

One of the book's climaxes comes when Maxine is in high school and lashes out at her mother in a brutal, liberating tirade in which she establishes her own, tremulous identity. "I'm going away . . . Do you know what the Teacher Ghosts say about me? They say I'm smart . . . I won't let you turn me into a slave or a wife . . . At college I'll have the people I like for friends."

She went off to Berkeley and immediately experienced "terrible culture shock. I went to class and was sick for two weeks after I got there. I didn't understand what anything was," she said. "I got terrible grades at first. Even my writing didn't save me."

The reason, she said, was that for the first time she did not have her big, vital, "exhilarating" family close around her, no matter what bad times there had been.

By her second year she had adapted and found college life exciting. Later she met and fell in love with Earl Kingston, a student who had spent a two-year Pacific hitch in the navy. They became involved in the peace movement. At Berkeley and thereafter, "we marched and we went to meetings. It was the most political time of our lives. I saw Vietnam as a war against Asians," she said. But the movement languished and sickened, and many of their friends turned to drugs.

In 1967, they decided to get away from the mainland with their son Joseph, then three years old. They moved to Hawaii.

Tomato Fields

Mrs. Kingston now teaches English and creative writing at the Mid-Pacific Institute in Honolulu. Earl Kingston is an actor in a touring company that puts on festivals and shows in parks and schools.

Mrs. Kingston has told her mother that she, too, "talks-story" in her book. Brave Orchid — who, at the age of 80, was queuing up with men to demand a day's work in the tomato fields — already has an idea for her daughter's next book. What is it?

"She says I ought to write about discrimination in hiring."

Blame it on Father

Last week, I discussed Philip Zeigler's new biography of Lord Melbourne, who as first prime minister of Queen Victoria played the roles of adviser, tutor and confidant to the lonely, impressionable young monarch. After two years Melbourne was supplanted in the queen's affections by her husband, the stolid, humorless Albert, who took over his wife's tutelage and earned her undying adoration. Albert filled Victoria's horizon; there was no affection to spare for others — and that included her unfortunate children.

The child who bore the greatest brunt of this unnatural mother was her heir, Albert Edward, known in the family as Bertie. For 59 of his 68 years Bertie was Prince of Wales, and he was reminded constantly by his mother of how far he fell short of the perfection of his dear, departed father.

The wonder is not that the child of such parents became an uncultured rake with an insatiable appetite for women, food and gambling, but that he retained his sanity and acquitted himself more than adequately during his brief reign.

The story of King Edward VII has been told often but never better, I think, than in The Royal Victorians, an intimate look at Edward, his family and his friends by the distinguished historian-biographer Christopher Hibbert.

The story of Edward is a story of wasted potential and the blame for this lies squarely on the shoulders of his father, behind whose hard exterior lay a heart of granite.

The very young Edward was an affectionate, ebullient boy; no mental giant, but of average intelligence. Albert considered the boy's life was too frivolous and ordained intensive education and a gaggle of tutors were hired for the purpose. Result: The over-taxed child became sullen and violent.

"The boy is being overworked," said his religious instructor. "Let him climb trees! Run! Leap! Row! Ride!" advised his French tutor. Nein, said Albert, what he needs is more work and more discipline. And Victoria agreed.

So Albert drew up a curriculum to ensure that the boy received lessons from eight in the morning until seven at night, six days a week. In addition to all subjects commonly taught in schools the prince was taught social economy, chemistry, algebra and geometry "as applied to gunnery, fortifications and the mechanical arts," English, French and German literature, map drawing, Latin, forestry, farming, political economy, riding, gymnastics, military exercises, etc., etc.

Albert further ordered that he was to be physically punished if he slacked; that he was to be worked each day until exhausted; and that his tutors were to present a daily report. As the report was always bad, Edward had to suffer the added torture of a daily parental lecture.

The result of this harsh regimen not surprisingly created a sense of frustration and inferiority which, combined with the strain of exhaustion, led the child to seek relief in outbursts of even greater violence. It also turned him against intellectual pursuits for the rest of his life.

A typical display of philistinism occurred when, as king, he instructed the librarian at Windsor to "pack up" his father's fine collection of books and "get rid of those not required." And to furnish the library at Sandringham he instructed a man from a bookshop to "fill the shelves with whatever is considered suitable for a country house."

I have dwelt at length on the early years because they dictated the pattern of Edward's life, which Hibbert faithfully and brilliantly records, using familiar material as well as such previously untapped sources as collections of official papers, letters and diaries of the king's contemporaries, records and memoirs of his many friends and mistresses, and even the dossiers of the Paris police.

EDWARD . . . wasted potential

Since Edward had a horror of boredom and inaction, the background of Hibbert's book is constantly changing — from race courses to casinos, from shooting parties to theatres, from picnics at Biarritz to the Pope's private apartments, from the drawing-room of this mistress to the drawing-room of another one, from staid official receptions to Parisian brothels.

The book is studded with illustrious names and important, as well as trivial happenings. And always at centre stage is Edward, his virtues acknowledged, his faults undisguised.

Considering his dismal early years under Victoria and Albert's iron rule he was, on balance, a good man. Despite his string of mistresses he was a kind husband and a generous and warmhearted person. Above all, he was a devoted and loving father.

When he died Queen Alexandra was grief-stricken, and his successor, George V, wrote in his diary: "I have lost my best friend. I never had a cross word with him in my life. I am heartbroken and overwhelmed with grief."

Perhaps the saddest aspect of Edward's life was that during his mother's lifetime he was never allowed to undertake duties of state for which he was eminently fitted. Albert, she told her ministers, didn't consider Bertie reliable. With nothing of importance to do he lived the life of a playboy, even getting himself involved in his friends' divorce scandals — thereby confirming Victoria's poor opinion of him.

When he became king he assumed his natural role as the central figure in European affairs and, single-handedly, maintained the uneasy peace through his remarkable diplomatic skills and his personal influence with the rulers of the day.

But it was too late. The monarch who was respected in every chancellery in Europe was forced in his own realm to witness the gradual erosion of the Crown's few remaining prerogatives. The man born to be a great king took unkindly to the role of puppet.

Christopher Hibbert has written a remarkably fine book. He's a writer of absolute certainty whose descriptions read like those of an eye-witness. He also has an exceptionally keen eye for the clash of character and the dramatic moment.

The Royal Victorians, as one would expect, is devoid of any mention of the unpleasant side of social conditions. It is simply a revealing and memorable biography of a complex character set against a background of the "upstairs" side of the "Upstairs/Downstairs" age to which Edward lent his name.

Sexual 'Shadow' Must Find Expression

By JULIAN REID

In these days of Feminism and Post-Feminism, of New Age Consciousness and the Human Potentials Movement, millions of men and women are being compelled to revaluate their long-held preconceptions about the nature and significance of their own sexuality.

Things used to be simple enough. Men must work and women weep; fate had ordained it so. One's personality was largely determined by the genetic happenstance of one's physiological gender. Male was male and female female and never the twain should meet — except, of course, in the honeyed sanctum of the bedchamber.

But there was a fly in the ointment, as C. G. Jung was among the first to point out. While the established gender-stereotypes supplied a solid foundation for personality-development, they did so at the expense of all those aspects of the individual's innate endowment which, in society's judgment, were inconsistent with the stereotype. Forced underground, these frustrated potentials fused to produce what Jung called "the Shadow" —an unconscious counter-personality that was invariably of the sex opposite to one's conscious self.

To the extent that one's natural capacities are relegated to this shadow-realm, one is psychologically maimed and incomplete. One's counter-self has its own imperative needs, which incessantly demand to be fulfilled — they can be denied, but they refuse to be silenced. Their insistent pressure on the conscious personality is a common source of depression and other, more serious mental disturbances; relief can come only when the long-suppressed Shadow is consciously acknowledged and allowed to express itself openly.

The traditional image for such a balanced personality, in which the masculine and feminine aspects co-exist harmoniously, is the sexually-ambivalent figure of the Androgyne. In Androgyny, Jungian analyst June Singer advances this image as the paradigm for a new theory of sexuality — one that does justice both to Jung's pioneering insights and to the recent scientific discovery that, physiologically speaking, we are all of us androgynes, our superficial sexual identities determined by a slight preponderance of one sex-hormone over its counter-balancing opposite.

Most of Dr. Singer's book is devoted to tracing the archetype of the androgyne as it manifests itself in the mythologies and spiritual disciplines of the Orient and our own Occidental past. She does an admirable job of teasing our relevant insights from the tangled skeins of Gnosticism, Kabbalism, alchemy and astrology, along with the meditative techniques of Taoism, Tantra and Kundalini Yoga.

Her later chapters are less satisfactory. Here she attempts to demonstrate the relevance of the archetypal Androgyne to the personal problems of contempory men and women — specifically, herself and a number of her patients. While her observations are insightful, they are mostly on a common-sense level that seems literally worlds away from the reverberating profundities of her earlier chapters.

Perhaps Singer herself realizes this, for she insists that the image of the Androgyne is not primarily a guide to conduct. Rather, it is a kind of psychic lens, through which opposing currents of psychic energy can be focussed and brought into harmony with each other. It is the concept itself that matters, instead of whatever practical conclusions may be drawn from it.

"The key to an understanding of androgyny," she explains, "is in the recognition that androgyny is not a state to be attained but, rather, an ideal to be sought and a way of life into which energy can be effectively directed." This way she sees embodied in T'ai Chi, that ancient Chinese physical-spiritual discipline in which every movement is permitted to develop spontaneously out of the harmonious interplay of the complementary energies of Yang and Yin — the Masculine and Feminine principles which coexist in all things.

"This is what androgyny is," Singer asserts: "the rhythmic interplay of Masculine and Feminine within the psyche of one individual. It is a way of moving through life as life moves through you."

For those seeking immediate, practical prescriptions for the business of living, Singer's book has little to offer. But those of a more philosophical turn of mind should find her message subtly invigorating. "One may ask, how do we become androgynous?" as she observes. "The answer to this question is that we do not become androgynous; we already are. It is necessary only to let ourselves be ourselves."

Two Legends: Valentino And Dietrich

By NORA HUTCHISON

Reading about the movies and the people who make them has always been as much a part of the pattern of star-gazing as the viewing itself, and for those of us who love the medium almost every aspect of its myth and reality holds a fascination. We're drawn to the literature of film to satisfy our curiosity, but because of the sudden proliferation of books about the movies there's a need to look carefully for the few that have been written for a genuine interest in the subject, and not just for a snatch at the pop-culture bucks.

At one extreme we encounter material that is no more than unabashed goggling, a sleazy film-mag paradise for voyeurs; at the other, the writing is thorough — occasionally even scholarly — in an effort to provide a sound critical perspective on a film, an actor or director, a period in the history of film. The middle ground is taken up with polished journalese — smartly-written appraisals that are often full of insight about the personalities, the art, and the business of the movies.

Film Journalism

Two recent additions to the category of highly polished film journalism are Alexander Walker's study of Rudolph Valentino, and Sheridan Morley's review of the career of Marlene Dietrich.

Walker is the film critic for the London Evening Standard. He brings a certain critical perspective to his portrait of Valentino but the distance of years, and a certain lack of investigative spirit on Walker's part, results in the book's curiously disinterested tone.

Morley is the drama critic and arts editor of Punch. He writes about Dietrich with great enthusiasm, drawing on his own interviews with her to heighten the sense of immediacy, and in so doing provides an engaging profile of a working legend.

Walker's study of Valentino disappoints because it is little more than a reworking of an earlier piece included in his rather scholarly investigation of the phenomenon of stardom, The Celluoid Sacrifice, published in 1970. In that work, Walker examined Valentino's extraordinary success as a popular screen star within the context of his time, the 20s, when emancipated women quite preversely chose to worship a figure who was so closely associated with the most unrelenting of male chauvinists — the infamous, fairy-tale sheik.

In his new book, however, Walker chooses to focus on a more potentially salable subject — the question of Valentino's sexuality, and its effects upon his carrer, the women he chose to associate with, and his public reputation as the "Great Lover." Valentino's history is there but Walker seems to rely more on secondhand stories about this actor of uncommon range and sensibility than on a proper investigation of his obscure sexual behavior.

In 1926, only seven years after he began his career in movies, Valentino died of peritonitis. Huge crowds turned out to see the coffin pass, more than 100 people were injured in a riot outside the funeral parlor, and many women reported that Valentino had spoken to them from the grave.

Valentino's career had moved terrifically fast. In five years, he had gone from bit parts to the position as the screen's greatest lover.

Playing the hero in his first success, The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse (1921). Valentino introduced the idea of an impetuous, unrelenting lover. Later that year, in The Sheik, the character was fully realized.

As the darkly handsome Arab, he captures a "proud and spirited girl" and threatens her with a "fate worse than death." Her 'fate' is postponed through, when the Sheik is wounded. In the final scenes he is nursed back to health, and gradually domesticated. Women adored Valentino's portrayal of the barbaric hero as sexual weapon subdued. and they crowded movie theatres across the country.

Fantasy World

The film's banality is easy to mock but the female viewers' credulous acceptance of the plot and its hero explains Valentino's passionate following. The fantasy of Valentino's world was recreated every night by millions of dreaming women. During the day they may have been fully in command of their own lives, but in nocturnal visions they saw themselves kidnapped, enslaved and then appreciated, loved and wedded to a Valentino-like creature. The scandal sheets recounting his shady beginnings as a cafe dancer, petty thief and flexible sexual opportunist were forgotten by his swooning followers.

DIETRICH . . . a cool style

VALENTINO . . . passionate following

The virility he displayed on-screen however was not, according to Walker, rerun for his two wives. His first marriage to dancer Jean Acker was reportedly over in a few hours, after she shut her door in his face on their wedding night. As that marriage dissolved, Valentino fell under the influence of two women who would vie for control of his career — his second wife, Natasha Rambova, a brilliant production designer, and June Mathis, the writer at MGM who had scripted The Four Horsemen, and had insisted that he star in it.

Both these women, as well as Jean Acker, were part of a circle which included the exotic star Alla Nazimova, reputedly a lesbian. Walker speculated that their influence on Valentino, including their rule that "sex should be subservient to art" derived directly from the Nazimova connection.

Effeminate Dandy

In any case, the gossip at the time assumed that Rambova was responsible for drawing out Valentino's homosexual tendencies, and after a series of "art" pictures which she and Mathis persuaded him to make, in which he displayed himself as an effeminate dandy — Monsieur Beaucaur (1924), A Sainted Devil (1924), and Cobra (1924) — his followers began to wonder if, indeed, the press reports about his use of a pink powder puff were more fact than rumor.

It was only on the eve of his death, as The Son of the Sheik opened across the country, that Valentino's screen reputation, at least, was vindicated. The sado-erotic theme of the film, in which the son of the sheik kidnaps a girl he suspects of having played him false, pushed the persona of the Great Lover to its extreme, and tended to erase any of the doubts that had plagued his fans. His last film, Walker notes, "had the definitive quality of an obituary notice and played a major part in the necrophilia that followed him to his grave."

In spite of Walker's revelation, Valentino continues to remain a vague figure, seemingly perplexed by the ambivalent eroticism of his films. The numerous photographs that enlarge on the narrative show us the star as a clothes horse, as an elment in Rambova's set designs, as a sulking poseur, but instead of providing additional clues to his character, they tend to reinforce the contemporary view of Valentino as a campy, decadent figure. Unfortunately, Walker's cooly analytical study of the figure who established the screen myth of the "Great Lover" gives us no reason to think otherwise.

Sheridan Morley's profile of Dietrich, however, is a homage to a "formidable old German lady in a remarkable state of repair." Unlike Valentino, Dietrich knew her strengths and weaknesses, and Morley writes with admiration about the way in which she has parleyed her talent into a lifetime profession.

Since the early 1930s, Dietrich has personified the concept of a star. As a film actress, as an entertainer of the troops during the Second World War, and as a cabaret performer, her presence has commanded immediate and complete attention. Jean Cocteau once observed that the sound of her name effected a sensation in him that crossed somewhere between the brush of a caress and the "crack of a whip." And indeed, her presence on-screen and on-stage has affected many of her audiences similarly.

Dietrich made seven great films in her career — The Blue Angel (1930), Morocco (1930), Dishonored (1931), Shanghai Express (1932), Blonde Venus (1932), The Scarlet Empress (1934), and The Devil Is A Woman (1935) — all with a Svengali-like director, Josef Von Sternberg. Between 1929 and 1935, she and Von Sternberg created a screen character who, however she appeared—as chanteuse, cigarette girl, spy or queen—was a woman of extraordinary dimension.

Dietrich's characters were unique in an era of easily described good-girls and bad-girls. Whatever the persona, she was realistic, even fatalistic; she understood and accepted human weakness, poverty, folly, perversity and the need for redemption. She was not invulnerable to love, either, although her lovers were not often the ideal romantic heroes but their elders.

Audiences of both sexes responded to Dietrich's apparent removal from sexual categorization. On-screen and off, she had the style and self-assurance to parody the conventional notions of sexual role-playing. Dietrich and her characters wore male attire and gained entry to their society by participating in primarily male activities as if to challenge their code. Yet, for her admirers, she remaind the quintessential female.

Gaiety, Despair

The films Dietrich and Von Sternberg made together are still extraordinary cinema events. Nothing since has rivaled the extravagant artifice of Dietrich's make-believe world in which she ran the gamut of experience from decadence to austerity, tenderness to cruelty, gaiety to despair. In the years after 1935 she made another 24 films, mostly appearing in cameo roles like the gypsy-dark fortune teller in Orson Welles' Touch of Evil. The move she made from film to cabaret was her method of hurdling the problem of approaching middle-age and the indignity of supporting roles. It was Dietrich's means of proud survival in one of the toughest of industries.
